"THE FINANCIAL SYSTEM.—There has been appointed a Financial Commission, composed of citizens thoroughly qualified, to prepare a model municipal system of finance, dealing with tax collections, arrears of personal taxes, additional sources of local taxation, the lightening of burdens upon real estate, the constitutional limitation of indebtedness, and the keeping and stating of accounts.

"The improvements resulting from the labors of this important commission, in their beneficial effect upon every public interest, will prove as great a service as has ever been rendered to the people of this municipality.

"WATER SUPPLY.—By the force and persistency of his demands our De cratic executive compelled a reluc partisan Legislature to authorize the quisition of additional sources of w supply, and he has appointed a W Commission of eminent citizens, wh under plans already completed, invol an expenditure of a hundred mi dollars, can be relied upon to fur a water supply adequate for every mestic and industrial need of our fu city.

High Pressure Water Service.

"Increased protection to prop against the constant menace of fir the downtown business districts wil obtained from the projected high pres water service, to the greater sec of the vast mercantile interests of city.

"THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—The H Department has relieved suffering scientific improvements in the city's pital service and by the establish of sanitariums for the treatment of unfortunate who are afflicted with tu culosis. Sanitary conditions throug the city have been greatly impr through the vigilance of the health ficials, the effective supervision of streets, and the intelligent and assid management of our parks, resultin the lowest death rate that New City has ever known, and an entire dom from epidemics.

"TAX RATE.—These great achievements, of such incalculable be to all the people of our city, have accomplished so economically and such scrupulous regard for the inte of our heavily burdened taxpayers the tax rate for the present year been materially reduced, while the crease in property assessments has kept below 4 per cent.

"DOCKS.—We favor the mainter of existing docks and the buildin new ones ample in extent to meet al requirements of oversea trade, as e tial to the continuance of New Y position as the commercial metropol the New World. We also favor su reduction in the dock charges, im by the Fusion administration, as relieve trade and invite, rather tha pel, foreign commerce, while safeg ing the City Treasury.

"MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.—Mu pal ownership of important public uti has long been accepted Democratic trine, and has been repeatedly re mended in Democratic State and platforms. The most serious obstac its realization has been the reckless corrupt granting by State Legisla of perpetual franchises without con sation to our city and in disregard interests and charter rights. The ent and previous Democratic admini tions, in the face of such difficulties restricted by the constitutional debt have municipalized many public uti with a just regard for private right volved. Public ownership is no long campaign catch word, but a principl plied and in operation in this, the g est of American cities.

What Has Been Accomplished.

"The ferry to Staten Island has bought, and with the equipment dock accommodations for which prov has been made, the Borough of Rich has been brought into such close ass tion with the metropolitan centre as permit even the humblest of our citi to enjoy there a comfortable and accessible home.

"The principle of municipal owner will be amplified by the purchase operation of such other ferries as needful for the safe and rapid transp tion of the thousands who have in the more remote sections of the se boroughs.

"Its further extension is already anteed. One electric plant for lig the Williamsburg Bridge and its proaches is about completed. For other, illuminating all our public st parks, and public buildings, $600,000 been appropriated for the purchase site, in accordance with accepted involving a total expenditure of $7,50

"An intelligent, conservative, an sponsible Democratic administration be intrusted with the continued ap tion and the ultimate triumph upon lines of the principle of municipal trol of public utilities.

Demands Limited Franchises.

"We demand that the franchise w of this city be jealously guarded, and demn the granting of perpetual franc as against sound public policy. Li franchises only should be granted future and upon terms most advanta to the public, embodying rigid re ments for their operation for public fit and convenience, with the mos fective and cheapest service possible, a close supervision and systematic lation by the municipality.

"REPUBLICAN TRICKERY.—We nounce the perfidy of the Repu Legislature in dealing with the mea intended to afford the people of this a substantial reduction in the pri illuminating and fuel gas, and con the discreditable jugglery indulged defeat and defraud our citizens in enforcement of their just demands in regard. Refusing to consider the lation on this question, introduced urged by Democratic representatives plea was urged that as the responsi rested upon the Republican Part the success or failure of all legis the redress of this public grievance s be had under Republican auspices. when excuses for delay in dealing the subject were no longer available, a two-thirds majority in the Repu Senate, it permitted the only redu bill voted upon to be defeated. We trast with this duplicity the sincere consistent efforts of Mayor McClella public declaration and personal sol tion, to secure for the people of this a reasonable measure of relief from excessive charges now paid by their illuminating and fuel gas.

Injustice to the City.

"We denounce the Republican Party not only for its refusal to meet the just demands of this municipality, but for its persistent and bitter hostility to this constituency as evidenced by its legislative acts.

"In the imposition of taxes it has been grossly unjust to our city.

"A system of indirect taxation has been resorted to, with the double purpose of concealing the enormous and criminal extravagance in State administration and of affording an opportunity to so manipulate the taxes imposed that they will apply only to such property and to such business interests as will compel from the people of New York City a contribution so excessive and disproportionate as to deserve the name of political blackmail.

"While thus extorting from our citizens annually a sum approaching twenty millions of dollars in mortgage tax, inheritance tax, corporation tax, stock transfer tax, savings bank tax, and liquor tax, in addition to the 68 per cent. of the State direct tax, they restrict our representation in the State Legislature to 40 per cent., and in the distribution of school moneys allow us less than 33 per cent.

"We protest against the extreme partisan favoritism which plunders the people of this city in order that Republican communities may be exempt from their share of the public burdens, as the price of their partisan adherence.

Election Bureau Condemned.

"Our local Legislature has been despoiled of its charter rights and divested of the legitimate powers conferred upon it by the people, through the influence of foreign corporations with the Republican State management. The infamous State Bureau of Elections has had its vicious powers increased to perfect its operation as an annex to the Republican machine, in order that corrupt voters may be safely bribed by Republican workers, and honest citizens harassed and intimidated by them with impunity, under the extraordinary powers conferred by a statute which stigmatizes this community as unfit for the same control of its local elections as is conceded to every other municipality in this State.

"We denounce the enactment of the Mortgage Tax Law as a measure aimed at the prosperity of our city. The recent general increase of rents in this city is but one of the evil results of this measure of double taxation.

"We condemn the Republican Legislature for its refusal to repeal the Savings Bank Tax law, levying toll upon the meagre savings of the poor, as a betrayal of the people's trust and a deliberate and dishonest violation of party pledges.

Eight-Hour Law Approved.

"We favor and commend to the voters of this city the proposed Constitutional amendment making more effective the eight-hour aw and other labor laws by extending their application to contracts with municipalities.

"With this statement of the record of the present Democratic administration and this declaration of our position upon all municipal questions involved in the coming campaign, we confidently appeal to the voters of Greater New York, irrespective of past political preferences, for their support of the candidates here nominated, to secure the continuance of the present responsible, economical, clean, and efficient management of our city affairs."

REPUBLICANS STILL HAVE NO CANDIDATE

Confer Six Hours and Can't Decide on a Man for Mayor.

ASPINALL WOULDN'T HAVE IT

The Judge Says He's Not Taking Any Peddled Nominations—Convention Comes To-night.

The Republican leaders conferred for six hours last night and couldn't agree on or find a man to run for Mayor against McClellan. They say, however, that they'll do it to-day. The City Convention at Carnegie Hall comes to-night.

The six-hour conference was at the Republican Club, and ended early this morning. Those present were State Chairman Odell, Chairman Halpin, Excise Commissioner Edward H. Healy, George W. Wanmaker, George Cromwell, Edward Lauterbach, Samuel S. Strasbourger, William H. Ten Eyck, and Thomas L. Hamilton. Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff was summooed in the afternoon from Syracuse. He arrived at 8:30 o'clock, and represented Brooklyn at the conference.

Man after man was taken up and either shelved as unavailable or marked "To be taken up again." The nomination was thrust at Mr. Woodruff again. It didn't tempt him any more than before. Mr. Cromwell was discussed and then marked "To be taken up again." Senator Elsberg was talked of for the hundredth time. Lieut. Gov. Bruce was considered and reconsidered, but, as with all the others, without result.

County Judge Joseph Aspinall of Brooklyn crushed some big hopes by refusing, with some asperity, to run for Mayor. Chairman Halpin had declared that the Kings Judge would head the ticket. He said he expected to clinch the whole thing yesterday afternoon. Before 10 o'clock, however, Judge Aspinall was out with a statement in which he said he would have none of it. Mr. Halpin was disconcerted.

Judge Aspinall came to Manhattan after issuing his statement and had a long talk with Chairman Odell. He told the Chairman straight from the shoulder that he wouldn't have the nomination so far as he was concerned. If Chairman Odell offered any inducements, they didn't induce. Meanwhile, Col. Dady was very much disturbed. It is said that he declared that the Judge had thrown him.

Here is the Judge's statement:

"I have not the slightest intention of accepting the Republican nomination for Mayor. I have never considered the matter.

"There are many reasons why I should decline the nomination. In the first place I've been out of politics for ten years. I was elected County Judge and served one term. I was re-elected for a second term, with an increased majority, and have two years more to serve.

"I may have some elements of strength in Kings County. If I have there is no reason why the nomination should have been peddled around to Justice Gaynor, Mr. Riis, Gen. Porter, Mr. Schieren, and Timothy L. Woodruff before it was offered to me.

"I have an ambition, as every man has, but it does not lead me to seek the Mayor's chair. A seat on the Supreme bench would be much more in keeping with my aim. I feel it my duty to serve the people in the position to which they elected me, not once, but twice, and I propose to do so.

"There are no strings to my decision. Under no circumstances would I accept the Mayoralty nomination. I have an engagement to meet Mr. Odell and other Republican leaders at the Republican Club later this afternoon. I will repeat to them just what I have said to you. I intend to serve out my term on the Kings County Bench."

After breakfast to-day Chairman Odell, Chairman Halpin, and all the other leaders who have had a hand in the talks and conferences will again gather at the Republican Club or the Fifth Avenue Hotel and keep on trying to find candidates for Mayor, Controller, and President of the Board of Aldermen.

So much time was given yesterday to discussion of candidates that little or no attention was paid to the programme for the convention to-night. Both Lieut. Gov. Bruce and ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff have been talked of for the Chairmanship.

FUSION IN BROOKLYN.

W. A. Prendergast Recommended for the Borough Presidency.

At a meeting in the Assembly Hall in Pierrepont Street, Brooklyn, last night, representatives of the various anti-Tammany organizations of that borough met to discuss the make-up of the county and borough ticket.

After much debate it was agreed to recommend to the local county and borough convention that William A. Prendergast, the anti-Odell Republican of the Twelfth Assembly District, be named for Borough President. It was also decided to recommend to the convention that Coroner Michael J. Flaherty of the Municipal Ownership League, and Frederick Heitmann of the German-American League, have places on the ticket.

A sub-committee of the Fusion conferrees will meet to-day with the Executive Committee of the Republican organization to discuss finally the make-up of the local ticket.

Prendergast in the Saratoga Convention last year, speaking for Woodruff, made a memorable attack on Odell.

WHERE IS MR. HEARST?

Committee After Him with a Mayoralty Crown, and He's Gone.

Up to 1 o'clock this morning a report of the labors of the committee to wait on William R. Hearst and urge him to accept the Municipal Ownership nomination for Mayor was not to be had at any political headquarters. At the headquarters of the Hearst interests it was declared that the Congressman had gone to a wedding and that his whereabouts were unknown. Max F. Ihmsen, his aide, was also not to be found. The Municipal Ownership quarters, in Fourth Avenue, were deserted.

The committee of six started out to find Mr. Hearst early in the afternoon, but it was reported they had been unsuccessful in their search up to 7 o'clock. If they found the Congressman not a word of it got out. And whether he accepted or rejected the nomination, if they tendered it, wasn't shouted out from any housetop.

Judge Samuel Seabury had this to say before the committee started to find Mr. Hearst:

"I never consented, and never shall consent, to be on an independent ticket under any circumstances. I wish all further mention of my name in this connection would cease. But I desire to register my earnest support of a movement in which protest is made against the bonding of this great city for the benefit of an oligarchy of exploiters of the people.

"The old party organizations are controlled by a few selfish men, who are in the background, and who debauch public life, whose sinister power is used wholly for their own profit and self-aggrandizement. These men manipulate franchises and industries, and by the use of vast sums derived from the people are able to control politicians, dictate nominations, influence elections, and make representative bodies merely instruments of their will. Such a system is a mockery of true democracy."

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 5.—John Johnson, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, who was defeated two years ago by William H. Belcher, was renominated to-night by the Democratic Convention.

DEFEAT SURE, WON'T RUN; DE BRAGGA OF QUEENS

Borough Convention Fails to Nominate, and Adjourns.

BERMEL DEAL FELL THROUGH

Republican Leaders Fail to Whip Delegates Into Line—Hiss the Man They Did Choose.

After a stormy session, which lasted six hours, the Borough Republican Convention in Queens adjourned last night without naming a candidate for Borough President. The Fusion slate, which had been made up early in the week, was smashed to flinders, the delegates casting aside their committee's report, which was in favor of nominating Cassidy's Commissioner of Public Works, Joseph Bermel, and stampeding for a straight-out Republican.

They then chose ex-Sheriff Joseph H. De Bragga, and a committee carried him into the hall. Then while the delegates were waving flags, which they had hurriedly purchased, and cheering De Bragga he climbed on the platform and declared that he didn't believe in playing to the galleries.

"We all know we are going down to defeat, so I decline," he added.

Immediately the convention turned upon the man they had just cheered and hissed at him.

The convention was called to order in Colonial Hall in Jamaica, and organized with ex-Judge B. Frank Wood as Chairman. The Jeffersonian Democracy had previously agreed to indorse the Republican candidate for District Attorney on condition that the Republicans indorsed the Jeffersonians' candidate for Borough President, Mr. Bermel.

A committee consisting of ten delegates, two from each ward in the borough, had been appointed to confer with the Jeffersonians with a view to fusing, and when the committee came into the convention hall they reported in favor of nominating Bermel, who for the past four years had been training with the Democratic leader, Borough President Cassidy.

A minority report was made by John A. Sinclair, who shouted:

"I charge Bermel with being dishonest in his dealings. He stood by and did nothing while others were doing dishonest acts, and we cannot afford to fuse on him, a man who trained with Cassidy and who never did anything during his term as a city official except draw his salary. I believe this convention should name an out-and-out Republican."

"Yes, yes," shouted the delegates in chorus, and when a vote was taken it was seen that the committee's report had been rejected by a vote of 64 to 60.

Ex-Sheriff De Bragga was nominated unanimously as the candidate. A committee was named to find him and bring him into the hall, and when they carried him up the aisle the delegates cheered and shouted. Some of the delegates hurriedly purchased flags and passed them around the hall, and when De Bragga got on the platform the crowd again cheered and shouted, "He's a genuine Republican."

It was then that the ex-Sheriff declined the nomination. Catcalls and hoots greeted his declination, and the flags stopped waving as De Bragga hurried from the hall.

The convention then adjourned until Saturday night, as did the Republican County Convention.

Women's Queen Quality shoes.

QUEENLY in quality, queenly in style, and a mere peasant in price. Years ago the house of Thomas G. Plant & Co. took the stand that 3.00 and 3.50 was enough to pay for a pair of shoes; that the price would buy all the essential attributes to high class footwear. The world-wide reputation the Queen Quality Shoes for women have achieved proves that the manufacturers were right.

Queen Quality Shoes possess all the characteristics of the finest bench-made shoes—workmanship, material and foot-fitting qualities.

We show seventy-five individual styles, which reduce shoe fitting to a science—a fit that a shoemaker cannot excel. The making of the lasts for the Queen Quality Shoe is under the direction of an artist, who creates an individual style for each shaped foot.

The Queen Quality Shoes give a piquant shapeliness to the foot—a stylish contour that only a high-priced bench shoe can give.

There's stability and lasting worth in every pair—honest and painstaking workmanship, that gives each pair a sterling worth; that makes every wearer of Queen Quality Shoes a permanent advocate of these high-grade shoes at these low prices.

$127,000 IN A YEAR FOR YOUNG M'CURDY

From the Mutual in Salary and in Commissions.

DR. THEBAULT GOT $147,000

He Is President McCurdy's Son-in-Law—Mutual Gave $2,500 to Republican Congressional Committee.

Turning from the affairs of the New York Life Insurance Company, temporarily, Counsel Charles E. Hughes of the insurance investigating committee, ran his probe deep into the affairs of the Mutual Life yesterday with these results:

From the testimony of Robert H. McCurdy, son of the President of the Mutual, and Charles H. Raymond, for many years the general agent of the metropolitan district, it appeared that the younger McCurdy had been receiving an income for the last fifteen years ranging from $90,000 to $127,000 a year. This he receives under an arrangement whereby he gets a percentage on the commissions of the foreign business of the Mutual, which he organized; he also got an interest in the profits of the Raymond agency until a few years ago. He has also received a salary of $30,000 a year as general manager of the company.

The firm of Raymond & Co. helped the relatives of President McCurdy a great deal. When Robert H. McCurdy left the partnership in 1893, Dr. Louis A. Thebault, President McCurdy's son-in-law, was admitted to the firm, and inside of four years was receiving more than $50,000 a year from his share in the business. In 1904, Mr. Thebault's share amounted to $147,687. This interest, representing at present three-quarters of the profits of the firm, was developed by as interesting a set of insurance agents' contracts as have come to light for a long time. The principal facts in regard to the commission arrangement existing between the Raymond firm and the Mutual Life were brought out at the hearing yesterday.

Mr. Hughes also had on the witness stand Warren F. Thummell, the legal representative of the Mutual who has handled the legislative interests of the company in a large part of the country for several years. Mr. Thummell told the Armstrong committee that in the last campaign he personally had paid $2,500 of the Mutual's money to Chairman Babcock of the Republican Congressional committee. Mr. Thummell said he had heard that the other great life insurance companies either had contributed to this fund or were to be asked to contribute. The reason advanced by Mr. Babcock, as Mr. Thummell remembered it, for asking these contributions was that there was some danger of the election of a Democratic House, and consequently a possibility of tariff and other legislation "likely to disturb business."

No Payments to Legislators.

Mr. Thummell denied that he had ever paid any money to any legislator in any State and that he had ever authorized the payment of such money or consulted with any one about such a payment. He also said that no legislator with whom he had ever come in contact had at any time asked him for money or other consideration in connection with pending bills.

The rise of Robert H. McCurdy in the service of the Mutual Life Insurance Company was one of the most rapid that has come to light in connection with a relative of a high official of any company since the Armstrong committee began its sessions. The younger McCurdy testified that after his graduation from college, in 1881, and a six-month vacation in Europe, he had entered the office of Charles H. Raymond, who was the General Agent for the Mutual in the metropolitan district. Mr. McCurdy was then twenty-two years old. He became a clerk at $1,000 a year. This salary was continued for one year. Then Mr. McCurdy became a partner in the business of Raymond & Co., with a half interest in the business. He was a little hazy yesterday about the amounts of money which he received from this connection, but it was shown in detail how much his receipts were after 1886, when Mr. McCurdy was sent abroad to organize the foreign business of the Mutual Life.

The Younger McCurdy's Income.

This table shows Mr. McCurdy's income from commissions on the foreign business of the Mutual from 1885 to date, his receipts from his interests in the firm of Raymond & Co. from 1889 to date, and the salary which he has received as General Manager of the Mutual in the last three years:

How McCurdy Got It.

In explanation of the arrangement by which he had enjoyed his interest in the foreign business of the Mutual Life, Mr. McCurdy made a long statement at the beginning of his testimony. He said that in 1886, when he was 27 years old, he was appointed organizer and general agent of the new foreign deparment of the Muual Life under an arrangement whereby he should receive a commission of 5 per cent. on all of the business done outside of the United States and Canada. The growth of the foreign business of the Mutual, Mr. McCurdy said, was beyond all expectations, and accordingly, after a few years, he voluntarily suggested to the company that his commission of 5 per cent. be reduced. This was done in 1888, but again the business grew, and on his suggestion in 1891 a further reduction was made. There was another reduction in 1897, and eventually an arrangement was made whereby Mr. McCurdy was to receive 1 per cent. on all the renewals of the foreign business.

He was recalled to this country to become a General Manager of the Mutual in 1903 at a salary of $30,000, and thereupon voluntarily relinquished his interest in the foreign commission except in the renewals of policies written under his last commission contract with the company. This amount, which appears in the table, was $91,571 last year. Mr. McCurdy estimated that $80,000 would be the amount this year, and he said that it would decrease from year to year until it finally disappeared. He emphasized in his testimony the fact that he had voluntarily relinquished the rights to the various commissions which he had enjoyed on the foreign business of the Mutual when, from time to time, a new arrangement was made at a lower rate of commission. Thereupon Mr. Hughes brought out the fact that the contract which Mr. McCurdy had as Foreign Manager was a year-to-year contract which could be revoked at any time by the company. The commission arrangement on the foreign business was as follows: 1886-8, 5 per cent. on all business in the foreign field; 1888-91, 5 per cent. on first year's business, 3 per cent. on renewals, 2½ per cent. on annuities; 1891-7, 2½ per cent. on first year's business, 2 per cent. on renewals for the first five years, 1 per cent. on renewals for five years thereafter; 1897-1903, 1 per cent. on renewals for five years.

Mr. McCurdy testified that from 1886, when he went abroad, until 1893, when he entered the firm of Raymond & Co., he made over to the metropolitan General Agent under his partnership agreement one-half of the money he received from commissions on foreign business. The decreasing interest in the receipts of the firm of Raymond & Co. from 1893 he explained by saying that those receipts represented his interests in the renewals for six years of the policies written while he was a member of the firm. The comparatively small amounts of the last few years are the results of delayed premiums and premiums on reinstated policies.

Dr. Thebault's Profits.

Dr. Louis A. Thebault married the daughter of President McCurdy of the Mutual Life in the middle 80's. When a young man, about as old as Robert McCurdy, Dr. Thebault entered the office of the general agent of the Mutual at Newark, and after a few years was put in charge of "the executive special agency of the company," managing in that capacity a corps of special agents, who traveled about the country soliciting large risks.

In 1893, when Robert McCurdy ended his connection with the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., Dr. Thebault was taken in there with a one-fourth interest which he retained until January, 1899.

Then his interest became one-half of the profits of the firm, and continued thus until 1902, when the Mutual discontinued the arrangement which it had previously with Charles Raymond and made Dr. Thebault general agent for the metropolitan district and Mr. Raymond managing agent. At this time Dr. Thebault came into two-thirds of the profits of Raymond & Co., and the following year was slated for three-quarters of the profits of the Raymond business. Mr. Raymond said on the stand yesterday that this change in the division of profits was made at his request, as his health rendered it necessary that he should gradually retire from active business. Mr. Raymond's present contract with the Mutual will end at the close of this year.

How Dr. Thebault Got It.

Following is a table of the amounts that Dr. Thebault has received from the Raymond firm from first-year premiums and renewal premiums from 1893, when he joined it, to date:

Year.	1st Yr. Prems.	Renewals.	Total.
1894	.....	2,082	2,082
1895	21,334	10,059	31,393
1896	39,188	17,680	56,869
1897	42,970	20,847	63,817
1898	22,955	40,317	63,272

1901	29,141	68,693	97,834
1902	40,097	87,361	127,458
1903	49,246	90,208	139,455
1904	48,000	99,687	147,687

Another table showed the profits of the Raymond firm under its contracts for the company from commissions on first year premiums and renewal premiums from 1896 to date. This was but a part of the information which Mr. Hughes had asked for, and at a subsequent hearing figures will be submitted showing the profits of Raymond & Co. from the time when Robert H. McCurdy entered the company. That table will make it possible to tell the exact income of the son of President McCurdy from the time that he entered the service of the company as far as his direct receipts were concerned. It is understood that the younger McCurdy will be examined later as to what share, if any, he may have had in the profits of syndicates in which the Mutual had a part, and that similar questions will be asked of Dr. Thebault.

This is the table of firm profits of Charles H. Raymond & Co. from 1896 to date:

Year.	1st Yr. Prems.	Renewals.	Total.
1897	74,808	115,442	190,250

Raymond & Co.'s Contracts.

Closely connected with these tables are the contracts that the Raymond firm had with the Mutual Life. They were brought out on the witness stand yesterday from 1888 down to the present time. They may be summarized, according to the account given by Mr. Raymond from the original paper, thus:

From 1888 to 1891: The firm got from 45 to 65 per cent. of first year premiums, according to the length of the policy, with 10 per cent. on the renewals for the first five years in the case of the lower commission policies and 10 per cent. on the renewals for the first ten years in the case of the policies bearing higher commission. The firm paid the soliciting agents 30 to 50 per cent. for first year premiums, according to the term of the policy, with 5 per cent. of the first five years renewal premiums in all cases.

In 1891: The firm got from 30 to 70 per cent. of first year premiums, according to policies, and 5 per cent. of the renewal premiums of the first six years. It paid its soliciting agents from 35 to 65 per cent. of first year premiums and four annual commissions of 5 per cent. on renewals in a case of low commission policies, and six annual commissions of 5 per cent. on renewals in the case of the higher commission policies.

In 1892: A letter from Dr. Gillett, who was then General Manager of the Mutual, was introduced saying that the confidential circular of agents regarding the semi-centennial offer of the company of this year was revoked as applying to the Raymond firm and special offer made whereby Charles H. Raymond & Co. was to get on twenty-year deferred dividend policies 10 per cent. of the second year's premium and 7½ per cent. of the premium of the next six years. On fifteen-year deferred dividend policies it was to get 70 per cent. of the first year's premium, 10 per cent. of the second year's premium, and 7½ per cent. of the renewal premiums of the next six years. On ten-year deferred dividend policies the firm was to get 55 per cent. of the first year's premium, 10 per cent. of the second year's premium, and 7½ per cent. of the premium the next six years. On five-year deferred dividend policies the firm was to get 35 per cent. of the first year's premium and 7½ per cent. of the premiums of the next six years. A bonus offer accompanied this contract providing that 5 per cent. would be paid on the premiums of all business over $4,000,000 and 10 per cent. on the premiums on business over $5,000,000 for the year. It did not appear what arrangement existed between the firm and its agents in the Mutual semi-centennial year.

In 1893: The firm got from 40 to 65 per cent. of first year's premiums, with 20 per cent. of second-year premiums on fifteen and twenty year deferred dividend policies, and 20 per cent. of second-year premiums on ten-year deferred dividend policies and 10 per cent. of third-year premiums on ten to twenty year policies was paid, and 7½ per cent. of renewal premiums for the next five years. Five-year policies yielded the firm 40 per cent. of the first year's premiums and 7½ per cent. of renewal premiums for the balance of the time. A bonus offer of $1.25 per $1,000 insurance written on all business over $3,000,000 for the year accompanied this, and a bonus of $2.50 per $1,000 of insurance on all business over $6,000,000. The firm allowed to its soliciting agents from 35 to 70 per cent. of first year's premiums and 5 per cent. of renewal premiums for six years.

In 1895: The firm's contract reverted to the form in force in 1893.

In 1896: A regular form of printed contracts was employed this year for the first time, providing for the payment of from 40 to 70 per cent. of first year's premiums to the firm, with 10 per cent. of renewal premiums for four years and 5 per cent. for renewal premiums for the next three. There were, however, several conditions added which did not appear in the regular contract; these provided that the firm should get 10 per cent. as issue on twenty and fifteen year policies, and 5 per cent. additional on ten-year policies from the first year's premiums; also 10 per cent. of renewals for five years and 5 per cent. of the six-year renewal premiums, which was subsequently modified to 10 per cent. of renewal premiums for six years. There was also a bonus offer of $3.50 per thousand on business in excess of $1,725,000 for the quarter ending with March, $2,875,000 for the quarter ending with June, $2,875,000 for the quarter ending in September, and $4,025,000 for the quarter ending with December. This was subsequently changed so that the bonus would apply to the excess over $4,000,000 for the first six months and to the excess over $6,000,000 for the second six months. This form of contract remained in force until 1903, the allowance to soliciting agents, however, being changed in 1900 so that they got 75 per cent. of first year's payments on twenty-year dividend policies and 5 per cent. each, and 65 per cent. of first year's dividends on fifteen-year policies with a similar renewal commission, having the alternative, however, of taking one renewal commission of 10 per cent. in either case.

In 1903: In this year the Mutual assumed a closer jurisdiction over the business of C. H. Raymond & Co., limiting it in certain respects, but paying 9½ per cent. on first-year premiums up to $17,000,000 gross business, with 5 per cent. of renewal commissions for six years, and of first-year premiums on business in excess of $17,000,000 and 3 per cent. for renewal commissions for six years. From this the firm deducted its expenses, including an allowance of $13,000 for rents of its principal offices, but the company assumed the rents of various branch offices which the firm maintained previously, allowing, exclusive of the commissions, $127,000 to be expended in extensions, and guaranteeing that the business would amount to $17,000,000 a year.

Mr. Raymond on the stand yesterday testified that he didn't like this last arrangement as well as those that had preceded. He said that practically the entire business of his office was conducted on the deferred dividend basis, but complained that he was obliged to meet the competition of a man whom the company employed to walk around the corridors of the Mutual Life Building and steer any possible applicants for policies into the main offices of the company, where they could take out policies directly.

Warren F. Thummell was on the stand nearly all the morning session yesterday. He had been describing his duties in connection with various matters of legislation. At length Mr. Hughes asked him if he had occasion from time to time to know of contributions made from the funds of the Mutual for political purposes. Mr. Thummell said the matter did not come under his attention.

"Do you happen to know," asked Mr. Hughes, "of a contribution made to the National Congressional Committee?"

"Yes, Sir," was the reply.

"When was that made?"

"It was made last year."

"To what amount?"

"To $2,500."

"To which party?"

"To the Republican Party."

"Also of the Democratic Party?"

"Well, that one was not."

"Was there any other one that was?"

"I don't know anything about it. I don't know anything about the Democratic Committee."

Mr. Thummell said that the contribution was made by him personally in cash to the Chairman of the Republican Committee, Mr. Babcock of Wisconsin, and that he had got the money from the cashier of the Mutual on the authority of Vice President Grannis of the company.

Q.—Did you initiate the transaction, or was Mr. Granniss the one who told you to do it? A.—Neither one. They came to us—came to me and said they would like to see Mr. Granniss, and I took them up and introduced them, and after some talk they went away.

Q.—Were you present during the conversation? A.—How?

Q.—Were you present during that conversation? A.—Why, yes, I was there.

Q.—What was the ground upon which the contribution was suggested? A.—Well, the general ground was that there was great danger of a Democratic House, and that that would probably result in tariff agitation and other legislation attempted that would be of such a character as to upset business. That was the basis of the argument.

Q.—And it would affect the interests of the policy holders? A.—It would, very much.

Mr. Hughes wanted to know if any suggestion was made regarding Federal supervision of business. Mr. Thummell said that none had been made, and that he believed that the idea of Federal supervision had been abandoned at that time.

"Was it stated that any other companies had contributed—I mean insurance companies?" Mr. Hughes asked.

Thinks Others Paid.

"The statement was either made that they had or that application would be made to them, but I am not very clear about that, and whether there was or not I do not know, but the general suggestion was that there was a contribution of that kind."

Mr. Hughes asked the witness if he knew of any other political contributions by the Mutual. Mr. Thummell said that he did not, whether directly or indirectly through agencies. He said also that the general direction of legislative matters was left in the hands of Mr. Grannis, but in the afternoon session corrected this testimony by saying that the executive handling of such things was in the hands of the general solicitor, Mr. Short, while he was alive, and that Mr. Grannis was consulted only in matters of policy.

Earlier in the session Mr. Thummell described how the territory was divided up between the companies. The Mutual, he said, took care of legislation in Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, Washington, Oregon, and New Mexico. The Equitable had Maryland, South Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Colorado, Arkansas, California, and Nevada. The New York Life had Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Tennessee, and Oklahoma, and the rest of the territory Mr. Trummell said was generally regarded as open to be handled as situations might arise. He said that he didn't know anything about what was done with New York State, and that he had nothing to do with legislative matters here.

Mr. Thummell described at some length the way in which expenses were split up by the three great companies and said that in the Mutual it was his custom to turn in as far as possible detailed vouchers of the money that had been spent. He said that he had met Andrew Hamilton from time to time, but that he had never received anything from Hamilton or the New York Life for services; such moneys as had come through him to these sources were simply on account of expenses that he had undergone under the joint arrangement. He told of various experiences that he had had in handling matters of legislation in the States. The most interesting was one that came up in Nebraska two or three years ago.

Comfortless Railroads.

A general revenue bill was up, and, according to Mr. Thummell, there was a combination of railroads antagonistic to the interest of the insurance company.

"It was a general revenue bill," said Mr. Thummell, "and every class of corporation was fighting its hardest to get its own taxes down as low as possible. The railroads were entirely too much for us. They had an organization complete before we even knew of the general situation, and it was such that we could not touch it."

"Didn't you find it possible," asked Mr. Hughes, "by your arguments as to the injustice of the measure as it affected life insurance companies to meet the concentrated efforts of the railroad companies?"

"I did not," said Mr. Thummell with a smile. "I was not magnetic to that extent."

"You thought you had the best of the argument, but they bad the best of the situation?"

"I knew I had the best of the argument," replied Mr. Thummell.

"And you were dealing with intelligent men?"

"Well, I was dealing with legislators."

The laugh was on the committee, and its members joined with counsel and witness and the audience in their appreciation of the joke.

Then Mr. Hughes asked: "Just what was the strength of the opposing parties? Wherein did it lie?"

"Well, I don't know," said Mr. Thummell. "I never was able to find out where their strength lay. They had it. That's all. I tried to see if I couldn't get some aid and comfort from them, and I could not. They talked nice to me, but they wouldn't do anything. They wouldn't help in any way. The only person that I got any—well, I won't say assistance, that I got fair treatment from—was the representative of the Pullman Company. I was telling him one day about a bill that I had seen in another legislature regarding Pullman taxes, and he said, 'For God's sake, don't say anything about that here.' After that he was very nice to me. That was the only comfort I ever got from any of them."

Mr. Hughes wanted to know if the Insurance companies, directly or indirectly, had ever assisted the railroad interests at Washington. Mr. Thummell said he never heard of such a thing, although he had been at Washington in connection with several matters affecting insurance, among them the repeal of that portion of the Cuban war tax which affected insurance policies.

Federal Control.

Asked about Federal control of insurance, Mr. Thummell said he believed the matter of taxing insurance companies would have to be left to the States, but that he considered it possible to obtain a uniform system of life insurance throughout the country by Federal regulation. Moreover, he said, putting the companies under Federal supervision would forestall innumerable "strike bills" now introduced in the Legislatures of the several States. Mr. Hughes asked him at last to explain the general classes of legislation in which the insurance companies have to take an interest. Mr. Thummell said that in the first class were the bills commonly known as "strike bills," generally prepared by persons outside the membership of any given Legislature and given to some new member, who introduced them, so that the authors might seek employment from the insurance companies by way of a commision to kill the bills.

Another class of bills obnoxious to the insurance companies and, according to Mr. Thummell, a great deal more dangerous are those on behalf of corporations ostensibly as general bills relating to the business of insurance, but actually containing "jokers," relieving the corporations interested from some form of taxation or other embarassment. Another class of bills which Mr. Thummell described was that prepared by attorneys who had been unsuccessful in litigation against insurance companies and were trying to get stricken from the statutes the obstacles that they had encountered in courts.

He spoke of two classes of bills that he termed "honest bills"—one the bill of some misguided enthusiast who might be quite sincere in his convictions but equally misinformed of the insurance business, and the other the bill prepared by the man who actually knows what he is talking about to meet some defect in the law. This latter variety of bill, Mr. Thummell said, always received the support of the insurance company.

Mr. Hughes's other witness yesterday was Edward J. Devlin, Superintendent of real estate for the New York Life, who testified about the office buildings of the company. He said that the total loss to the company on the Hotel Plaza in this city was $129,039.35, and that from an investment point of view the company's Western office buildings and original home office buildings were far from being subjects of congratulation. The responsibility for this condition Mr. Devlin put upon his predecessors in office, but he said that the company's policy was to carry all its real estate so that the yield would average 4 per cent. on the book value, irrespective of cost.

WON'T FAVOR HYDE.

Hughes Writes That He Must Be Examined Like Others.

Counsel Charles E. Hughes of the Armstrong committee sent a letter yesterday to Samuel Untermyer, counsel for James H. Hyde, saying that no discrimination would be made in favor of Mr. Hyde if he appeared before the committee, with respect either to the scope or manner of the examination. This is the letter:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter in which you say that Mr. Hyde is willing to appear and to testify as a witness, provided that he is not examined as to matters that are embraced in pending litigation, and that he is permitted to be represented, advised, and re-examined by his counsel. Your proposition has been brought to the attention of the committee, and in reply I am instructed to say that no discrimination will be made in favor of Mr. Hyde with reference either to the scope or to the manner of his examination. He will have opportunity to state fully all facts pertinent to the investigation, and it is hardly necessary to add that he will be treated fairly and impartially.

Distinctive Suits & Top Coats for Men At Twenty Dollars

The greater the object, the more does its perfection demand a continuity of purpose in the little things. It is the guiding principle which governs the tailoring of our ready-for-service garments for men.

The cloth, the canvas, the integral parts, and the very tape with which the garments are "stayed" are subjected to that exacting standard of ours, so that we may be sure that they will serve their purpose as long as the garment is in service.

Perhaps it is to that which our suits and coats at twenty dollars owe much that divorces them from the rest of their kind and brings them up to the level of the garments for which the to-order tailor demands again as much. Nor are ours without the new innovations and knacks upon which he bases his right to the term "exclusive."

At Twenty Dollars we present single and double breasted Suits in eleven distinctive models varying in some vital feature and fashioned of worsteds, cheviots, tweeds and thibets of the better grade.

Top Coats and Rain Coats in seven new and distinctive models of covert cloth, vicuna, and worsted, together with the new form defining fall overcoats with large lapels, velvet collar and long hooked vent.

SPECIAL FOR FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

Shoes for Men at $3.50

While the machine has to do with the uppers of our three-fifty shoes, it is the welt and other vital points that we get in our fine work by hand.

If it were not for that, ours would have no more style and character than the average three-fifty shoe, to say nothing of the good service which ours promise. For fall and winter service we present twenty-seven distinctive lasts, for the greater number of which we accepted standard five-dollar shoes as models.

Blucher, Button or Lace Shoes of gunmetal calf, wax calf, box calf, vici kid and patent coltskin with light, medium or heavy double soles.

NO SPECIAL GRAND JURY FOR INSURANCE NOW

Jerome Tells Justice Davy the Public Is Too Much Excited.

THERE WILL BE ONE LATER

When the Armstrong Committee Has Finished—Great Moral Obliquity Shown, Jerome Says.

No extraordinary Grand Jury will be called just at this time to investigate the insurance situation, but such a body will be called as soon as the Legislative investigation committee has completed its labors. This was made certain yesterday when District Attorney Jerome in an adress to Justice Davy asked that the June term of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court be finally adjourned, after it had been kept in session more than three months beyond its stated time. In approving Mr. Jerome's suggestion Justice Davy said only:

"You have investigated this matter fully, and you must take the responsibility."

As reasons for his attitude the District Attorney said that the time was inopportune on account of the very eagerness of the public clamor for punishment of the offenders, and that new evidence was being brought out every day, so that it would be unwise to start an investigation until the present one was finished and the results of it fully available. Mr. Jerome said:

Mr. Jerome's Address.

"At the time I asked your Honor to continue this June term for the purpose of having an extraordinary Grand Jury called to inquire into what had been developed by the examination of the Superintendent of Insurance in regard to the Equitable Life Assurance Society, we had no knowledge in regard to these matters except as it concerned the Equitable Life. Our knowledge was practically confined to what appeared in the report of the Superintendent of Insurance on the evidence taken by him, and in the so-called Frick report, which, of course, was unofficial. Had nothing developed between then and the present time I should upon the coming in of this court have asked for the empaneling of an extraordinary Grand Jury to consider the matters developed in the investigation of the Superintendent of Insurance and any such other matters in connection therewith as it might then be possible to bring out before a Grand Jury.

"But since that time a joint committee of the Legislature of the State of New York has been appointed and has come here for the special purpose of investigating the insurance situation in the City of New York and in the State generally. They have obtained extremely able and upright counsel, who command the respect of this community. They have already had a number of sessions—conducted in a way to command the respect of the community and to win confidence in their entire good faith—to ascertain as far as is within the scope of their purpose all the facts and circumstances in connection with the conduct of insurance business in this State and in this county.

"Shocking as the revelations in regard to the Equitable Life were to the moral sense of this community, and great moral obliquity and moral obtuseness as this investigation showed on the part of people who had heretofore occupied a position of respect in this community as distinguished business men, I think I may fairly say that the investigations of this insurance committee have shown greater moral obliquity and greater moral obtuseness, if such a thing were possible, upon the part of people equally important in the business world in this county.

Simple to Select Transactions.

"It would be a very simple thing, Sir, for the District Attorney of this county to select certain individual transactions and place them before the Grand Jury now in session. It would undoubtedly meet with general commendation if he should do so.

"The time, however, when a public officer must show that he is acting according to his judgment, and not according to what may be the ephemeral sentiment of the community, is when there is public excitement. I must say that on this subject there is public excitement—there is in this community, and I presume throughout the State, a sense of outrage at what has been done. There is a burning and eager desire that somebody should be punished, that somebody should be hurt for the things which have been done—things which the most candid man, the most temperate man, must see have been wicked, and wicked to a very great degree.

"If there were no other reasons for not taking up such an examination now it would be sufficient that it could not be taken up under the best conditions at present, although it might be necessary to do so. But this committee is in session, which each day is finding more and more facts bearing on the whole situation; which each day, under the skillful handling of witnesses by its astute counsel, is bringing forth matters that may very properly be the subject of inquiry by an extraordinary Grand Jury.

"I have considered the question very carefully; I have conferred with the Chairman of that committee, and I have, as your Honor knows, conferred with your Honor on this grave situation. And it is my judgment, Sir, that, to get the best results ultimately, it would not be wise for me to ask for an extraordinary Grand Jury at this time; that it is my duty, whatever the public demand may be on the subject, to say no; that it is my duty to wait until that committee has completed its work, and then, Sir, to ask for that extraordinary Grand Jury, and to lay before it those matters which have appeared both in the investigation by the Superintendent of Insurance and by this committee, as well as such matters as I have learned by my own study of the situation.

Legal Aspect Not Plain.

"It seems to me, Sir, that in doing so the very best results in the long run will be accomplished. The questions involved are not always easy on their legal side. There are many things involving an abundance of moral wrong doing, as to which the technical questions of criminal law are by no means plain. If your Honor concurs with my views, I would not ask for this extraordinary session of the Grand Jury until after the determination of the inquiry by the committee. This reached, I would lay before a special Grand Jury such matters as may properly be brought within the cognizance of the criminal law. And when, by the evidence put before it, it has been fully apprised in regard to the facts, then—in addition to the general charge which would be given by your Honor in the first instance—these difficult questions of law could be submitted to your Honor by the Grand Jury, and it could have the benefit of your Honor's mature judgment and wide knowledge in guiding it as to the conclusion that it should arrive at, both upon the law and the fact.

"That, Sir—in spite of the desire which is now prevalent in this community that certain immediate action should be taken, and such a desire exists plainly—that, Sir, is, it seems to me, the wise and the proper and the just thing to do, the thing which in the long run will best serve the interests of this community."

It was reported yesterday that if James Hazen Hyde did not appear before the Legislative Investigation Committee its counsel, Mr. Hughes, would go before the Grand Jury and demand an indictment against Hyde for contempt. Asked about this report, Mr. Jerome replied:

"It is impossible for me to discuss that matter at present."

Asked if it would be possible for Mr. Hughes to go before the Grand Jury as suggested, the District Attorney said:

"Yes, if I go with him."

He added that there could be no ground for indictment on the ground of contempt against Mr. Hyde until a subpoena had been served on Mr. Hyde in this State.

COLORADO JUST WAITING.

Not to Bar Insurance Companies Until the Evidence Is In.

Alfred E. Bent, Auditor of the State of Colorado, was in the city yesterday, and gave out the following statement relative to the published interview with E. E. Rittenhouse, his deputy, on the subject of revoking the licenses of the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies:

Alfred E. Bent, Auditor of State and ex-officio Commissioner of Insurance of Colorado, commenting on the reports relative to the alleged statement of his deputy, Mr. E. E. Rittenhouse, with reference to revoking the licenses of the New York Life and the Mutual Life Insurance Companies in the State of Colorado, says that he does not believe Mr. Rittenhouse made any such statement, and, if so, they were made absolutely without authority; that the policy of the deparment is conservative, and no radical action may be expected or is contemplated.

"Mr. Bent telegraphed to Mr. Rittenhouse as follows;

"Your comment on the New York Life and the Mutual Life noted. Would urge conservatism until we confer relative thereto.

"In replying to Mr. Bent's telegram, Mr. Rittenhouse stated that he had made no such comment.

"Mr. Bent further stated that judgment in matters of such magnitude should not be given until all the facts are made known through the legislative investigation now pending in New York City, and other investigations that are now being made."

MAYER ON HIS DUTIES.

Has No Original Power to Prosecute for Insurance Offenses.

ALBANY, Oct. 5.—"Daily inquiries are being made of me," said Attorney General Mayer to-day, "as to the prosecution of alleged criminal offenses in connection with insurance. There seems to be an impression that the Attorney General has original power or authority to prosecute such offenses if they have been committed. The Attorney General has no original power or authority to prosecute for criminal offenses, excepting those against the elective franchise in certain cases.

"Section 52 of the executive law defines his general duties, and a reading of that section will show that authority to prosecute a criminal offense is conferred upon him only when required by the Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, or State Engineer in certain cases. It is the duty of the Attorney General to cause all persons indicted for corrupting or attempting to corrupt any member or member-elect of the Legislature to be brought to trial. The initial duty, however, of prosecuting indictments found by the Grand Jury of any county rests upon the District Attorney of the county in which the indictment is found.

"It has been the long-settled policy of this State not to interfere with the prosecution officers of the various counties unless for some substantial cause shown."

Will Take Up Fraternal Insurance.

HUNTINGTON, L. I., Oct. 5.—In reply to a letter of inquiry sent by Nathan Hale Council of the Royal Arcanum, Senator Armstrong has sent this letter to Edwin B. Dusenberry of this place:

Dear Sir: I have your favor of the 21st inst., with inclosure, which we have turned over to Mr. Kean, of our counsel, for further consideration. We intend to devote some time to fraternal insurance before we finish our labors.

WRIGHT MEN STILL BALKED.

After 109 Ballots He Is Tied with De Angelis.

OSWEGO, Oct. 5.—With no hope of agreement on a candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, the Republican Convention of the Fifth Judicial District adjourned to-night, after the one hundred and ninth ballot, to reconvene to-morrow.

The break in the dead-lock which was expected to-day did not materialize, and after the ninety-fourth ballot recess was taken. It was believed that the selection of a compromise candidate was inevitable.

The belief that Judge Maurice L. Wright cannot hope for renomination has been forced upon the twenty-five delegates supporting him, and the friends of Pascal C. J. De Angelis are almost ready to admit that it is impossible to obtain the twenty-six votes necessary for his nomination.

Some delegates, wearied by the prolonged struggle, have left here for their homes, and substitutions were made in the list of delegates from Onondaga, Oneida, and Lewis Counties to-day.

Fourteen members of the Onondaga County Bar Association presented a petition to the convention just before its adjournment protesting against the turning down of Judge Wright.

Dr. Mary Walker appeared before the convention to-day. She buttonholed Senator Horace White, Chairman of the Onondaga delegation, and took the floor during suspension of roll call to express her views on the judicial situation. Her voice was drowned by shouts from all over the courtroom, and she retired in disgust.

Judge Irving R. Devendorf of Herkimer has strong support for the nomination in the event that the deadlock is broken by the selection of a compromise candidate.

MAYOR IN CRANKY AUTO.

McClellan's Tour of Inspection in Brooklyn Interfered With.

While on a tour of inspection in Brooklyn yesterday Mayor McClellan had an experience with a cranky automobile which resulted in his forsaking it and taking another machine back to Manhattan.

Accompanied by his secretary, the Mayor inspected the Brooklyn anchorage of the new Manhattan Bridge and then went to Newtown Creek, where he had a look at the Vernon Avenue Bridge over that malodorous waterway. The automobile in which the Mayor was riding behaved splendidly until the party reached the Brooklyn entrance to the Brooklyn Bridge.

There it was seized with a sudden fit of contrariness and balked. Coaxing it, threatening it, or tinkering with it having no effect, the Mayor was obliged to transfer to an automobile in the service of the Bridge Department to complete his journey to Manhattan.

WAS IN THE BIG SEA FIGHT.

The Pisa, Formerly a Japanese Transport, Arrives.

The Hamburg-American liner Pisa, which was one of the military transports employed by the Japanese Government during the recent Russo-Japanese war, and which has been returned to the Hamburg-American Line, arrived in Hoboken yesterday afternoon.

The Pisa was one of the vessels that took part in the Battle of the Sea of Japan, at that time being one of Admiral Togo's transports. The liner was lucky, and although she was in the line of fire, she did not sustain any damage, all of the shots that came her way going wide of the mark. Immediately after the battle the Pisa returned to Yokohama and was transferred to her old owners a few days later.

ONLY HONESTY CAN SAVE NATION, SAYS SIMMONS

Banker Denounces "Highwaymen with Airs of Saints."

TO MAKE DIRECTORS LIABLE

He Declares for Restrictions on Corporate Management—Would Call Grafters Plain Thieves.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 5.—J. Edward Simmons, President of the Fourth National Bank of New York, delivered an address on "Honesty Is the Best Policy" before the Maryland Bankers' Convention here to-day. He said in part:

"How often have we listened to the now universal talk of 'graft' and 'grafters.' Our forefathers would have called graft stealing and the grafter a thief. I fear the very use of the word graft is an indication of men's tolerance of a thief and his trade.

"Men who pose as the salt of the earth and condemn, without reserve, those who steal $50 or forge a check for $100, or accept a bribe, will themselves make millions by lying, by misrepresentation, by fraud, and by bribery. In private life they are stainless; but in the interest of corporations, of the trust, of the gas company, of the railroad company, of the insuranee ocmpany, they will have recourse to every villainy damned in the Decalogue. They will go further. They will debauch the legislator to enact laws crushing their competitors in business, and exacting from their fellow-citizens a daily tribute, under the name of duty.

"I recognize readily the vast blessings which union or consolidation for business purposes, if properly guarded and honestly conducted, may bring upon the Nation. We must not forget, however, that all trusts are monopolistic in tendency, and the more you curtail competition the nearer you approach monopoly; and when no competition exists, then monopoly prevails.

"Under exceptional circumstances, it may be even justifiable to make a tariff protect an industry, but I hold that no tariff is justified that has not for its sole aim the advantage or the necessities of our country in its entirety. The man who imposes a duty, or leads another, with or without a bribe, to impose a duty, in order to fill his pockets, is dishonest, and all the more baneful in his dishonesty because he extracts his plunder, without danger to himself, from the pockets of those who cannot resist. He does the deed of a highwayman with the air of a saint.

"Let us denounce and punish without mercy those agents of the trusts who sin against the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal.' The ordinary thief is personally amenable to the law, but the thief who steals in the name of a corporation because he wields the influence of that corporation has many times the power for mischief which the former has. Shall this wholesale thief go unscathed while the pilferer of a pitiful $10 is deprived of the opportunity of doing further wrong by imprisonment? Corporations are mere legal entities, and, as such, cannot be punished. But the Director or Trustee of a corporation who steals or bribes or appropriates is a real person, and he should be answerable to the law, the more so as in all cases he profits by his wrongdoing, and in many cases he is the only one who profits by it.

"Socialism has of course its unreasoning and unreasonable advocates, but it is probable that most of those who have been flocking to its banner have done so rather as a protest against the dishonesty and the abuse of power so rampant among us to-day than with any hope of altering the established methods of social evolution. If we can restore the old, rigid standards of honesty and uprightness in all business dealings we shall go far to prevent extension of this threatening evil.

"The very fact that the country has awakened to the prevailing conditions and that fearless and able men are organizing and leading a campaign against them are grounds for hope that a far-reaching remedial process has already begun."

The feature of the banquet to-night was an address by Secretary Bonaparte on "the necessity for independent political action on the part of the men governing the finances of the country." The Secretary said in part:

"I am speaking to-night for that class of citizens who call themselves independents, but are called a number of other things by those who do not agree with them generally 'kickers.' The kicker is the only means by which an American party is kept in order. Unless the men who control the policies of parties know that if they insult the intelligence and sense of honesty of the masses of the people too much, the kicker will rise up and cast them out of power, they will treat mere resolutions and remonstrances merely as 'big words which break no bones.'

"Nor is the kicker necessarily outside of a party. The best devotion to party is shown by the man that will refuse to follow it away from the beaten path of right. In the last campaign I was frequently asked if I were a Republican or an independent, and I had no hesitancy in answering that I was both."

$5,000 AUTO BURNS UP.

Gasoline Leak Caused a Blaze Which Firemen Could Not Put Out.

Driving his $5,000 automobile at a good pace along the Eastern Boulevard about 9 o'clock last night, E. C. Holston of 525 West 152d Street noticed some derangement of the gasoline feeding apparatus of the machine.

Mr. Holston got under the machine, but had to crawl out quickly. No sooner had he done so than there was a loud report and a sheet of flame from the gasoline tank enveloped the machine. It was soon a total wreck.

DR. STOLPER DISCHARGED.

If the Police Don't Hurt You Much Don't Bother, Says Pool.

The case of Dr. J. H. Stolper, the sanitary expert of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, who was arraigned before Magistrate Pool in the Tombs on Wednesday by Policeman Smith of the Church Street Station on a charge of disorderly conduct, came up again yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Stolper referred to the policeman as "a brute" last Wednesday, and said that Smith had poked him in the neck several times merely because the sanitary expert remarked that "New York was full of red tape." Magistrate Pool then retorted that the mere fact that Dr. Stolper spoke of Smith as "a brute" was enough to prove that the policeman had only been doing his duty. He also said, in answer to a question by Dr. Stolper whether a policeman here had the right to knock down citizens:

"Why, there is a special ordinance that gives him that right under the present administration."

Magistrate Pool then disposed of the case temporarily by adjourning it till 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon—or till one hour after the time when the court doors are usually closed—and by paroling the defendant in the custody of his friend and traveling companion, Henry J. Dannenbaum, a lawyer from Houston, Texas.

Warned about the closing time of the court, Dr. Stolper was on hand before 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He carried with him a lot of letters indicating his professional and social status. There was one from former Secretary of the Navy Long. Magistrate Pool refused to read them, but glanced over the signatures.

"What's the use?" he said. "I knew at once you were a gentleman. I knew you had been abused, but you must remember we must not judge policemen by the standards applicable to such distinguished men as yourself. I never meant to fine you. I should have discharged you yesterday, but you insisted on an adjournment. The discharge would have been a vindication for you and a quiet rebuke for the policeman. The incident is now closed, as far as I can see."

Dr. Stolper expressed a determined wish to have the policeman punished, and added that Magistrate Pool would find himself protected in St. Louis if he ever went there. That's the home town of the doctor.

"Well," remarked Magistrate Pool, "here we have become so accustomed to abuse by policemen that we regard it as an old story and make light of it unless somebody is seriously injured. The police here frequently get above their business and, in a way, become dictators, and we put up with it smilingly."

Dr. Stolper departed after having told the Magistrate that he had had a talk with Commissioner McAdoo and had been informed that the worst that could happen to Smith was the infliction of a light fine.

All this happened just after 4 o'clock yesterday, or one hour ahead of the time to which the case was adjourned, and the complaining policeman wasn't in court.

ANOTHER NEW STAR FOUND.

Miss Fleming of Harvard Discovers It in Constellation Aquila.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—A new star, reaching almost the sixth magnitude, has been discovered by astronomers at the Harvard Observatory. The star is in the constellation Aquila, and takes its name from that—Nova Aquilae No. 2, as it is the second new star to be found in that group. It was first found on Aug. 31, by Miss Fleming, assistant in the Harvard Observatory, who has discovered eight of the last eleven found in ten years. She was studying the regular list of photographs, including the whole sky, which are taken every night, when she found a new spectrum.

The photographs of Aug. 10 did not show it, but those of Aug. 18 did. At that time it had a magnitude of 6.5, only a little below the light which can be seen by the naked eye. Since then the star has been followed every night, and it is found that the light is diminishing steadily. This is proof that the star is a "new" one. It is now of magnitude 11.5.

Prof. Pickering yesterday said:

"The star may be observed during the Winter and possibly next year, but it may disappear before then. These new stars show out very brilliantly at first and then fade away."

WATER COMMISSION POWERS.

Mayer Says They Do Not Include Control Over Private Companies.

ALBANY, Oct. 5.—In reply to an inquiry from the State Water Supply Commission, Attorney General Mayer to-day gave his opinion that that body had no authority or control over private water corporations, and that the procedure of acquiring additional sources of water supply by municipal corporations or Water Commissioners of cities or villages did not apply to corporations and individuals.

He stated his opinion, however, that such private corporations or persons were included within the scope of the investigation as to sources of supply provided for by the act of the last Legislature creating the State Commission.

KOMURA'S ASSISTANTS ARE GUARDED IN TOKIO

Yamaza and Dennison Arrive with the Peace Treaty.

JAPAN'S DEBT, $1,250,000,000

Per Capita Rate of Taxation, $2 Before the War, Is Now $6—Speech by Count Okuma.

TOKIO, Oct. 5.—M. Yamaza, Director of Political Affairs of the Foreign Office, and H. W. Dennison, legal adviser of the Foreign Office, arrived at Yokohsma to-day on board the steamer Dakota, from Seattle, Sept. 20, bringing the peace treaty signed at Portsmouth on Sept. 5.

They arrived here this evening, but found few people to meet them at the railroad station owing to the strict examination made of all persons by the military and police who guarded the station.

In passing the peace treaty yesterday the Privy Council clearly impressed upon the anti-peace agitators the impossibility of a refusal to ratify it. The energies of the agitators will now probably be concentrated on an attack upon the Cabinet. Public demonstrations expressing the national indignation against the peace treaty will, it is believed, cease, but this outward suppression of feeling will only create a strong undercurrent of disaffection, which, if allowed to grow, will swell the popular rage. Unwise resistance and any attempt to suppress popular opinion may give rise to acts of violence.

Well-informed people, while appreciating the wisdom of putting a stop to the war, are indignant at the policy of the Government as exhibited, for instance, in the partition of Sakhalin.

The public is keenly awaiting an explanation from the Government, but the promise to convene a special session of the Diet immediately after the conclusion of peace not having been fulfilled it is growing impatient.

Ex-Foreign Minister Okuma, leader of the Progressive Party, speaking before the Associated Chambers of Commerce to-day, referred to the sudden expansion of Japan's finance, and said that when the withdrawal of the troops was completed Japan would find herself confronted with a debt of $1,250,000,000, the interest on which alone, roughly speaking, would be $75,000,000, or nearly twice the revenue of the country ten years ago.

The per capita rate of taxation before the war, said Count Okuma, was $2. Now it was $6. The per capita share in the national debt before the war was $6. It was now $25.

Count Okuma, however, was not pessimistic. He referred eloquently to the necessity for the business men to redouble their energy in the development of productive works of all kinds, and thus to secure victories in peace as well as war.

WILL NOT FORGIVE GERMANY.

France Not Moved by Buelow's Pleading—Russia Also Antagonized.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cables. Copyright, 1905.

PARIS, Oct. 5.—Prince von Bülow has had no better luck than his master. It may be said that the attempt to reduce France to submission by persuasion meets with the same failure as the efforts to do so by force.

In both instances there has been manifest ignorance of the character of the French people. They do not forget gratuitous injury easily, as is evidently supposed in Berlin. From the point of view of Christian morality it would have been well had the French let bygones be bygones, but there is, alas, no trace of such a praiseworthy disposition. Both in Paris and the provinces they are still chafing under the brutal treatment recently received at the hands of Germany.

Prince von Bülow's suggestion that France should already shake hands with Germany and act as the "honest broker" between Germany and England is looked upon rather as adding insult to injury than as testifying to an honest intention on the part of Germany to behave better in future.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 5.—Prince von Bülow's efforts to conciliate French public opinion by asserting that Delcassé was responsible for the German action in Morocco evoke skeptical smiles in the Russian capital, where it is recognized on all sides that the Morocco incident resulted from Russia's reverses and that the conciliatory attitude now adopted at Berlin is due to tardy regret for the mistaken policy initiated by the German Emperor at Tangier.

It is realized that if M. Delcassé pursued a policy of which the isolation of Germany was the main object, as Prince von Bülow asserts, then Emperor William's attempt to browbeat France has done more than anything else to further that object as well as to alienate the sympathies of Russia. One of the important organs here remarks that Germany thereby canceled the effect of the good-will she displayed toward Russia during the war.

Prince von Bülow's almost plaintive advocacy of a rapprochement with Russia has provoked a negative response even from formerly pro-German organs like the Novoe Vremya. A leading article in to-day's issue of that journal must prove painful reading in Berlin.

LAMSDORFF TO VISIT PARIS.

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The Tempa prints a dispatch from St. Petersburg saying that Foreign Minister Lamsdorff will soon visit Paris and Berlin, and confer with Premier Rouvier and Chancellor von Bülow.

MR. HARRIMAN LEAVES SEOUL.

Japanese Want American Capital for Korean Enterprises.

SEOUL, Oct. 4.—(Delayed.)—E. H. Harriman and his party left Söul to-day on a special train for Fu-San. During their visit here Mr. and Mrs. Harriman stayed at the American legation.

Mr. Harriman conversed with the best informed foreigners and was interviewed by a number of Japanese business men who are anxious to interest American capital in their Korean enterprises.

MOSCOW UNIVERSITY CLOSED.

Grant of Autonomy Fails to Satisfy the Russian Students.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 5.—Despite the grant of autonomy, placing the administration and policy of the universities in the hands of elected rectors and councils of professors who are thoroughly in sympathy with reform, the educational situation is darkening and there is a prospect that the hot-headed zeal of student reformers and the activity of non-student agitators at students' meetings may lead to another suspension of work at the universities.

Prince Troubetskoy, formerly President of the Zemstvo Congress and now rector of the Moscow University, has, with the approval of the Council of Professors, already been forced to close that university temporarily owing to the packing of student assemblies by outside agitators, and the council of the St. Petersburg University has warned the students that the participation of outsiders in their meetings cannot be permitted. A similar state of affairs is reported at the Odessa and other universities.

The majority of the students are apparently desirous of continuing their studies, but they are not organized and cannot make head against the carefully organized campaign of the revolutionary parties, which have used the reopening of the universities for the furtherance of their propaganda and whose members sway all meetings.

The St. Petersburg students have instituted a boycott of several professors who are disliked on account of their political opinions and have broken up these professors' classes by means of disorders.

The first act of the Ministerial Committee, the sessions of which have been resumed with Count Witte's return, has been an important concession on the language question, permitting the commercial schools at Warsaw, Riga, and Reval to use Polish or German as the language of instruction in all studies except Russian grammar, history, and geography.

THE ANGLO-CUBAN TREATY.

Belief That Opposition Is Strong Enough to Defeat It.

HAVANA, Oct. 5.—Owing to the development of strong opposition to the ten-year treaty of commerce and navigation between Cuba and Great Britain, the ratification of which is pending in the Senate, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to-day authorized the publication to-morrow of the text of the treaty, in order that its provisions may be understood by the public.

An examination of an authentic copy of the treaty reveals various reasons for the strong opposition to it interposed by the United States Government, one of the principal of these being the fact that throughout the document Great Britain receives the most-favored-nation treatment in every respect except in the matter of import duties. The latter, owing to the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Cuba, is expressly excepted, but Great Britain, by the terms of the treaty, is to be included in any favors other than tariff provisions which Cuba might hereafter concede to the United States.

The clause permitting British warships as well as British merchantmen to refit and provision in Cuban ports in the event of accident or stress of weather is as outlined Sept. 10, including the much-discussed right of "pertrecharse," a Spanish term meaning the resupplying of vessels with war munitions. Secretary O'Farrill was asked to explain the latter provision and replied that it would apply only in times of peace, since international law would not permit the refitting and supplying of vessels in neutral ports, notwithstanding the existence of treaties.

Article 5 prohibits greater duties on goods imported in British vessels than on those brought in Cuban ships. This latter article apparently checks any project for lowering the duties between the United States and Cuba on goods carried in either Cuban or American vessels. The treaty accords favored-nation treatment with respect to all port tonnage charges.

It is now believed that the strong opposition of President Roosevelt combined with that of the Spanish commercial element will prevent ratification.

JAIL FOR IRISH M. P.

John O'Donnell Declines to Give $1,000 Surety for Good Behavior.

DUBLIN, Oct. 5.—John O'Donnell, Nationalist Member of Parliament for South Mayo, was ordered by the High Court today to find $1,000 surety for his good behavior or go to jail for three months. Mr. O'Donnell elected to go to jail.

The action arose from a recent inflammatory speech delivered by Mr. O'Donnell, which was followed by an evicted tenant forcibly retaking possession of a farm. The Crown Prosecutor urged that such speeches led to disorder and crime, and this view was upheld by the court.

Mr. O'Donnell is a newspaper man. He was the first organizer of the United Irish League, and is now General Secretary of the League. He was first elected for South Mayo in February, 1900.

PARIS, Oct. 5.—Prof. Behring, the discoverer of the anti-diphtheria serum, has decided to make a statement to the International Tuberculosis Congress on Saturday relative to his reported discovery of a cure for tuberculosis.

Dr. Pierre Roux, Director of the Pasteur Institute; Prof. Metchnikoff, who is attached to the institute, and other specialists consider the discovery important, although they believe the announcement of it was premature.

Stolen Irish Curios Recovered.

DUBLIN, Oct. 5.—Two men charged with the burglary of the residence of John Mulhall, Vice Chairman of the General Prisons Board, on Sept. 4, and with stealing therefrom medals and other curios the value of which is estimated at $4,000, were brought up on remand to-day and again remanded for trial. The evidence showed that the property had been recovered.

ST. PETERSBURG REFUSES TO HONOR COUNT WITTE

Town Council Rejects a Motion to Entertain Him.

PAPERS TURN AGAINST HIM

Even the Slovo Says He Has Been Too Highly Rewarded—His Appointment as Premier Certain.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 5.—Count Witte's treatment by his countrymen is sadly at variance with the unprecedented honors granted to him by the Czar. The newspapers point out that it is the first time the negotiator of a humiliating treaty has been so rewarded.

The St. Petersburg Town Council refuses to recognize Count Witte's efforts, because, it asserts, whatever he did was merely an atonement for the evils of the Far Eastern policy, of which he was the originator.

Even the Slovo, which has hitherto supported Count Witte, scathingly remarks that the honors bestowed upon him were in nowise called for by the intrinsic merits of his achievement.

It is perhaps not an exaggeration to say that these honors should be ascribed rather to the future than the past. Count Witte remains, and must perforce remain for some time, an important factor in the affairs of Russia and the mainstay of the bureaucracy. It is recognized that he alone is able to introduce organization among the forces of the Government, without which the confrontation of the Government and the Douma will immediately entail dire confusion.

Count Witte's appointment as Prime Minister may therefore be regarded as inevitable.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 5.—A strong sentiment against Count Witte developed at a caucus of the St. Petersburg Municipality, called yesterday evening to discuss civic action in recognition of his services at Portsmouth.

Suggestions that a banquet be given in his honor and that the freedom of the city or an address be presented to him were rejected, and a resolution was adopted declaring that Count Witte was not worthy of any special honor, because his services at Portsmouth "were only a redeeming sacrifice for the political mistakes in which he has acquiesced and which were responsible for the war."

MARRIED DESPITE THE CZAR.

Grand Duke Cyril Weds Princess Victoria, Niece of King Edward.

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—A dispatch to the Tageblatt from Munich announces that the divorced Grand Duchess Victoria of Hesse and the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia were married quietly several days ago at the Hotel de Russie, Munich.

The civil ceremony was performed by an official of the Coburg Government and the religious rite by a Russian priest in the presence of the bride's mother, the Duchess Marie of Coburg, sister of the Dowager Empress of Russia, and the Grand Duke Alexis, who came from Paris in an automobile.

The greatest privacy was observed, and after the ceremony all the persons concerned immediately left Munich.

It is understood that the Czar has been bitterly opposed to his nephew's marriage to a divorced Princess, and it was even said that the Grand Duke Cyril was sent to the Far East in order to cure him of his infatuation. He was on the Petropavlovsk when that vessel was sunk by a mine, and narrowly escaped death. When he returned to Russia, broken down for the time being on account of his terrible experience, it was reported that the Czar had relented and would allow the marriage, but this report was later denied.

The Grand Duchess Victoria is a daughter of the late Duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg, brother of King Edward. She was born in 1876 and married Ernst Ludwig, Grand Duke of Hesse, in 1894. Seven years later she was divorced from him. The details of the suit were kept secret, but it was said that "invincible mutual antipathy" caused the separation.

Both the Grand Duke Cyril and his wife have visited America. The Princess came here incognito some years ago, and turned up at the British Embassy in Washington, to the astonishment, and, it was said, the embarrassment of the Ambassador. He did not know what to do with her, as he did not know whether she was still persona grata with the English Court.

INSPECTORS MUST ARREST.

Attorney General's Ruling on the Election Law.

The contention of State Superintendent of Elections Morgan that the law gives him the right to compel Election Inspectors to challenge voters and cause their arrest has been upheld by Attorney General Mayer in an opinion forwarded to the Superintendent yesterday. The matter hinged on the construction of Section 7 of the election law, which gives the Superintendent power to call on "any public officer" to aid him in the discharge of his duty.

In the campaign last year Attorney General Cunneen, a Democrat, held that Election Inspectors were not "public officers." The Legislature then passed an amendment to the law, expressly declaring that they should be regarded as such. And now Attorney General Mayer has said in so many words that the Election Inspectors must obey the orders of the Superintendent.

Lord Inverclyde Critically Ill.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Lord Inverclyde, Chairman of the Cunard Steamship Line, is again pronounced to be critically ill with pleuro-pneumonia at his residence, Castle Wemyss, Scotland. Prof. MacEwan, King Edward's surgeon, is attending him.

Not a First Prize for Vanderbilt.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 5.—Reginald Vanderbilt was defeated in his equine duel with Lawrence Jones of Louisville at the horse show to-night. To-night Mr. Vanderbilt did not secure a first prize, while Mr. Jones scored four wins, including the Aurel Batonyi challenge cup, which was given to Mr. Jones's Gallant Lad over Mr. Vanderbilt's Dictator.

Seventh Tarrasch-Marshall Draw.

NUREMBERG, Oct. 5.—Marshall opened the thirteenth game of the chess match against Tarrasch this morning and selected a Ruy Lopez. Much to the surprise of the onlookers Tarrasch selected a Bird Defense. The players agreed to draw after fifty moves had been recorded. The score now reads: Tarrasch, 6; Marshall, 1; drawn, 7.

SUES FOR A HORSEWHIPPING.

Youthful Victim of a Father's Anger Asks for $50,000.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Oct. 5.—A suit brought by Lester Charles Reimer, an Asbury Park music dealer, for $50,000 damages against Charles R. Zacharias, an automobile dealer of that place, was heard in the Supreme Court here to-day. Last April Zacharias horsewhipped Reimer for paying attentions to his daughter, after he had signed a paper pledging himself not to meet or to correspond with her.

Reimer, while on the witness stand today, said that a colored man had called at his store about 8 o'clock on the night of the assault and told him Miss Zacharias was around the corner and wished to see him. As he was walking down Emory Street, looking for the girl, he was attacked by Zacharias and lashed over the head, face, and hands until the blood flowed.

Zacharias did not deny the assault, but attempted to justify it by saying he was in a very excited frame of mind and unable to control himself as a result of Reimer's action. He said that Reimer, who is 23 years old, courted his daughter, who is only 14 years. He had warned him to stop and had sent his daughter to a college at Mechanicsburg, Penn. He afterward learned, he said, that Reimer followed the girl and was planning an elopement.

STREED SLAIN IN A DUEL.

Latest Theory Regarding Death of Lawyer at Cambridge, Ill.

CAMBRIDGE, Ill., Oct. 5.—Details of the mysterious death of Attorney John V. Streed are gradually coming to light and tend to show that Streed was slain in an impromptu revolver duel fought in the night. The indications are that two persons were wounded.

It seems pretty well established that the attack on Streed was the result of a series of efforts at blackmail among a gang which had been operating here for a long time.

The theory is that the murderer, slightly wounded, hastened up to Streed's rooms to get possession of papers.

WOMAN WILL FIGHT MACHINE.

To Run Independently for School Commissioner in Westchester.

WHITE PLAINS, Oct. 5.—Having been defeated to-day for renomination at the Republican Convention at White Plains, Miss Bertha E. H. Berbert, the only woman School Commissioner of Westcheater County, has announced her intention of running independently and fighting both the Republican and Democratic machines. Miss Berbert was set aside for Charles H. Cheney, a school teacher, of Tarrytown.

Miss Berbert, who is young and attractive, attended the convention. When the result was announced she tore open an envelope containing her petitions for the independent nomination and passed them around. The office of School Commissioner pays $2,000 a year, and Miss Berbert has held it six years.

The Republican leaders say that Miss Berbert was turned down because there is a party rule against third terms.

Morgan Cab Horse Indisposed.

The horse that draws the cab in which J. P. Morgan rides to and from his office in Wall Street had blind staggers while waiting in front of Mr. Morgan's office for the financier yesterday afternoon. Mr. Morgan does not own the rig, but the same cab, horse, and driver have been sent to him for years by the cab company.

Karlstad Agreement Said to Give Norway the Advantage.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 5.—Both Chambers of the Riksdag to-day referred the bill regarding the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden to a special committee appointed by each Chamber.

In the debate in the First Chamber several members criticised the Karlstad agreement on the ground that Sweden's concessions gave the impression that Norway had secured the advantage. Some of the members protested against the arbitration clause, and went so far as to say that war between the two countries was bound to come.

A lengthy debate preceded the final reference of the bill to a special committee. The Government speakers maintained that Sweden had secured everything she sought for at Karlstad.

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 5.—The Storthing to-day, by a vote of 94 to 21, adopted a proposal providing for the more rapid amendment of the Constitution.

Premier Michelsen in supporting the proposal said that when Norway was recognized as an independent country it might be found expedient to modify the Constitution in a quicker manner than was at present provided for.

HARPER'S BOOK NEWS.

Rebecca Mary

Motherless little Rebecca Mary lived with her aunt Olivia—a situation which Annie Hamilton Donnell has developed into something that is quite out of the rut of everyday fiction. The story of this amiable, singular little girl and her unusual quest for affection, with its sweet pathos and delicate humor, is sure to prove a revelation to all men and women.

Deep affection for the little girl gradually takes possession of Aunt Olivia's stern heart and Puritan sense of duty. How it all came about—the part the big white rooster played in the little drama, and other novel incidents are charmingly described. The illustrations by Elizabeth Shippen Green add a distinctive touch to this beautiful volume.

THE CITY NOMINATIONS.

The renomination of Mayor McCLELLAN by the Democratic City Convention last night merely confirms a choice long ago made by public opinion. To any one who has kept an eye upon the political signs of the times it was evident even before the close of Mayor McCLELLAN's first year in the City Hall that the City of New York was very well content with its Mayor, and that the will of the voters when consulted at the polls would certainly decree his continuance in the office. In fact, the absence of anything like doubt as to the chief nomination has deprived the municipal campaign of its accustomed interest—a defect which, it must be candidly admitted, has been in some measure remedied by the performances of the Opposition.

It would be easily possible for a Tammany Mayor to satisfy that organization while falling far short of satisfying anybody else. Mr. McCLELLAN has not only satisfied his organization, but he has won the confidence and will have the support of the great body of independent Democrats and of a very large number of Republicans as well. Indeed, Republican approval of the Mayor's conduct of the city's affairs has been one of the most convincing evidences of his merit. Further testimony to his large command of the public confidence has been furnished by his opponents, whose tribulations and perplexities were in the main occasioned by the fact that well-known leaders who could be counted upon to take part in a fusion movement in any year when there was a genuine call to raise the standard of reform are this year good McCLELLAN men.

Since it came to be generally admitted that Mayor McCLELLAN would be his own successor, he has had the good fortune to increase the public respect in which he is held. Undoubtedly it was another piece of good fortune that the acts for which he was justly, and in many cases severely, criticised were performed very early in his administration. He made some appointments he ought never to have made, for they were bad; but they were made a good while ago, and since that time his management of municipal affairs has been so wise and sound and sensible, he has in so many ways shown himself to be a man of balance and steadiness, that the public is disposed to overlook early errors and to measure the man by the long series of administrative acts in which he has shown such good judgment and such regard for the public welfare. The belief that in a second term he will be even more independent of any organization control is very widespread, as is the further belief that if his vote is very large, exceeding the numbers included within his organization and his party, he will feel that he is in a position of such independence that his acts will be quite unhampered by considerations other than those pertinent to good government.

Mr. HERMAN A. METZ, the nominee for Controller, is, we suppose, unknown to the greater part of the city's people. He is, however, well known in Brooklyn, and highly respected. A highly successful business career testifies to Mr. METZ's fitness for a business office. His fortune is of his own making, and he has been successful in a measure conspicuous even in this country of self-made men. His long-time acquaintances and his neighbors bear witness to the uprightness of his character and his worthiness to fill an office of public trust.

The nomination of Mr. PATRICK F. McGOWAN to be President of the Board of Aldermen is another matter altogether. It is quite characteristic of Tammany management to do what can be done to spoil a good work by some defacing stroke. Mr. McGOWAN's name ought never to have been put upon a ticket with the names of Mr. McCLELLAN and Mr. METZ. We may admit that he is a very respectable person, but he does not possess the qualities and the abilities that fit him for President of the Board of Aldermen at any time, and they fall very far short of making him fit for the nomination at this time, when the expectation is somewhat general that the incumbent of that office may next year be called to the office of Mayor through the election of Mr. McCLELLAN as Governor of the State of New York. This is looking some distance ahead, to be sure, but it is the business of political managers to look ahead, and Mr. MURPHY does not seem to have looked beyond the next election day—even if as far as that. Inasmuch as there has been no particular concealment of the purpose to nominate Mr. McCLELLAN for Governor next year, it was plain that voters disposed to give him their support would scrutinize with unusual care the candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen. If a voter should feel that Mr. McGOWAN is not qualified to be Mayor of New York—and a great multitude of voters will feel that way about it—he would naturally be a good deal less enthusiastic about the whole McClellan ticket. Furthermore, the nomination of a weak man to the office which carries with it the potential succession to the Mayoralty will increase tenfold the pressure and the authority of the demand that will be made upon Mr. McCLELLAN to serve out his term here, and take his chances of Albany later. It may be not quite fair to say that Mr. McCLELLAN's assent to the nomination of McGOWAN is equivalent to a pledge not to try for the Governorship, but it is impossible to acquit him of contributory negligence in not insisting upon the choosing of a better man.

LEGISLATIVE BLACKMAIL.

In his testimony given before the Armstrong committee on Wednesday President McCALL spoke with a good deal of frankness of one of the oldest abuses of the insurance business, an abuse antedating in its origin bond-buying syndicates, "open accounts," and other improper things that have been testified to during the present inquiry. The payment of bribe money to prevent the passage of hostile measures which as a class are usually described as "strikes," is an ancient practice. In Mr. McCALL's comment upon this evil we detect the indignant note of wronged innocence, but also the helpless sigh of the martyr. Insurance men, like the managers of other corporations, have always spoken of the bribery of legislators as if it were a necessary incident of their business.

It is not a necessary incident of their business, or of any other business. It is either a confession of culpable cowardice or of actual criminality. No insurance company need pay one red cent to legislative "strikers" who threaten it with adverse bills. An insurance President who was conscious of official rectitude, who knew that his company had not by guilty practices exposed itself to blackmail, could have no reason to fear the "Black Horse cavalry" of Albany or predatory bands organized in any State capital. When threatened with harmful legislation and approached with the suggestion that its authors were quite ready to be bought off, an exposure of the whole dirty business in the public press would be ample as a defense and a protection. No "strike" bill could get through a Legislature after the President of an insurance company had publicly denounced it and exposed its purpose.

It has sometimes happened—we do not say often, but sometimes—we presume, that insurance companies have not only felt called upon to beat bills they did not like, but to procure the passage without undue noise and publicity of measures they approved and had themselves prepared. Possibly some part of the $786,927 of New York Life Insurance money that went into the hands of Mr. ANDREW HAMILTON of New York and Albany was devoted to oiling the legislative ways in order that favoring legislation might be had. Mr. McCALL says, however, that he believes that "three-fourths of the insurance bills introduced in the United States are blackmailing bills." That is a very large proportion. The other fourth would be divided between bills demanded in the interests of policy holders and those prepared to serve the interests of the companies. So that in respect to rather more than three-fourths of the whole mass of insurance legislation the blackmailing legislator is in a position to demand his bribe.

It is a form of public criminality for which there is no excuse or palliation. The insurance companies can stop it altogether. Having the power to stop it, and failing to use the power, the public is little likely to listen with sympathetic ear to any complaints that the companies are badgered and harassed by the introduction of bills which Legislatures would pass if their members were not submitted to a process of convincing argument at the hands of the Insurance Andrew Hamiltons.

"BRITISH DECADENCE."

President DAVID STARR JORDAN of the Leland Stanford University of California has been delivering an address to his students on the decadence of Great Britain. His explanations are two. The first is the emigration to other countries of much of the "best brawn and brain of Britain." The other is "the death of thousands of England's best men in the numerous wars which that country has waged in the last century."

In the classic language of Mr. HUGHES, replying to the brief of Mr. UNTERMYER, President JORDAN "cites no authorities for his contention, and we are not impressed with his reasoning." In the first place, he begins with a "petitio principii," or, in English, with a begging of the question. He assumes the decadence of Great Britain. How does he know about it? Apparently from his observations of "his recent trip through Europe," of which we may presume that the British part was done in what we call an automobile and the British a "motor car." What RUFUS CHOATE called "the sidelights of a car in motion" are less valuable, as bases for such conclusions, than what BACON called the "dry light" of statistics. As we have frequently had occasion to point out, statistics do not maintain the contention that the British Empire is actually decadent. It has not positively declined, upon any showing of prosperity of which statistics can take cognizance. It has declined relatively, by the incursion of new competitors. A generation ago Great Britain had a virtual monopoly of all the things she manufactured and exported. She defied competition. That was the time when all Englishmen maintained free trade, not as an economic theory, but as a sacrosanct dogma, as well they might. That was before "fair trade," and before Chamberlainism. Meanwhile, German competition and American competition have been making inroads on the British preserves. Certain things "made in Germany" are cheaper than the like things made in Britain. Certain other things made in this country are cheaper than the like things made in Britain, not cheaper here, thanks to a beneficent tariff of the kind Mr. CHAMBERLAIN desires to bestow upon his country, but cheaper in those neutral markets from which the American consumer is shut out. It is only in the sense of an entry of competition where there was no competition that Great Britain can be called decadent.

What the reasons may be for this limited and doubtful decadence is a complicated question. We are inclined to think that the natural growth of American and German manufactures would furnish a sufficient explanation for their appearance in markets from which they had before been excluded. The early development in Great Britain of trades unionism and the perfection of the organization by which it has there been enabled to enhance the labor cost of British products and thereby to kill the goose that laid the golden eggs is another explanation. Of President JORDAN's proffered explanations we take leave to say that they are simply silly and childish. England has lost by emigration far less than Germany. And the emigration of what he so attractively and alliteratively describes as "British brain and brawn," such as it has been, has mainly gone to British colonies or dependencies during the generation which has witnessed the passing of the monopoly which Great Britain possessed at the beginning of it. And, as for the wars, the United States during the civil war and Germany during the Franco-Prussian war, lost far more "brain and brawn" than Great Britain has lost in all the wars she has waged, from and including the Crimean to and including the war for the extinction of the Dutch nationalities in South Africa. If the President of the Leland Stanford University has nothing more to the purpose than that to say, it seems that he would do well to hold his peace.

STATEN ISLAND PARKS.

Judging by the newspaper abridgement, which is all we have seen of the report of the Municipal Art Society on the potentialities of a park system for the Borough of Richmond, that report does less than justice to the preliminary work of Mr. WILLCOX, now Postmaster, and formerly Park Commissioner for Manhattan and Richmond. In this latter and former capacity, Mr. WILLCOX made a very valuable investigation of the possibilities of Staten Island, and did some pioneer work, which his successors would not do well to ignore.

At the beginning of the settlement of Manhattan there were those who saw in Staten Island the true site of the future metropolis. Among them was CORNELIS MELYN, the first "patroon" of the island, who in consequence spent the rest of his life in heated controversy with that obstinate old soldier, PETER STUYVESANT. From the days of MELYN to those of ERASTUS WIMAN, sanguine projectors have continued to contemplate the commercial possibilities of the island. And it is "manifest destiny" that its water front will, in the fullness of time, come to be a very valuable adjunct to the shores of Manhattan, of Brooklyn, and even of Jersey, and thus a metropolitan asset.

But this use will, after all, account only for the periphery of the island. The whole interior, including the highlands which command such inspiring views of the bay and the cities, seems to be reserved by nature for the purpose of a park for the metropolis, which may be provisionally, but only provisionally, occupied in the meantime by villas. And, indeed, much even of the shore seems to be destined to the public uses for the purpose of pleasure which it can only with much difficulty be made to serve for the purposes of commerce.

That so much of the island as is available should be considered and treated with reference to its ultimate function and that timely reservations should be made of needful spaces, and timely regulations, so far as private rights permit, should be imposed on other property; these are plainly requirements not only of local but of metropolitan interest and urgency. Borough President CROMWELL has done well to take the counsel of the Municipal Art Society, the value of whose counsel in such matters is generally recognized, and is, or at least should be, more generally recognized when Mr. CHARLES R. LAMB is, as he is in the present case, the organ of the society. When the tunnels supersede or even supplement the ferries, it will be recognized that Staten Island is the natural playground of Greater New York. Of course such considerations are thrown away on PALLAS, who is their official exponent. But they are apparently not thrown away on Mr. CROMWELL, and certainly not on Mayor McCLELLAN.

CHICAGO "COMSTOCKERY."

In the map of settlements radiating westward during the past three centuries from Puritan New England a faint streak runs athwart Chicago. Peculiarities of speech and morals helped the ethnologists to trace it thither, as likewise one leading into Manhattan. But further evidence is at hand to show that descendants of Pilgrim forebears still impose their austere standards of morality upon the denizens of the Middle Western metropolis. We quote the following dictum of The Chicago Chronicle upon the issue of "Comstockery," as defined recently in a letter to THE TIMES's London correspondent by the epithetical GEORGE BERNARD SHAW:

> It is no argument against strict censorship to say that some of the world's literary masterpieces must be excluded from library shelves if that censorship be enforced. Literary smut, even though it is the product of genius, is unfit for general reading. There are enough great books that are absolutely clean to render the exclusion of the unclean masterpieces a matter of no consequence.

We have once or twice observed that masterpieces no less revered by the English-speaking public than King JAMES's version of the Holy Scriptures and the works of WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE would fall under the strictures passed by the heroic Mr. COMSTOCK and his compeers upon the humble literary productions of SHAW. They, too, ought to go on the index expurgatorius of the New York Public Library, along with "Man and Superman." But before conforming too strictly to the Chicagoan, Comstocklan, and Bostwicklan brand of Puritanism, of devout ancestry, we beg to cite to over-hasty library censors in this country the classic argument delivered in 1644 by that very genuine Puritan, JOHN MILTON, standing on the Mars Hill of literary ethics, in his speech to OLIVER CROMWELL's Parliament in behalf of the liberty of unlicensed printing and unlicensed reading. Our sage and serious poet MILTON said:

> Good and evil we know in the field of this world grow up together almost inseparably, and the knowledge of good is so involved and interwoven with the knowledge of evil, and in so many cunning resemblances hardly to be discerned, that those confused seeds which were imposed upon Psyche as an incessant labor to cull out and sort asunder were not more intermixed. It was from out the rind of one apple tasted that the knowledge of good and evil, as two twins cleaving together, leaped forth into the world. And perhaps this is that doom which ADAM fell into of knowing good and evil; that is to say, of knowing good by evil. * * * Since, therefore, the knowledge and survey of vice is in this world so necessary to the constituting of human virtue, and the scanning of error to the confirmation of truth, how can we more safely, and with less danger, scout into the regions of sin and falsity than by reading all manner of tractates, and hearing all manner of reason? And this is the benefit which may be had of books promiscuously read. But of the harm that may result hence, * * * is feared the infection that may spread; but then, all human learning and controversy in religious points must remove out of the world, yea, the Bible itself; for that ofttimes relates blasphemy not nicely, it describes the carnal sense of wicked men not elegantly, it brings in holiest men passionately murmuring against Providence through all the arguments of EPICURUS.

That is, were the singer of "Paradise Lost" and "Paradise Regained" living to-day, he would advise the readers of The Chicago Chronicle to embrace without reserve the benefit that may be had "of books promiscuously read"; he would counsel them to "scout into the regions of sin and falsity" by reading the scornful, sociological, pestiferous, but conceivably literary, tractates of GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, which, perhaps due to the paternal promptings of Mr. COMSTOCK, the New York Public Librarian has again put under the ban.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Declining the Indeclinable.

One really must wonder if President ROOSEVELT is ingenuous enough to suppose that it rests with him to decide whether or not he will accept another nomination for the Presidency—if he imagines that he could refuse the equally inevitable nomination and election that would result from a duplication in 1908 of the existing political and economic conditions. As quoted by Senator SIMMONS, he says that he is as firm now as when he first announced his determination not to "run" again for the great office. Well he may be, but that is quite irrelevant, for there is no question now of "running" for it; the question, so far as there is one at all, is as to whether a very large majority of the people in the United States are or are not going to tell him they find it wiser to intrust certain work to him than to put it in the hands of somebody else. If they do reach that decision its announcement will be an order not to be ignored or disobeyed. In those circumstances, the promise he made in circumstances entirely different would become of no force or weight, since it would be kept in both spirit and letter despite the extension of the President's term of office. But the President also said, according to Senator SIMMONS, that the consciousness of his "unalterable resolution" made him free to act as his thought was right, gave him great satisfaction, and enabled him to enjoy his official life better than he could if he were striving for some political ambition. That is very curious in several ways. First, it is a cruel accusation against every President who has sought a renomination, for it clearly implies, though of course the implication was not intentional, that no such President was "free to act as he thought was right," and that means, if it means anything at all definite, that every such President did what he knew was not right, and that he couldn't help doing it. Many politicians probably hold that view, and yet it is precisely the opinion that President ROOSEVELT has been acting without a view to renomination that creates whatever foundation there is for the expectation that he succeed himself. They—and he, as yet—seem incapable of learning the truth, of which his own career gives several striking illustrations, that the best and surest of ways to continue in one office or to get better ones is to serve public interests without a thought of anything except those interests. Does President ROOSEVELT remember what made him Governor of New York? Has he forgotten what quieted the many and serious doubts of him, his character, and his qualities that existed when he first came to the Presidency?

Of Course Lily Has Brothers.

We fear that the feminine correspondent who signed the letter we printed yesterday, "A Lover of Honesty (Though a Woman)," misunderstood the intention with which we told the story of LILY. To that dreadful tale of woman's duplicity she made rejoinder with one of a man who robbed a railway by the same false pretense of having been injured in an accident from which he had really escaped without a scratch, and she said that, when she exprssed disgust at such lack of common honesty, the scoundrel muttered something about the high-flown notions of women and their want of humor. We doubt the one anecdote as little as we did the other, and certainly we needed no proof that there are men capable of all possible and conceivable forms of meanness and villainy. But if our correspondent will read again the story of LILY, she will see that what fixed our attention was much less the deplorable conduct of LILY herself than the view of her conduct that was taken by two of her women friends. The thief who talked to her about high-flown notions and lack of humor would have been careful to say no such things about his theft to men, even to men capable of an act as contemptible as his own. They might have approved of it, as an act, but their approval would have recognized its quality as clearly as would the disapproval of no end of honest and intelligent women. This recognition of quality does seem to be lacking in a relatively small, but absolutely large, number of women who otherwise come in the category of the good. The size of that class, however, is steadily and rapidly decreasing under the pressure of modern conditions, and already women like LILY's friends are held to be notable and very amusing relics of another age, not only by practically all men, but by a very large majority of women. That is as it should be, and it charmingly demonstrates the soundness of the meliorist's contention as contrasted with the weakness of those offered by both the pessimist and the optimist.

Shakespeare on the East Side.

Some of us who have been in New York more than over night and over more than several nights will be disposed to smile just a little—but very, very kindly—at those who are discussing a plan for presenting Shakespeare on the East Side in terms that indicate their belief that the thing will be quite new in that part of the town. Not only has Shakespeare frequently been played in one tongue or another in and near the Bowery through all the recent years, but he was more or less familiar to the East Siders all through the "good old days" that owe their reputation so much more to their remoteness than to their virtues. Still, the plan of the Educational Alliance is just as commendable as it would be if it were entirely novel, and nothing could be further from our intention than to criticise it otherwise than favorably. Particularly excellent is it that now, as in the forgotten past, the plays are to be presented in English. Never as much as to-day—more accurately, never until a few days before to-day—has there been serious need for reminding the East Side that the language of the United States is English and that those who speak another, except as an accomplishment or to serve an occasional convenience, are not Americans in any true sense of the word. But now the need does exist, for New York is cursed and imperiled by dozens of "colonies," every one of them a poisonous marsh of un-Americanism in which ignorance and misfortune tend inevitably to become viciousness. Better even than Shakespeare is the encouragement of assimilation, the breaking up of tribes and clans, the abolition of everything that the "colony," no matter who inhabits it, implies. For all that good work, however, Shakespeare is an admirable instrument, since he speaks for everybody as well as to everybody, and he more than any other is likely to make men forget the petty distinctions and mean prejudices that divide them from one another, always to their harm and unhappiness.

More Restrictions on Smokers Wanted.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"O. S. S." proves himself a reasonable gentleman by his remarks in to-day's TIMES. Often have I wondered why "50 per cent. of the available cabin room" should be sacrificed to smokers, thus forcing non-smokers into the women's cabin, where the tired men need seats equally as urgently as do the fatigued women, from whom they take them.

Again, why are ten or a dozen smokers allowed to vitiate the air for 100 or 200 of the bill payers on a Summer resort hotel piazza?

If every time a drinker took a cocktail all the persons in his vicinity were forced to drink a thimbleful of the liquor it would be no more outrageous than is the nauseating fact that whenever men smoke in public they are obliging others to swallow what is most repugnant and injurious to them.

"You may laugh and the world laughs with you. You smoke, but you don't smoke alone."

In the name of reason, justice, hygiene, and decency keep smoking out of the Subway and off the elevated railroads. SUFFERER.

New York, Oct. 4, 1905.

Rats in Morningside Park.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

During a seven minutes' walk from 116th to 118th Street in Morningside Park yesterday I saw crossing or attempting to cross the alley five rats, one of them of uncommon size. Besides the damage these rodents may cause to the park itself their presence in such numbers, where hundreds of children and babies are taken daily at all seasons, involves danger of more than one kind to the infant population of the neighborhood. It is not yet demonstrated that these animals may not carry other infectious germs besides those of the bubonic plague, and it would be altogether safer and cleaner to exterminate them, which should be a comparatively easy task for the park authorities. PRECAUTIOUS.

New York, Oct. 4, 1905.

Dead Animals in the Streets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me the Street Cleaning Department and the Board of Health are very lax in their duty. I cannot remember having seen so many dead animals lying around in the streets of this city as under the present administration. I. H. D.

New York, Oct. 4, 1905.

The Limelight Habit.

From The Baltimore American.

Retired politicians are truly determined to keep themselves in the limelight. Odell is again stirring up good old Senator Platt; Hill is defending an alleged murderer of the most espectacular type; Bryan announces that the world is his oyster, and Cleveland jumps into a bramble bush with a hornets' nest in it by attacking the woman suffragists.

The Weak Point.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer.

England will build only one battleship this year, but she will carry twelve twelve-inch guns, and be equal to any three now in existence. Still, a humble, inconspicuous torpedo would probably send her to the bottom as quickly as any other.

DEFERRED DIVIDENDS.

Profit to the Companies and Injustice to Policy Holders Explained.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The "Deferred Dividend" letter of "An Insurance Man," which appears in your issue of this date, justifies the conclusion of the readers that he argues not as to whether the annual dividend is an advantage for the assured, but whether the deferred dividend is not an advantage to the company issuing the policy. His letter indicates a desire to manufacture argument for insurance agents who are called upon to sell deferred dividend policies, and he loses sight—the evidence shows intentionally—of the great injustice of the long dividend policies.

I presume I might also call myself "An Insurance Man," and I am unalterably opposed to the long-deferred dividend policies of all companies, and it is not because I write insurance for an annual dividend company, either, because I have absolutely no direct connection with any insurance company, operating as I do on behalf of the assured and distributing such business as I may possess among all the companies as their respective forms may best suit the particular applicant in question; hence I think that I have effectually relieved myself of this possible charge of personal interest.

Here is the crying injustice of the deferred dividend in brief:

Suppose that a man holds a policy issued on the twenty-year dividend plan. The age of the man is 40, and the amount of the policy $10,000. He pays, approximately, $412.50 per annum for twenty years on this policy, and when the twenty years have elapsed he returns his policy to the company and they allot the dividends thereto. One company gives the "estimate" of what such a policy will be worth in twenty years:

Reserve, $6,670; "surplus," which means dividends, or profits, as you prefer to call it; $3,710; or, a total cash value, which it is supposed the company will pay, $10,380. This "surplus" is supposed to be the interest of the insured in the profits which his annual contributions have earned for the company. It means the savings for twenty years, and if the insured lives the twenty years out this is all right and good, but—and here is where the injustice comes in—if the insured dies in 19 years and 360 days after he takes out the policy every cent of this "surplus" is lost to him, although the company figures that this surplus would purchase in five days longer $5,550 more insurance payable at death. On the other hand, suppose the insured finds it necessary to sell his policy to the company after he has paid nineteen premiums on it; they give him the reserve only, amounting to $6,190, and he loses nineteen-twentieths of $3,710, the alleged dividends which he would be entitled to in one year more.

It has been conservatively estimated that in 1904 the vast sum, in round figures, of $10,000,000 was lost by the policy holders to the various insurance companies because of surrendering policies and sacrificing the "dividends" which are due only upon the completion of the period. Is it any wonder that $10,000,000, distributed to the insurance companies and taken from the pockets of their policy holders, makes the insurance companies squeamish about parting with so great a sinecure? If a company is conducted on the "mutual" plan, or for the benefit of the policy holders, why is not the proportionate amount of this vast dividend fund distributed for the period which a policy has run when the policy is taken up, whether as a death claim or a cash surrender?

"An Insurance Man" strikes the keynote when in summing up he says that "the fact that, by reason of death and lapses," &c. It is just exactly this, "by reason of deaths or lapses, that these millions of dollars have been lost to the people who earned it by paying into the companies the premiums on which this interest was earned. Nowhere does he contend that the assured is not entitled to this money, and it is but a custom that gives the right to the companies to withhold it.

Any insurance man will reel off the names of half a dozen of the most conservative, the safest and the most prosperous insurance companies in the United States who issue only annual dividend policies. It certainly is feasible, therefore, from the standpoint of the company, and surely no sane man or woman would hesitate an instant in choosing between a policy which provided that every year his or her share of the earned dividend or profit would be apportioned in accordance with the amount of the premium paid, and this profit used either to reduce the amount of the premium or to be withdrawn in cash and applied to any purpose whatever. I add, no sane man or woman would hesitate between such a policy and one in which he received no profits for twenty years, and should he or she die before that period sacrifice to the company all the earnings of the premiums paid in for the time the policy has been in force.

Every corporation in the United States is compelled to make an annual report of its operations, and every stockholder of such corporation, when a dividend has been declared, draws such dividend annually or semi-annually as the period may be selected. What would be thought if steel or oil or other stock dividend be distributed every twenty years, and if the shareholder die before that period all such dividend be sacrificed to the company? Why, then, should there be a different system for life insurance, especially when it is contended that every policy holder in a mutual company becomes and is, in effect, a stockholder in that company?

The American insuring public are not nearly so deeply interested in the history of annual and deferred dividends as they are in obtaining the benefits from their policies as the terms of the policies themselves provide. It is hardly to be assumed that the surrender of a policy at the end of nineteen instead of twenty years stops the past earning capacity of the premiums paid in. Ten millions of dollars is a pretty big annual prize, and it is hardly to be wondered at that the companies fight hard to retain it. It is a favorable sign, however, when the oldest companies, those which originated and practiced the deferred dividend system for years, will now issue annual dividend policies when requested, although this fact is not generally advertised. For the "Vindicated."

From The Chicago Inter Ocean.

Now that the Hon. Francis B. Loomis has secured from the President a public certificate that the late John Hay believed Loomis was all right and Bowen was all wrong in the controversy between these passed and passing ornaments of our Diplomatic Service, it is to be hoped that Mr. Loomis will be content to retire into the well-earned repose of private life without again forcing the American people to remember what were his own indiscretions while Minister to Venezuela.

His Women Folk.

"What a beautiful home you have!" said the old-time friend.

"You mustn't let mother and the girls hear you speak of it so patronisingly," answered Mr. Cumrox. "This ain't a home. This is a residence."

THE EVENING HIGH SCHOOLS.

Two Explanations of the Falling Off in Attendance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to ths query of your correspondent, "A Constant Reader," regarding the diminished attendance of the Evening High School as ths term advances, it is, of course, well known that all classes, whether pay or free, show a high percentage of loss in attendance before the term is half over, but a falling off of 1,600 pupils in one term requires special explanation.

To begin with, it is due in a measure to the practice of filling the classes too much in the very beginning of the term, making it impossible for the teacher to give any individual instruction to those who specially require it, and these becoming discouraged, remain away. Again, during the first month of the term as well as the fourth, (that is, January,) many new pupils are entered night after night who naturally find themselves behind the class. The teacher cannot give them the individual attention necessary to help them "catch up" with the rest, and they also become discouraged, and give up. If the teacher attempts to give individual instruction, she must neglect the class, and unless some new principle is taken and expounded every night, the class loses interest, and at the first occasion, bad weather, slight indisposition, any or no other reason, in fact, the pupil gives up.

To my mind the remedy is to make the classes smaller at the beginning, and not to enter new pupils in a class where they must find themselves behind the rest, with scant prospect of catching up, unless they are free during the day and have time to devote to study, which, as a rule, is not the case, as the majority of Evening High School scholars are employed during the day.

Let a few special teachers be engaged to help the late comers until they can be placed in a class and take up the study with the rest. TEACHER.

New York, Oct. 3, 1905.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The reason for the falling off in attendance at the Evening High Schools is that many evening teachers are also day school teachers, and are tired and physically unable to impart their knowledge at night to those eager to learn.

Could not some influence be brought to bear to give those seeking appointments, unable to procure them for day schools, an opportunity to teach in ths evening schools? KATHARINE GREEN.

Setting a Bad Example.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After reading the article in this morning's TIMES about the method of supplying liquor to the Hotel Gotham, I am wondering what right the proprietor has to teach children to "beat the law" of their city, and to break the great moral law of truthfulness? Can those boys who are paid to act a lie becoms truthful and honorable citizens?

A FRIEND OF CHILDREN.

Gotham and Knickerbocker.

From The Boston Herald.

That the sarcasm which angered one generation is so far forgotten by another that a name the satirist bestows on a community is accepted as the local designation and becomes a favorite without reference to its origin, is evidenced in the title of the newest hotel in Manhattan, the Gotham. New Yorkers are fond of calling themselves Gothamites, but their ancestors of nearly one hundred years ago were incensed when Washington Irving bestowed the title on the New York of 1807. They looked up the strange term, and found that Gotham was an English village whose inhabitants, renowned for their stupidity, were the butt of English humor as far back as the Middle Ages. It was typified in the famous nursery rhyme of later date recording the voyage of the three wise men of Gotham in a bowl. Even later, in the early part of the eighteenth century, Londoners laughed over the scenes and incidents of a popular farce, "A Gotham Election."

But Washington Irving has been forgiven. The name has been accepted, while the New Yorkers have declined to apply the fable to themselves. Much the same has been the fate of "Knickerbocker." Irving saw that name on a sign, and rejoiced in it because it was so provoking of the risibilities of the reader. Old Dutch New York felt itself satirized, and resolved to ostracize Irving—as a contemner of the aristocracy. Afterward it grew calm, and concluded that the Knickerbockers didn't typify the old Dutch families of distinction, being in fact very humble folk with an odd patronymic that tickled a humorist's fancy. Now the New Yorkers are proud of being "Knickerbockers," because they esteem Irving at his worth as the kindliest, sunniest of humorists, and one of the most lovable of men, who, when he laughed, laughed good-naturedly.

Waring's Fate a Warning to Roosevelt.

From The Boston Herald.

President Roosevelt does not need to go to the fever-stricken city to prove his courage. Has he not faced the treed bobcat, shot a bear, and doubly whitewashed Loomis? It will be remembered that the lamented Col. Waring, who knew a great deal about yellow fever, fell a victim to this disease while on a brief visit to Cuba.

The Obvious Implication.

From The Washington Star.

"Do you think it is honest for a man to accept money for a campaign fund?"

"Why, yes," answered Senator Sorghum, "if he really turns it over to the fund."

A SALEM TRAGEDY.

Ere witches came to Salem town there lived a maiden there
With modest eyes of golden brown and most uncommon fair.
And truly was she loved, this maid, by youth of high renown,
But then the witches came, 'tis said—they came to Salem town.

He courted her with winsome word, he pledged her vows of love,
'Til all the winds of heaven heard and all the stars above.
He put a ring upon her hand and kissed her eyes of brown,
And then it was the witches planned
witchcraft in Salem town.

The wedding day dawned bright and fair and gayly pealed the bell—
No prophesying soul was there the awful thing to tell;
But near his side at altar rail he saw no eyes of brown,
But just an old crone, wan and pale—a witch of Salem town.

"What mockery is this?" he cried.
"What ruthless jest is here?
Bring me at once my chosen bride or all my vengeance fear!"
But vain was all his courage now—instead of eyes of brown
He saw the brand upon her brow—the brand of Salem town.

And still upon that day each year the bell begins to peal,
And Salem townfolk, so they say, all
churchward softly steal;
For there arrayed in bridal gown his spirit waits to wed
The maid with eyes of golden brown—the maid from Salem fled.

And though no cruel witches now upon their broomstick ride,
They say a crone with branded brow stands always at his side;
And some there be who still insist in good,
old Salem town
That she who keeps the bridal tryst once bore those eyes of brown.

COMSTOCK TAKES HAND IN PHYSICAL CULTURE SHOW

Has Promoters Arrested for Putting Up Posters.

SHOWMAN SAYS HE'LL FIGHT

How Can Any One Show How Physical Culture Has Improved the Body If the Body Is Clothed?

When the "Mammoth Physical Exhibition" opens next Monday at Madison Square Garden for a week's run there is likely to be trouble between its management and Anthony Comstock's Society for the Suppression of Vice. Mr. Comstock is already so horrified at the bare, printed posters advertising the exhibition that yesterday afternoon he had Bernarr MacFadden, who backs the exhibition, and Benjamin F. Provandie, the young man who is attending to the posters, arrested and taken to the Tenderloin Police Station, charged with having in their possession obscene pictures. Five hundred pounds of the posters were confiscated.

Late last night Thomas J. Bimberger, one of Comstock's agents, arrested Gomer Reese of 102 West Ninety-eighth Street, on the same charge. The warrant was issued by Justice Wyatt. Reese is the manager of the show. He was locked up in the Mercer Street Station.

The first two were arrested at 29 East Nineteenth Street, the office of The Physical Culture Magazine, of which MacFadden is editor. MacFadden gave his address as Physical Culture City, N. J. He wore sandals and a broad-brimmed hat, and other clothes as well. The prisoners were arrested on warrants obtained by John J. Deering of the Vice Society. They were bailed out with a $1,000 bill, put up by counsel for Mr. MacFadden. This is the first cash bail accepted by Capt. Dooley since Magistrate Moss lectured one of his Sergeants on oppression.

The posters which Mr. Comstock considers objectionable are said to be photographs of contestants who took part in last year's exhibition at Madison Square Garden. One of them shows the women prize winners, ten or twelve young women in white union suits with sashes around their waists standing or reclining in various positions. Another poster shows a man wearing a pair of sandals and a leopard's skin as a breech-cloth.

Most of the posters printed for the exhibition already have been put up. Mr. MacFadden thinks the S. S. V. will have a time tearing them all down.

"The purpose of this exhibition, which now has become annual," said MacFadden yesterday afternoon, "is to show how the spread of physical culture has improved the human body. Manifestly that cannot be done if the exhibitors are covered with clothing.

"There will be various athletic contests. The men contestants will be nude from the waist up; the women will wear white tights or union suits with sashes around their waists. To impress upon the audience the good of physical culture the men and women will pose before a black curtain and under a light.

"All this was done last year, and nobody became indignant. Women in tights are seen in every circus; men nude from the waist up or even nude altogether with the exception of a breech cloth are seen at all sorts of athletic exhibitions.

"Comstock's intentions are good, no doubt, but he is going too far. I shall fight this case through every court in the land before I'll let it drop. If he beats me in court to-morrow I'll modify the posters a little for the benefit of the coming show. If I beat him the same old posters will go up. The exhibition itself will come off on schedule time, and in the way we intended.

"More than 100 men and 35 young women will take part in the exhibition, and it is too late now to either call it off or change the rules governing it.

"The posing of the contestants we consider one of the most beneficial parts of the exhibition. Contestants are coming from all parts of the country."

MAXWELL PRAISES TEACHERS.

They Are De Luxe Editions of the Good Samaritan, He Says.

City Supt. Maxwell of the school department heaped coals of fire upon the heads of some of his most aggressive critics last night when he publicly eulogized the school teachers of this city in an address on "The Teacher's Opportunity" before the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

According to Dr. Maxwell, the public school teacher of to-day is a de luxe edition of the Good Samaritan of Biblical fame, rich in quality, yet modestly bound.

"If I should tell you of all the deeds of kindness done by teachers," he said, "how they have clothed the naked and fed the hungry, how when their own slender means were exhausted they have appealed to their well-to-do friends and induced children of the rich to help the children of the poor, and how ingenious they have been in preventing humiliation from resting on those who are assisted, you would certainly be amazed. For the teacher is no Pharisee, and never makes parade of his good deeds."

SENTENCES MIXED.

Old Man Got the 4 Years' Term Intended for Young Burglar—Error Corrected

"Arrah," quoth old George Ryan in the General Sessions yesterday, "foor years the Judge said—foor years for an ould man of sixty phwat's only br-roke a bit o' glass out o' a windy."

"Bully for the white-haired old Judge," cried a young man who came away from the railing in front of Recorder Goff just after the old man had been disposed of. "I'm having fine luck to-day. One day was all he gave me, and even my own lawyer said if I got off with a year or two I'd have to call myself lucky."

George Ryan, 58 years old and charged with breaking a plate glass window, had been sentenced to the four-year term meant for twenty-two-year-old George Ryan, who was charged with and convicted of burglary. It took the Recorder some time to straighten things out, but the younger Ryan looked a great deal less happy when he was marched off to serve his term.

GLASS EYE FOR A DOG.

Operation Performed on H. L. Swift's Pet Boston Terrier.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—"Granny," the pet Boston terrier of Herbert L. Swift, to-day underwent an operation at the Cat and Dog Hospital for the removal of an injured eye. A trained nurse administered an anaesthetic, and Dr. C. A. White performed the operation.

A glass eye, which Mr. Swift ordered from abroad as soon as specialists assured him that the sight of "Granny's" eye had been destroyed, is expected soon and will be set in place immediately.

A bulletin sent to the Swift residence from the hospital to-night said: "She is doing as well as can be expected."

Lord Willoughby de Eresby was born in 1867 and educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge. He has represented the Horncastle Division of Lincolnshire in the House of Commons since 1894. The New York branch of the Breese family is descended from Sidney Breese, a native of Shrewsbury, England, who settled in this city in 1730, and was at one time Master of the Port. His tombstone in Trinity Churchyard bears this quaint epitaph:

"Sidney Breese, June 8th, 1767. Made by himself. Ha! Sidney, Sidney, Lyst thou here? I here lye, till time has flown, to its extremity."

DUCHESS AT THE RACES.

Her Grace of Marlborough the Centre of Interest at Belmont Park.

The Duchess of Marlborough was a visitor at the Belmont Park race course yesterday in company with Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. The Duchess attracted much attention from the race-going crowd, and all the time she was at the course the Belmont box, in the front part of the grand stand, was the centre of interest to the women visitors.

The Belmont party came over to the races from O. H. P. Belmont's country home near Hempstead, L. I., in a big automobile. The Duchess was escorted from the motor car to the box by Col. G. B. M. Harvey. After Coy Maid had won the Hunter Handicap the party left the track.

"Frühlingsluft," the warm breeze of Spring, was responsible for many strange and highly irregular pranks that were gathered together as an operetta at the Irving Place Theatre last evening. To say that "Frühlingsluft" is an operetta by Strauss is to give a false impression. No Strauss is responsible for it, but it is compounded of a number of tunes by Josef Strauss, the brother of Johann, to fit which a libretto has been devised. It is not much of a libretto except for its provision of numerous farcical situations and some eccentric characters; but many of the tunes are very good ones, with some of the authentic Strauss sparkle and effervescence.

But chiefly "Frühlingsluft" brought Miss Lina Abarbanell before the New York public, and to such of it as was in the Irving Place Theatre last night she afforded much delight, with promise of more to come before the season is over. She is a genuine comic actress in her line, which is that of the soubrette, with an engaging personality, if not striking personal beauty, grace of movement, an arch and mischievous humor, and an inexhaustible spirit, which finds expression in incessantly various ways.

But the most enjoyable of Miss Abarbanell's gifts is, after all, her voice and her admirable singing. It is a soprano of clearness and power. More can be judged of its quality when she is heard in music of a more straightforward kind, but she made it very plain last night that she has an admirable enunciation and a power of real comic expression in music. The most elaborate of her songs was in the third set, with the refrain "Ich bin nicht betrunken," and her cleverness was made evident in the skill with which she kept away from the border line of vulgarity. The part she had last night was that of a peasant girl who comes to town to take service and who fascinates all the men of the household.

Gustav von Seyffertitz made the most of the aged father-in-law, Knickebein, who is afflicted with a large number of diseases but in other respects is quite well, and who is suddenly brought back to youth again by the Spring breezes and the charms of Hanni, the maid servant. Edmund Loewe as Hildebrandt, Curt Weber as Dr. Landtmann, Georgine Neuendorff as Knickebein's wife, also contributed to the gayety of the occasion. There was much enthusiasm in the audience, and at the end of the second act, besides the chief actors, Mr. Conried and Mr. Bryk, the conductor, were called upon the stage; and there were demonstrations of special favor for Miss Abarbanell.

Hippodrome Acrobat Dies of Injury.

Oscar de Bollen, a member of the athletic troupe known as The De Bollen Brothers, playing at the Hippodrome, died late yesterday afternoon in the Murray Hill Sanitarium of concussion of the brain as a result of an accident last Tuesday afternoon. In his act at the afternoon performance the acrobat fell on his head. He was removed at once to the sanitarium and his condition improved until yesterday, when he died suddenly. A collection taken up among his comrades will be used to defray the funeral expenses.

"Little Dorrit" as a Play in Vienna.

MYSTERY OF A FAN.

An Advertisement Intimates That It Was Stolen in Church.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 5.—The pastor and members of the Summerfield Methodist Episcopal Church are wondering what troubles are in store for the flock when the mystery of a missing fan shall have been solved. They felt scandalized at the intimation that one of the flock had been guilty of stealing from another during the service. The cause of it all is the following advertisement, which appeared in one of the local newspapers on Tuesday:

To avoid troubls, the party who carried away fan from Summerfield Methodist Episcopal Church last Sunday evening must return it to the sexton, as she is known.

Several of the church women visited the office of the newspaper, in the hope that the clerk who had taken the advertisement might give them some clue as to who had left it for insertion. But he refused to satisfy their curiosity.

Mrs. Robinson, the wife of the pastor, said that the advertisement had been the one topic among some members of the congregation who were at the church last night preparing for an entertainment, but no one knew who had lost the fan or who could have taken it.

"It was a queer advertisement," said the pastor's wife. "It doesn't seem to me that any good church member would have said it in just that way."

Sexton Bennett denied having any hand in inserting the advertisement.

A VICTIM OF ADVERTISING.

Reward Seeker Taken for the Rewarder Punched and Arrested.

Samuel Micnic has lost his faith in a certain kind of journalism. The police have taken it out of him. Last evening he was one of many hundred persons around Carnegie Hall during the Democratic City Convention trying to identify a man employed by a newspaper who was to give $300 to the person who would tap him and call him by a name made famous in certain stories of crime. Micnic looked hard, but saw nobody corresponding in appearance to the fiction criminal. Suddenly a man stopped in front of him and cried:

"Hallo there, —, I see you."

"What you mean?" was all Micnic could reply.

"I mean you're it," repoined the other man. "I want the reward."

"Go 'way," said Micnic impatiently.

The controversy attracted the attention of many persons, most of whom pointed at Micnic and cried:

"There he is. Why, that's him, sure enough. Say, old man, we want the reward."

Micnic protested, but nobody listened to him. At last somebody said:

"Soak him. He's a fake."

The cry was taken up by other voices. Micnic found himself jostled, pushed, and punched. Mounted Policemen Murphy and McNulty pushed through on their horses. Sixty persons explained the situation to them. Both laughed and took a look at Micnic.

"I guess you're it," said Murphy. "Or if you ain't, you look it, so you'd better move on."

"Why should I?" said Micnic.

Off he went between the two horses to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, where he was arrested. A man who protested in his behalf went too. He said he was Nicholas Meyers of 680 East 162d Street. Meyers and Micnic were put in adjoining cells.

PRESENT AND ACCOUNTED FOR

Marine Robert Vaughan Corrects a Report of His Death.

Robert Vaughan, a marine in the navy yard barracks, called at the Leonard Street Police Station last night and declared that he wished to correct a report that he had been burned to death in a fire in a lodging house in West Street on Sept. 30. He lived in the house from Aug. 19 to Sept. 19, when he re-enlisted in the marines and went to the navy yard.

Four men were burned in the lodging house fire. Two died in the Hudson Street Hospital, and two bodies were so badly burned as to be almost unrecognizable. One of them was said to have been that of Vaughan, and under that name it was sent to the Morgue.

The police now believe that the body mistaken for that of Vaughan was that of William Farley, a workman.

Italian Caught on Havemeyer Tract Had Thirteen Songbirds.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 5.—Accompanied by Pasquale Corretta of New York, Joseph Buchicchio of this city took advantage of the open game season yesterday to do some gunning. They spent the day in the Palmer Hill section in a woodland owned by H. O. Havemeyer.

Buchicchio was seen shooting a songbird, and Warden Schlechtweg was notified and arrested the gunners. He found thirteen songbirds in Buchicchio's bag. This morning the prisoner was fined $165.45. The penalty was $10 for each bird, $10 for the offense itself, and included in the costs a fee of $20 for the Game Warden. Buchicchio intended to sell the feathers to milliners.

TAFT WANTS MORE PAY FOR AMERICAN CONSULS

Says They Are Objects of Ridicule in the Far East.

ASKS FOR SOME BIG BUILDINGS

Senators and Representatives Also Impressed with the Necessity of Higher Expenditures.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Secretary Taft has impressed on the President and Secretary Root the supreme importance of reorganizing the Consular Service in the East, if not in all parts of the world. This conviction is the result of the recent journey of the War Secretary and his party in the Philippines and to Japan and China.

Not only Secretary Taft, but also the various Senators and Representatives who are with him were profoundly impressed by the disadvantage under which American Consuls have to perform their duties in China. The Secretary says he is not surprised to hear that capable men do not desire to enter the service. He urges that in China, of all places on earth, they should be paid adequately and aided in holding up the trade facilities of the United States. Other countries pay their Consuls three and four times the salaries that we pay and provide them with suitable consulates. Our Consuls in China have in some cases to hire two or three clerks out of their salaries and live in quarters that are ridiculed by the Chinese.

Secretary Taft says that the Consulates at places like Shanghai and Canton would justify, in his judgment, buildings worth $250,000, with a large force of clerks. The English and German Consulates in some of the Chinese cities have more than a hundred clerks.

SAVING JERSEY'S FORESTS.

State Buys Two Tracts of Land for Timber Experiments.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Oct. 5.—In the purchase yesterday from Dr. John Gifford of Princeton, former Forester at Cornell University, of 300 acres of woodland at May's Landing, and of a 600-acre tract at Tuckerton, Ocean County, the State Board of Forestry took the first step toward putting the new forestry preserve plan in operation. The Tuckerton tract is only a fraction of a large reservation, covered with considerable second growth timber, that is to be acquired there.

With these tracts as a basis, the purpose of the board is to demonstrate the best methods of refreshing cut-over and denuded lands; of showing how to prevent injury by forest fires, and the general administering and care of woodlands in a way to make them self-creating and self-sustaining.

The movement is regarded as of much importance in New Jersey, where forest fires and want of skill in care and cutting are fast wiping out the forests.

POLICEMAN FINDS A LEAK

It Was in a Pneumatic Mail Tube and He Was Standing on It.

For several days the Post Office authorities have been searching for a leak in the pneumatic tubes through which mail is sent to the sub-station at Grand Central Station. The leak got growing larger until yesterday afternoon, when no mail could be sent through the tube.

The leak was found about 5 o'clock by Policeman Benkler of the City Hall station, who felt the air coming up about his feet while he stood on the crossing under the platform from the Brooklyn Bridge to the City Hall Park.

The sensation of a stream of air issuing from the ground was new to Benkler, and he reported it to City Hall Station. The Post Office authorities were informed, and late last night a gang of laborers was put to work tearing up the crossing.

DRUGGISTS RAP SENATE.

Say It Is "a Body of Railroad Agents"—Indorse Roosevelt's Rate Policy.

When a delegate to the convention of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association referred yesterday to the United States Senate as "a body of railroad agents," the whole convention broke into wild applause. It happened during a discussion of the question whether the delegates to be sent by the association to the Inter-State Law Convention at Chicago Oct. 26 should be instructed to support the policy of President Roosevelt.

The rate question was repeatedly mentioned as "the most important question before the convention." And finally the following amendment to the resolution providing for the delegates was adopted with overwhelming majority:

That the convention instruct the delegates to take such action as they deem necessary in line with President Roosevelt's recommendation that additional powers shall be granted the Inter-State Commerce Commission, to the extent that the Commission shall have power to enforce their rulings when called upon in cases of dispute between shippers and transportation companies.

Last night a majority of the delegates and their families attended a performance of "Her Great Match" at the Criterion Theatre, with Maxine Elliott in the principal part. Later they inspected the Times Building.

IN MEMORY OF JOHN HARVARD.

St. Saviour's Church to be Restored with Americans' Money.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The restoration of St. Saviour's Church, Southwark, as a memorial to John Harvard, will probably be carried out within a few months.

Of the $10,000 required, $9,000 has already been secured by subscriptions from Americans resident in London and visiting Americans.

John Harvard, the founder of Harvard College, was baptized in St. Saviour's Church in 1607. His parents kept the Old Queen's Head Inn, in Southwark. Recently a window in St. Saviour's in memory of Harvard was presented by ex-Ambassador Choate.

The church is one of the oldest in London. Fragments of the original Norman nave, completed in the year 1106, still remain, and the choir and lady chapel date from the early thirteenth century.

The church is now practically the cathedral of South London. It has an interest for Americans outside that which it possesses on account of its connection with Harvard. On the wall opposite the west door is a monument to William Emerson, who was born in 1483 and died in 1575, and is believed to have been an ancestor of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

James I. of Scotland, the poet-King, and Joanna Beaufort, in honor of whom he wrote his best-known poem, were married in the church in 1425.

ORIGINAL GREELEY MAN DEAD.

Lewis Carmichael, Friend of Many Public Men, Ends Days a Pauper.

Special to The New York Times.

MARGARETVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Lewis Carmichael, who was known as the original boomer for Horace Greeley in 1872, was found dead in a barn at Sidney yesterday afternoon. He was on the street as usual on Tuesday. He was 83 years old, and was a familiar figure in the section that he frequented with his bent form, crutch, and cane. He lived on charity, and slept in barns.

Carmichael had been a man of originality and strong intellect, the associate of public men in various parts of the country. Misfortune and ill-health bore heavily upon him, but his mind was vigorous and full of schemes for humanity and the Democratic Party.

He was a close friend of Presidents Van Buren and Buchanan, and knew Jefferson Davis, A. H. Stephens, and J. P. Benjamin, who were later in the Confederacy. In 1860 he attended the Democratic National Convention and almost captured the Presidential nomination for Daniel Dickinson.

Before the convention of 1872, Carmichael prevailed upon Greeley to accept the nomination. He visited every county in the State and got a united delegation for him from New York, and then started the movement in other States. The result was the nomination of Greeley at Cincinnati over Charles Francis Adams and Stanley Matthews.

MRS. F. C. PENFIELD DEAD.

American Diplomat's Wife Started Our Colony at Cairo.

Mrs. Frederic Courtland Penfield, whose husband is well known as an author and diplomat, died on Wednesday afternoon at the Everett House, in Union Square. Mrs. Penfield, who was Miss Katherine Albert Wells, the daughter of Albert Wells of this city, married Mr. Penfield in 1892.

When Mr. Penfield was appointed United States Diplomatic Agent and Consul General, with rank of Minister Resident, to Egypt in 1893, Mrs. Penfield went with him and remained in Cairo until 1897. At that time Cairo was competing with the south of France as a Winter resort. Mrs. Penfield became very prominent in society in Egypt and was the principal factor in starting the American Winter colony in Cairo, which has grown to great proportions.

Mrs. Penfield married twice; her first husband was Col. Edward McMurdo of London. The funeral will be held this forenoon from the Everett House.

WOMAN FIGHTS GUN CLUB.

Mrs. Harrison Twice Removes Trespass Signs at Long Point.

BROOKHAVEN, L. I., Oct. 5.—Mrs. Nancy Harrison, wife of Hugh H. Harrison of Harrison & White of 52 Broadway, New York City, recently removed several trespass signs erected by the Smith's Point Gun Club, one of the wealthiest of Long Island's sporting organizations, and which claims title to Long Point under a lease from the Smith heirs. Yesterday the second set of signs disappeared soon after Mrs. Harrison was notified of their presence.

Two years ago the Harrisons located on their present estate, and have since acquired considerable upland and shore-front property. Long Point, Mrs. Harrison contends, is within the bounds of the title of her purchase from the estate of William Phillips. Mrs. Harrison has spent, it is said, more than $15,000 in improving the property. The Smith heirs, who own more than 10,000 acres of valuable land and water rights in the neighborhood, which descended to them from the original patentee under the British crown, have always claimed ownership of Long Point, which is the centre of the most valuable shooting and fishing grounds along the entire south shore. The Smiths leased to the Smith's Point Gun Club a large area which included Long Point.

Last week signs warning persons against trespassing on the Point were erected. Immediately upon hearing of this Mrs. Harrison engaged George Reeves and Forest Albin, boatmen, to take her down Carmen's River to the Point, and there she quickly laid the signs low. Mrs. Harrison did not ask either of the men to assist her in taking down the signs.

Yesterday Mrs. Harrison was notified that the signs were up again. She again visited the Point, and tore them down. The boatmen, who, for years, have been barred by the Smiths from shooting in Carman's River, side with Mrs. Harrison.

AL ADAMS' BROTHER DROWNED

Body Found in Stranded Boat, Head Hanging in Water.

BARRINGTON, R. I., Oct. 5.—The body of Hiram O. Adams, brother of "Al" Adams of New York, was found in a boat stranded in Hundred Acre Cove, on the Barrington River, here to-day. The head and upper part of the body were hanging over the side of the boat in about two feet of water.

Medical Examiner Allison of East Providence said that death occurred through accidental drowning, probably at least twenty-four hours before the body was found. Adams was about sixty years of age, and was formerly in business in Worcester, but for several years had lived here. A widow and three adult children live in Worcester.

MORTGAGE TAX TEST CASE.

Kingston Man Seeks to Evade Levy by a Mandamus.

KINGSTON, Oct. 5.—The first proceeding to test the new mortgage tax law was taken before Justice Betts in Supreme Court to-day. Application was made for a writ of mandamus to compel the County Clerk to record a contract to purchase real estate.

The property was purchased under contract by George L. Green, Jr., who offered it for record without payment of the tax. He asserts that the law does not apply to a contract for purchase when offered for record by the grantee, and cannot constitutionally so apply. Justice Betts reserved decision.

TRYING DU BOIS CASE WITH ONLY TEN JURORS

One Member Couldn't Understand What It Was All About.

OLD MISER STARVED HIMSELF

When He Ate in a Restaurant He Wrapped Up the Scraps for His Next Meal.

Many gray-haired men and women who had known Alpheus D. Du Bois in the days when he was a dandy were in the Supreme Court yesterday to testify in the suit brought by Mrs. Ivy Blanche McKee, Du Bois's daughter, who is seeking to upset her father's will. The witnesses described things that happened long before the civil war, recalling incidents of that period as readily as if they had happened yesterday. It was a common thing for a witness in giving an answer to say "that was in June, 1848," or "sixty-one years ago this Christmas coming."

William J. Goldey, who had been a teacher in Public School 36 when Du Bois was Principal there, testified that he had entered the school as a teacher in 1848, or, as he put it, "fifty-seven years ago this Spring."

"How old are you?" asked counsel.

"While I am not a young man," replied the witness, "I—well, I will tell you I am in my seventy-seventh year."

"How frequently did you see Mr. Du Bois?"

"Every day; I am never absent from school."

"Was he a man who liked money?"

"He was an exceedingly penurious man. Money seemed to be his god. He hated to spend it."

The witness said that Du Bois had a safe deposit box with the Merchants' Safe Deposit Company, and he, the witness, also had one there and was in the habit of going there with Du Bois. Du Bois made a contrivance which he said would prevent any one from robbing him. It consisted of two blocks of wood with sheet iron connecting them, having latches and keys. This he put inside his strong box and labeled it dynamite. Du Bois had explained to the witness that nobody would touch it with the dynamite label on it.

Du Bois once told the witness that the reason he kept his name out of the City Directory was because he did not want the tax people after him.

Mrs. Louise Herman, in whose house Du Bois passed his declining years, was again called as a witness, and identified a dilapidated looking dressing gown which she said Du Bois wore about the house to save his clothing. It was described as a bathrobe by one of the lawyers, while another referred to it as a Turkish gown. A second gown was introduced in evidence. This was comparatively new, and the witness said Du Bois kept that one for state occasions.

Annie Partland, a young woman who was acquainted with Du Bois in 1901, had called on him for material for a magazine story. On her first visit she said his conversation was rather dreamy, and he offered her a piece of stale cake to eat. On her second visit she said she found him eating chicken, and he cut off a small piece of it and offered it to her. The last time she saw him was in a restaurant, and he told her he had saved some Hamburg steak from his dinner of the night before. He had food in his pocket, and carried a spoon which he used in taking the food from a tin box.

During recess Justice Kellogg held a consultation with the lawyers in the case, and later called Juror No. 4 into his private office. After talking with the juror the juror did not return to his seat, and the case went on with eleven jurors in the box. No explanation was made of the withdrawal or removal of the juror.

The case will probably have to go on to-day with ten jurors, as Juror No. 9, John De Salvo, asked Justice Kellogg to excuse him. He said he was unable to understand the case, and that he could not understand English clearly. On Wednesday night he said when his cousin asked what the case was about he answered that he did not know, and his cousin then suggested that he tell the Court about it. Although the trial has been going on for several days De Salvo told Justice Kellogg that he did not know one word that the lawyers had said in the case.

Justice Kellogg consulted with the lawyers, and they practically agreed to allow the case to go on with ten jurors. However, the Justice said he would take the matter under consideration until to-day.

AGAINST WHIPPING POST.

Judge Olmsted Denies Things a Woman Reporter Said About Him.

Justice Olmsted in Special Sessions says that hereafter when young women reporters come to ask his views on various questions he will have a stenographer present to take down his answers. This is because a soft-voiced, heart-winning young woman made him declare for publication yesterday that he favored the whipping post for wife beaters.

Every Judge, as a rule, has his pet aversion among the long list of criminal offenses enumerated in the Penal Code. Justice McAvoy, who has worn the ermine less than a month, has already discovered that adulteration of milk is the crime that should be punished to the utmost. In the same way Justice Olmsted long has been giving his particular attention to wife beating. Two days ago he sent one such offender to prison for a year and another for nine months. Yet he knows that half the time he punishes the family of the brute more than the brute himself by sending him to prison.

"But," he said yesterday, "I never said that I favored the whipping post. I don't. What I said was that there are some things to be said in favor of it. And there are."

HALT FLOATING POOLROOM.

Federal Authorities Take Action on Lake Michigan Boat.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Gambling on Lake Michigan has been stopped, at least temporarily, by the forfeiture of the sailing license of Capt. Stephen Jones of the "floating poolroom" City of Traverse. Capt. Jones was also fined $500 for violating the Government marine law.

The trouble arose to-day, when the Federal officials discovered that the boat had been transferred from the supposed ownership of Capt. Jones to Harry ... of the gambling combination without a legal record being made.

The owners of the boat protested against the payment of the fine, and an appeal will be made to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor for a decision on the matter.

Place for Ben Daniels.

DENVER, Oct. 5.—Private advices from Washington say that Ben Daniels, formerly one of the best-known characters in Colorado mining camps, has been appointed United States Marshal for Arizona. Before enlisting as a Rough Rider Daniels was Marshal of Cripple Creek. Senator Teller blocked his confirmation two years ago. The President told him to wait.

BLAST KILLS ONE, HURTS FIVE.

Another Accident on Fifth Avenue Throws Street Into a Panic.

Another accident occurred yesterday afternoon in the excavation being made on the east side of Fifth Avenue, between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Streets, for a department store. It was caused by a workman who touched off a heavy blast of dynamite before the nearby workmen had got out of range of the flying fragments of rock.

Giovanni Gapassa of 872 Eleventh Avenue was instantly killed by a big piece of rock that fell upon his head, fracturing his skull. Ivani Martia of 213 Cherry Street was knocked unconscious by several pieces of rock, and John Carbari of 75 Sullivan Street, a driver, had his scalp torn by a sharp fragment of rock. They were sent to the New York Hospital. Three other Italian workmen were slightly injured.

The charge of dynamite was so heavy that a hail of small stone fragments fell upon the crowded section of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Streets nearby. The cries of the wounded and frightened workmen following the heavy report of the dynamite helped to throw the streets into a panic.

Women on the sidewalks ran about screaming, while dust and dirt fell upon them. Fifth Avenue was crowded with vehicles at the time. Horses reared and traffic was tied up for twenty minutes. Extra men had to be sent from the Traffic Squad Station at 1 East Twenty-seventh Street to untangle the mixture of vehicles.

The excavation work, which is being carried on by the O'Rourke Engineering and Construction Company, has been attended with many accidents and much trouble. A huge stone was hurled into the rear wall of the Roosevelt home at 200 Madison Avenue Wednesday. A laborer was killed there a week ago by a falling derrick.

ROBBED ON PALISADES.

Two Victims of Masked Footpads in the Hospital.

Three hold-ups, all apparently by the same two men, took place last night on a pathway leading up the Palisades from the Weehawken Ferry to the Boulevard loop at Clifton Park. The first victim was Semi Signoneff, 52 years old, of West New York. He was near the end of the path when he was set upon by two men. One of them he did not get a good look at. The other was tall and slim, and wore a light hat. He had on a mask made of a red pocket handkerchief, with eyeholes cut in it.

Signoneff resisted, and was knocked down and beaten and kicked. His watch and some money he had in his trousers pocket were taken. One of the highwaymen cut off Signoneff's shoes to see if he had any money concealed in them and slashed one of his ankles. Fifteen dollars which the victim had in an inside vest pocket was overlooked.

Signoneff was left lying unconscious in the path. He was found there some time later and removed to the North Hudson Hospital, where he revived sufficiently to tell what had happened to him.

About an hour after Signoneff was found, Martin Kelly, a railroad man of Bedford, N. J., started to ascend the same path. He was set upon and beaten into unconsciousness. The thieves got $11.50 and his gold watch. He was taken to the North Hudson Hospital, where it was said his condition was serious.

After Kelly had been attacked, Robert Lockwood, 17 years old, of West New York, was stopped on the path by two men. The footpads did not take the trouble to hold him and while they were going through his pockets he jumped away from them and ran. They did not follow.

KILLED IN BURGLAR HUNT.

Boy, Mortally Shot by His Uncle, Seriously Wounds His Aunt.

Special to The New York Times.

VANDERGRIFT, Penn., Oct. 5.—Murray Knappenberger shot and almost instantly killed his nephew, Lloyd Remalay, aged seventeen, shortly after midnight this morning in the little town of Mateer, near here, and the boy, in his dying convulsions, shot and seriously wounded his aunt, Miss Lottie Knappenberger.

The boy was awakened by what he thought was a burglar. Armed with a revolver, he hurried across the street and informed his uncle. The latter, securing a shotgun, joined him. The two started around the house in opposite directions. In the darkness Knappenberger met his nephew, supposed he was the burglar, and fired. The full charge entered the boy's abdomen.

Miss Knappenberger was rushing to the boy's side, when the revolver in his hand was discharged, the bullet entering her thigh.

MEAT INSPECTION REFORM.

Secretary Wilson to Discuss It with the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The first matter of importance which Secretary Wilson will take up with the President will be the reorganization of the meat inspection service of the Department of Agriculture.

The service now costs $770,000 annually. Secretary Wilson estimates that an additional appropriation of $75,000 would enable him to undertake the inspection of animals slaughtered by all the small concerns as well as by the large ones who do an export business.

At the large meat-producing centres the small and independent packers have several times offered to pay the cost of inspection under a system of fees for animals actually inspected, but the Secretary could find no authority for taking up the work without action by Congress.

THE ST. PAUL GOES ASHORE.

Passenger Steamship Strikes Near San Francisco—All Hands Saved.

EUREKA, Cal., Oct. 5.—The steamship St. Paul, bound from San Francisco for Portland, Oregon, went ashore this morning at Punta Gorda, a short distance south of the entrance to this harbor, during a dense fog. She had seventy-five passengers on board, all of whom were safely landed on the beach.

The vessel, which was laden with a cargo of general merchandise, probably will be a total loss.

The St. Paul belongs to the San Francisco and Portland Steamship Company and is en route to Portland, Oregon, under command of Capt. C. Randall.

Appeal in Court to Jerome—Weisell Looting Trial Put Off Again.

A delay of one day was granted yesterday by Justice Davy in the trial of Armitage Mathews, which was to have begun in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. Lawyer McManus said that former District Attorney Olcott, chief counsel for the defense, was occupied with a case in another court.

"He had no business to go into another trial," exclaimed Assistant District Attorney Rand. "He knew that this trial was to begin to-day and that a special panel had been drawn for the case."

Justice Davy granted postponement, however, saying that he would do so only from day to day in order to be able to begin the case the moment Mr. Olcott was able to attend.

District Attorney Jerome was present. Mr. McManus appealed to the Court for permission to see certain letters in the possession of the District Attorney.

"Yes," replied Mr. Rand, "if the defendant will in return give us a chance to see the checks cashed by him and the letters written by him to John W. Wooten."

"We don't know anything about such checks," answered Mr. McManus.

"Let the defendant make an affidavit to that effect," Mr. Jerome broke in grimly.

"Oh, be fair to me, Jerome," Mathews exclaimed.

Mathews was indicted with John W. Wooten, Samuel I. Ferguson, and David Rothschild for conspiracy to loot the Weisell estate, of which Rothschild was temporary administrator. Rothschild is now serving a nine-year term in State's Prison. Wooten has been convicted and sentenced to imprisonment on a separate charge, but is now being kept in the Tombs to appear as a witness against Mathews.

WHOLE COURT FOR HANSEN.

One Part of General Sessions Set Apart for Philanthropic Cases.

An entire part of General Sessions has been set aside for cases in which Carl Fischer-Hansen, the lawyer who says he is doing business only as a matter of philanthropy, appears as counsel.

This move was decided on by District Attorney Jerome after somebody had called his attention to the fact that there were sixty-nine prisoners in the Tombs claiming Hansen for their counsel, and one-half of the criminal calendar was filled with cases in which the same lawyer had a hand.

Recorder Goff will dispose of the Hansen cases. On Monday he tried fourteen of them, and on Tuesday fifteen more.

Home After 37 Years Only to Die.

William Marshall, aged 74, a retired shipping merchant of Shanghai, China, who recently came to New York and has been staying at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Burke, 66 South Fourth Street, Williamsburg, was found dead in bed yesterday. For thirty-seven years Mr. Marshall lived in China. His ambition was to retire from business to pass his remaining days with his daughter and her children. When he came home the meeting nearly overcame him, and the excitement is believed to have affected his heart.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA HORSE SHOW FEATURE

Morristown Society Greets Innovation with Marked Approval.

TWO FIRSTS FOR BLAIR

Mrs. Gerken and Mrs. Holloway Also Score Double Victories—Kinnicutt's Polo Pony Leads.

The eighth annual horse show of the Morristown Field Club opened yesterday on the club grounds at Morristown, N. J., and was attended by about 2,500 persons. It was distinctly a society event, the entries belonging to the Summer colonies of Morristown, Madison, Bernardsville, Plainfield, and other fashionable centres. The baseball grounds of the club presented an attractive appearance. The warm weather permitted the women to wear their Summer costumes. A novel institution borrowed from England was one of the features of the show. At 5 P. M. tea parties were formed in many of the boxes, and this innovation scored immediate favor.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Phipps, Admiral Cooper, H. McK. Twombly, Miss Anita De Bary, C. W. Armour, De Witt Clinton Flanagan, C. Ledyard Blair, Joseph Larocque, Jr., Col. Three entries secured double blue ribbons. Mrs. John Gerken's Newsboy was first in the runabout class, and followed this victory by taking premier honors for single harness horses. MORRELL'S AUTO TOO FAST.

Racing Board Chairman Arrested on Vanderbilt Course and Fined $25.

Sporting circles are chuckling over the misfortune which occurred yesterday to Robert Lee Morrell, Chairman of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association.

Mr. Morrell is the advocate of speed laws and has for long been lecturing chauffeurs who have been found guilty of negligence in this respect. Yesterday afternoon, when he heard that two chauffeurs had been arrested on the Jericho Turnpike, near Mineola, L. I., for speeding, his face naturally took a stern aspect.

The two men who had been arrested were Felix Navarro and George Augier. They were halted by Deputies Fall, Wheeler, and Clough and later fined $50 each, as it was their second offense. Navarro paid his fine and departed, but Augier, having no money with him, called up Mr. Morrell at the Garden City Hotel and confessed his dilemma.

Mr. Morrell immediately got into his car and started to the rescue, intending at the same time to reprimand Augier. Whether his indignation got into the automobile is not stated, but at the fateful Jericho Turnpike Deputies Hoffmann, Benham, and Brundals placed him also under arrest. Mr. Morrell was fined $25. It was his first offense. He also paid $50 for Augier's arrest. Two days ago the Chairman of the Racing Board had occasion to suspend H. H. Lytle, who is to drive the six-cylinder Pope-Toledo car in the coming Vanderbilt Cup race.

The French chauffeur Durey, who is to start second in the big race, was also arrested yesterday on the turnpike and fined $50.

AUTO TOURING BENEFITS.

Better Motor Facilities Secured for Americans While Abroad.

Plans were formulated yesterday by the Directors of the American Automobile Association, which will bring the automobilists of this and foreign countries into more friendly and helpful relations, particularly when touring from one country to another. What might be called a reciprocal automobile treaty for the interchange of club courtesies, together with information regarding routes, speed laws, and license requirements, was authorized with the Touring Club of France, the Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Motor Club of Belgium.

The Directors of the American Automobile Association, who met in the rooms of the Automobile Club of America, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street, were unanimous on the subject, and it is believed that many of the difficulties under which American motor car tourists suffer in planning tours through Europe will be obviated under the new arrangement. The Touring Club of France is the most successful organization of its kind in the world, having 90,000 members, and its collection of road maps is wonderfully complete for nearly all of France.

English Football Team Wins.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—The team of English players defeated the Thistles of this city to-day in the association football match on the grounds of the Germantown Cricket Club by a score of 5 goals to 0. The Thistle team is composed of Englishmen residing in this city. The visitors played all around the home team in the first half, scoring four goals. In the second period the time was cut from forty-five to thirty minutes, and the visitors eased up in their playing, scoring only once.

DAN PATCH PACES IN 1:56.

"Black Whirlwind" Equals His Own World's Record.

LEXINGTON, Oct. 5.—One of the largest crowds that ever attended harness races in this city saw Dan Patch, the champion pacer, equal his own world's record of 1:56 to-day, and also saw Ethel's Pride, owned by John Sheperd of Boston and driven by W. J. Andrews, win the seventeenth renewal of the Transylvania Stake, worth $5,000. Patch was driven by H. C. Hersey, and his fractional time was 0:29¼, 0:58¾, 1:27¼, 1:56.

There were nine starters in the Transylvania, and Ethel's Pride sold favorite, with Turley second choice. In the first heat Turley finished a close second to Ethel's Pride. Geers, driving Turley, did not make his drive until too late. In the second heat Ethel's Pride took the lead, and Turley could not overtake her. Ethel's Pride led by a length all the way in the third heat. Mainland made a gallant struggle, and all but beat the Directum mare in a heart-breaking finish.

Bonalette had no trouble in winning the three-year-old pacing Futurity. At no time in any heat was the result in doubt. Miss Kenney and A. Penn each won two heats in the first division of the 2:18 trot, which was continued until to-morrow. The second division of the 2:18 trot was won by Mainsheet in a jog. Summary:

TROOPERS WIN AT POLO.

Squadron A Team Defeats Great Neck at Van Cortlandt.

Squadron A and Great Neck furnished two hours of lively and interesting sport yesterday at Van Cortlandt Park to several hundred spectators who are always attracted to Van Cortlandt Park when a match game is in prospect. The game was the only match in the annual Squadron tournament, and the home team retained its trophy, winning by a score of 4 goals to 2¼.

The troopers received one goal handicap, and each side made three goals, but penalties cost the visitors three-fourths of a goal. Borden was badly out of practice, and Jones's ponies were tired, as they had been sent to the field hurriedly from a distance, Jones having been substituted at the eleventh hour in place of L. S. Stoddard. Yet, despite these handicaps, it surprised the critics that Great Neck did not win, for the work of the Squadron was so erratic, lacking in accuracy of hitting as well as in power and general team work, that their victory was more in the nature of a gift than a well-earned triumph. Neither side, in fact, played up to its usual standard. Line-up and summary:

CHAMPION GOLF WOMEN.

Western Players Coming East for National Tournament Honors.

Miss Georgianna Bishop of the Brooklawn Golf Club, Bridgeport, Conn., will defend her title to the woman's National golf championship next week at Morristown, N. J., when the annual championship of the United States Golf Association will be played. Sixty-four entries have been received for this blue ribbon contest in women's golf of the year, and among them are two ex-champions, Mrs. Charles T. Stout and Miss Frances C. Griscom. Athletic Contests at the Irish Fair.

At the Irish Industrial Exhibition in Madison Square Garden last evening athletes from the leading clubs in the city participated in track and field games. Four events were contested, a 40-yard dash, won by P. J. Callahan of the New York Athletic Club in 0:04 4-5; a 40-yard sack race, won by Frank M. Pierson of the Twenty-second Regiment in 0:06 2-5; a high-jump handicap, won by C. H. Zoebrich of the Irish-American Athletic Club, with a jump of 5 feet 6½ inches, and a tug of war, in which seven teams competed. Pierson's time in the sack race is a new record.

COY MAID CANTERED IN FOR HUNTER HANDICAP

Kingston Filly Easily Won Stake Feature at Belmont Park.

SAILOR BOY BEAT BROOMSTICK

W. C. Daly's Maiden Colt Was First Over Odds-on Favorite in a Peculiarly Run Race.

It was regarded as a matter of course that one more track record was beaten at the Belmont Park track yesterday, but in view of the fact that all sorts of horses have run amazingly fast over the reconstructed track, horsemen paid but little attention to the feat of Just So, who cut two-fifths of a second from the former best record at seven furlongs and won in a gallop well off before his field in 1:26 1-5.

The first of the three-horse races was the time-honored stake, the Hunter, for fillies three years old, now a handicap, at one mile, for which event Coy Maid, running in the name of the Kenilworth Stable, was the top weight of the field. Throughout the betting Coy Maid was the most fancied, though Rose of Dawn was backed so heavily that at one time the two were equal choices. In the race Coy Maid broke first, but was steadied at once and permitted Delphie to go up into the lead, Delphie then drawing out clear and racing in the lead into the stretch, where she went a bit wide, Coy Maid then moving to the front without apparent effort and galloping in front to the winning post, with Rose of Dawn, hard ridden, a poor second, and Delphie third, beaten off. The time of the race, 1:39 1-5, lowered the record for the stake, the former best time being 1:39½, by Mollie Brant.

The second of the three-horse races was a condition event, at one mile and a furlong, last on the card, Broomstick, with his weight up, looking such a sure thing against Louis H. and Sailor Boy that he was sent to the post favorite at 12 to 1 on, while it was an even thing between the other two in the place betting. The result was singularly exasperating to the backers of the favorite, for, while Broomstick ran much the best horse, he was beaten in a finish that was as deceptive as any that Belmont Park racing has produced, Broomstick closing fast at the end after Martin, who rode him, had waited back behind Sailor Boy until it was just a bit too late for the favorite to get up. Broomstick was running over Sailor Boy when Martin did set him to going, and finished on the extreme outside, while Sailor Boy finished on the rail, the angle making it appear to a large part of the crowd that Broomstick had won in spite of the careless riding of his jockey. Martin was questioned by the Stewards, but, as it seemed to be plainly a case of overconfidence, his explanation was satisfactory to the officials.

In four of the six races the post favorites were successful, Sailor Boy being the only long-chance winner of the afternoon. Summary:

ST. AMANT'S $50,000 RACE.

Derby Winner of 1904 Captures the Rich Jockey Club Stakes.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The race for the Jockey Club Stakes of $50,000 for three-year-olds and upward, one mile and three-quarters, was run at Newmarket to-day, and was won by St. Amant, Derby winner of 1904. Polymelus was second and Mondamin was third.

Six horses started. Mondamin led to the bushes, when St. Amant drew to the front, and won a popular victory by three-quarters of a length. Four lengths separated second and third horses.

M. Blanc's crack horse Gouvernant was especially sent from France for this race, his owner's purpose being to avenge his defeat in the Derby of 1904 by Leopold de Rothschild's St. Amant, but the French horse was not even placed. M. de Rothschild's St. Amant went to pieces after his victory at Epsom, and until to-day had not been seen on a race course this season. He was not considered to have a chance in to-day's race, for which Gouvernant started a hot favorite at 11 to 8 on. The betting was 100 to 7 against St. Amant, 5 to 2 against Polymelus, and 20 to 1 against Mondamin.

MORE "GINGER" AT COLUMBIA.

Morley Rushes the Team After Poor Seton Hall Match Showing.

Hard scrimmage practice was the order for the Columbia University football candidates yesterday at American League Park. The showing in the game with Seton Hall was far from brilliant, and the coaches have come to the conclusion that a decided brace is necessary if the team is to win from Wesleyan to-morrow. For about half an hour Morley had two elevens crashing into each other without a touch-down by either side. The work was a decided improvement, there being more life in the play than for some time past. Bates, a new and promising man, appeared. He tips the scales at close to 210 pounds. During the scrimmage Bates played on the scrub against Davis. Lack of condition showed in his play, but it was evident that he will be a strong acquisition for the eleven.

The students are of the opinion that Capt. Thorp will be eligible to play in the game Saturday. Rumor had it that his difficulty with the Faculty was not serious, and that it really involved a question of some work that he had not received credit for. The case will come up to-day for consideration.

Although the weather was like that of an August day and a broiling sun made playing football a hardship, yet the Princeton team put in two hours of practice yesterday that was just as stiff as any it has had this season. The coaches are evidently determined to take no chances with Georgetown, which has held the Tigers down to a small score for the past two years. The scrimmages were spirited, although the scrub team was able to make very little headway against its heavier opponents. Otis caught the scrub kick-off and ran it back to midfield. From this point the first team took the ball to the scrub one-yard line by a series of short plunges and plays outside of tackle and soon rushed the ball over the goal line. The rest of the time was given up to punting, in which Bard for the first team and Harlan for the scrub both did well. H. Dillon was out of the game again, but his place was well filled by P. Waller.

Cornell had a long two-hour drill on Percy Field yesterday. All of the regulars were out, including Martin and Cook, who are on the injured list. After a long drill in tackling, in which Coach Warner insisted upon the men treating one another rather roughly, a short signal practice was run through by the 'Varsity, scrub, and freshman elevens, each using a different code. Then the scrubs were pitted against the 'Varsity in midfield and a half-hour struggle followed, in which neither team was able to score. On the 'Varsity Capt. Costello played right tackle on the offensive and full back on the defensive. It is planned to alternate Halliday with him this way in the games from now on.

Hogan Goes to Yale to Coach.

Ex-Capt. Hogan of Yale's football eleven yesterday entered the Columbia University Law School as a student. Hogan immediately upon entering the Law School applied for and received two weeks' leave of absence, which he will devote to coaching the Yale team.

WOMEN IN TENNIS DOUBLES.

Miss Reynolds and Miss Freeman Win Spirited Match in Essex Tourney.

Spectacular play in doubles was the feature of the tennis tournament yesterday by the women experts on the courts of the Essex County Country Club, Orange, N. J. There were several splendidly contested three-set matches in the doubles, but the event of the day's play was in the second round, in which Miss Reynolds and Miss Freeman defeated Miss Gordon and Miss Hitch. The latter pair played a carefully balanced game, and proved unusually good in driving from the back court.

The summary:

Women's Singles. — Semi-final Round — Miss Souther defeated Miss Heywood, 6—4, 6—2.

Women's Doubles.—First Round—Miss Gordon and Miss Hitch defeated Mrs. Holden and Miss Jewett, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2; Miss Reynolds and Miss Freeman defeated Miss Souther and Miss Firth, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1; Mrs. Byron and Miss Pugh defeated Mrs. Von Bernuth and Mrs. Auffermann, by default; Mrs. Underhill and Miss Heywood defeated Miss McCoy and Miss M. McCoy, 6—2, 6—2; Miss E. Reynolds and Miss Grelle defeated Miss Von Epps and partner, by default; Miss Dill and Miss Emma Dill defeated Miss Crane and Miss Amy Crane, 7—5, 6—2; Miss Seabury and Miss Worth defeated Mrs. Ingalls and partner, 6—1, 5—7, 7—5; Miss Burke and Miss Edey defeated Mrs. John Gallett, Jr., and Miss Miller, 6—1, 3—6, 7—5.

Second Round.—Miss Reynolds and Miss Freeman defeated Miss Gordon and Miss Hitch, 7—5, 3—6, 6—2; Mrs. Underhill and Miss Heywood defeated Mrs. Byron and Miss Pugh, by default; Miss Dill and Miss Emma Dill defeated Miss Ethel Reynolds and Miss Grelle, 6—3, 6—1; Miss Seabury and Miss Worth defeated Miss Burke and Miss Edey, 6—1, 6—1.

NO HINT OF CHALLENGE.

America's Cup Race Not Mentioned at Yacht Club Meeting.

The fifth general meeting of the New York Yacht Club, held last evening at the club house on West Forty-fourth Street, developed no hint of a challenge for the America's Cup. There still remains nearly a month in which a challenge may be received in order that a race may be held next year, and there is said to be assurance from both English and German sources that a defi will be sent, but every one in authority at the club denies any official knowledge on the subject. About what they may individually know they are as uncommunicative as usual. Certain it is no letter from foreign club or individual was presented at last night's meeting.

Routine business in the main occupied the large attendance of members gathered at the house. Reports from committees were received, and a Nominating Committee named for the annual election to be held at the December meeting. The members of this committee will select the ticket to be voted upon then. They are Lewis Cass Ledyard, J. Pierpont Morgan, W. Butler Duncan, Jr., Philip Schuyler, Seymour L. Husted, Jr., Robert P. Doremus, George C. Clark, Edwin D. Morgan, F. L. Rodewald, and F. H. Von Stade.

The meeting authorized the appointment of a committee to revise the racing rules and to confer with committees from the other yacht clubs in this vicinity to unify the code in the same manner as the measurement rules were revised last year. Commodore Bourne will appoint the committee this week.

The Regatta Committee reported on the season, stating among other things that the entrants in the various races held were larger in number than in any previous year in the club's history. The Model Committee also reported to the general satisfaction of the membership.

Forty new members were elected. There were twenty-seven boats in attendance, Commodore Bourne occupying the chair and Oliver Cromwell acting as Secretary in the absence of George Cormack in Europe. Neither Vice Commodore Walters nor Rear Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt was present.

It may be noted in passing that the protest of Charles Lane Poor against the action of the Regatta Committee in admitting the thirty-footers in the contests for the cruising prizes when they did not carry boats as prescribed by the rules, which promised in August to stir up so much trouble, was successfully shelved. It was not so much as mentioned.

Champions Bat Weakly, but Manage to Win One Game of Double-Header.

The homecoming of the champion New Yorks was not celebrated in a style keeping with their position as premier team of the National League, for in a doubleheader with the Philadelphia team they were clearly beaten in the first game, the score being 4 to 1, and the same result should have overtaken them in the second meeting, but with only one safe hit to their credit they managed to roll up five runs in one inning through the wildness of Pitcher Sparks and the unpardonable blunders of Gleason and Bransfield, and won by five to three. Only five and a half innings were played in the second contest, which was called on account of darkness.

Altogether the champions made but four safe hits, as against fourteen for the Philadelphians. John Lush, a left-hander, who pitched in the outlaw Tri-State League during the Summer, but was recently reinstated by the National Commission, gave as good a performance in the box as has been seen on any local diamond this season, and this in face of the fact that in the second inning Mathewson hit him on the back of the head with a pitched ball and knocked him senseless. At first it was thought that Lush had been fatally injured, but he was soon able to resume his position. Astonishing as it may seem, the Philadelphian continued to pitch effective ball until the start of the ninth inning, when he suffered much from pains in his head and had to be escorted off the field. Sparks took his place and kept the champions from scoring. Mathewson, while not being batted very freely, was responsible for the Philadelphians' first run by forcing Magee across the plate on hitting Lush, while a single, a double, and his failure to catch a throw by McGann at first gave them three more runs in the fifth inning.

Sparks was pitted against McGinnity in the second game, and for three innings gave evidence of being as effective as his predecessor had been in the first game. The score at that period of the contest was three to nothing in favor of the Quakers, and they earned every run by good batting. In the fourth inning, however, every one of the champions went to the bat, and five runs were scored on three bases on balls, fumbles by Gleason and Bransfield, and Dahlen's two-base hit. The champions protested vigorously against Clarke being declared out at the plate, and it did look as if the runner was absolutely safe.

BROOKLYN'S DOUBLE-HEADER.

The Brooklyns made a good start against the Bostons in their last series of the season at Washington Park yesterday, Hanlon's men taking both games of a double-header by scores of 11 to 5 and 2 to 1. They batted Wilhelm for nineteen safe hits in the first contest, and in the second Gessler made a home run with a man on base in the first inning. Scores:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Greater New Yorks Easily Beaten by Boston by 10 to 5.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—The Bostons had no trouble beating the Greater New Yorks to-day, although in the eighth inning the visitors made matters decidedly interesting. Up to that period the score stood 8 to 0 in favor of the local team, and when the New Yorks had been retired they were successful in getting five men across the plate by batting "Cy" Young's delivery hard and frequent. Puttmann was touched up pretty lively at times, and he received poor support at the hands of Laporte. The work of the new player, Oldring, for New York was first-class, while for Boston Criger's catching was the special feature. The last time the Bostons went to the bat Young's bit netted him a home run, besides scoring another man ahead of him.

TWO GAMES FOR ATHLETICS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Philadelphia won both games of the double header with Washington to-day by superior stick work, the scores being 8 to 0 and 9 to 7. Bender held the locals safe in the first game and relieved Coakley after the second inning of the second game. One more victory will make the Philadelphia club champions of the American League for 1905. Scores:

$10,000 to $9,000 on the New Yorks.

Wagering on the result of the world's championship series, in the event of the New Yorks and Philadelphia Athletics being the rival teams, has begun in earnest. During a discussion on the capabilities of the two teams Jacob Fields, a Wall Street broker, offered to bet $10,000 to $9,000 that the New Yorks would win. David Johnson, the bookmaker, a stanch admirer of the American League, at once accepted the wager, and checks for the respective amounts were made out and deposited.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Just So, chestnut colt, by George Kessler-Verily, owned formerly by E. A. Chinn and trained by Phil Chinn, was bought on private terms by J. A. Drake before the first race at Belmont Park yesterday, and though he ran in the Chinn colors, won his race for his new owner, who backed him heavily. Just So was entered to sell for $1,000, but though Messrs. Drake and Gates were said to have won something like $30,000 on his race, there was no bid on the horse.

Of four riders who had falls in the three-year-old steeplechase at Belmont Park yesterday Nat Ray, rider for Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., was the only one to suffer injury. Ray's mount, Paul Jones, came to grief on the back stretch, and the rider was thrown so heavily that he was unconscious when the ambulance was sent to remove him to the jockeys room. Ray recovered after a half hour, however, and was able to go to his home.

Hello, who broke down in a race at Belmont Park on Wednesday, yesterday was found to be so badly injured that as there was no hope of saving him he was shot.

The two-year-old filly Pythia, winner of the fifth race at Belmont Park yesterday, in which she was entered by the Asbury Stable to sell for $1,600, was bid up to $2,200 by Woodford Clay, owner of the second horse, Cary, and was retained by her stable for $2,205.

Jockey W. Knapp was the only rider at Belmont Park yesterday to land two winners, he getting to the winning post first on both Coy Maid and Lawsonian.

The weights for the Autumn Meadow Brook Handicap, steeplechase, about three miles, to be run next Monday at Belmont Park, have been announced as follows: Snuff, 164; Pure Pepper, 156; Tom Cogan, 156; Knight of Elway, 154; Steelmaker, 153; Kate Spotswood, 152; Palm Room, 152; Buckman, 152; The Bowery, 150; Ainslee, 150; Firefly, 149; Capt. Detectives Catch Harold L. Prescott, a Much-Wanted Man.

Harold L. Prescott, a much-wanted young man of smooth tongue and engaging manners, spent last night in the Tombs awaiting trial in the Yorkville Police Court for grand larceny.

In Prescott, alias James C. Munn, alias Frank Rogers, the Central Office police believe they have one of the most accomplished crooks who ever plied the trade of jewelry theft in this city. Prescott's favorite game, the detectives say, is to get into a house on the pretense that he has been sent there to make some interior improvements. The police say he has stolen $100,000 worth of jewels.

Prescott was captured on Tuesday night at Sixty-fifth Street and Columbus Avenue by Detectives Deering, Day, and Funston. The three sleuths were standing on the corner when the dapper young man approached, swinging a cane. All three spoke.

"Hello, Prescott," said Day.
"Hello, Munn," said Funston.
"Hello, Rogers," said Deering.

Simultaneously they made a rush for him. He started to run, but saw that course useless, so he showed fight. Deering was the first to reach him, and got a blow in the face. But the three detectives were too much for Prescott, and he surrendered.

He was taken to Headquarters, where his picture was found in the Gallery. The police then looked up his doings. It was found that Mrs. B. M. Schofield of 352 East Thirty-fourth Street had been the latest complainant against him. She said he had stolen $400 worth of jewels from her house. Other complainants included Mrs. George S. Leggett of 113 East Twenty-ninth Street, who said Prescott had stolen $2,500 worth of diamonds from her; Robert Morse of the Hotel Nevada; Louis Dreyfus of 158 West Fifty-fourth Street; Thomas Jarret of 49 West Ninth Street, and Mrs. Ada C. Jackson of 51 West Seventieth Street.

Police Headquarters said last night that the authorities of Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Chicago, and St. Louis were anxious to lay hands on Prescott, and that if he received a cumulative sentence for all his robberies it would amount to 100 years.

Waterbury on a note dated July 18. Charles L. Stenerwald has also obtained a judgment against the exchange for $2,434 on a note dated July 25.

ADAM WENZ.—Deputy Sheriff Porges has received an execution against Adam Wenz, who kept an old-fashioned wine and beer saloon at 217 Sixth Street, for $984 in favor of Carl Scheid. When the Sheriff went to the place to make a levy he was informed that the business was now owned by the George Bechtel Brewing Company of Staten Island.

HERZOG BROS.—Max and Harry Herzog, who compose the firm of Herzog Bros., wholesale and retail cigar dealers at 50 and 52 Canal Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $7,007, and nominal assets $667, in outstanding accounts for small amounts in this city, Jersey City, Newark, Perth Amboy, and other places.

E. FRISBIE PHELPS.—E. Frisbie Phelps, a promoter, of 100 Broadway, who lives at Sloatsburg, Rockland County, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $6,868, and nominal assets in debts owing to him, one being $4,000 by the estate of D. W. Woodworth of San Francisco, and another of $1,000 by C. R. Long of this city. Among the creditors are the Fourteenth Street Bank, $500; East Tennessee National Bank of Knoxville, $1,800; Phelps Motor Vehicle Company, Stoneham, Mass., $650; Henry F. Albers, $1,000 secured by mortgage, and Daugherty & Co., $600.

GLICK & RECHTMAN.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Israel M. Glick and Wolf Rechtman, who compose the firm of Glick & Rechtman, manufacturers of skirts and waists at 44 West Houston Street, by Benjamin Rubenstein, a creditor, for $502 on three assigned claims from woolen goods dealers. It is alleged that while insolvent they permitted Joseph Selpo, a creditor, to obtain a judgment for $200 by which a city marshal removed most of the stock, and that they removed and concealed assets worth $800. Judge Holt appointed Charles Leining receiver of the assets, which consist of machines, $150, and accounts, $800.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Prices were carried on a fairly high level most of the session yesterday, and closed in New York ¼c above the previous night. Along with support from the usual bull quarter there was some buying on the idea that Argentine shipments would be small on Friday, Broomhall estimating them at only 400,000 bushels; also on reports of record-breaking flour sales at Minneapolis, together with a good cash den and at the same point. Chicago advices claimed that a big short interest was in the December option out there and that bulls had a plan in mind whereby there would be a general scare among these sellers before long. Liverpool came partly ⅛d net higher, but Paris was 5 to 10 points down for the day. The Berlin market closed net unchanged, and Budapest 2 points higher. Interior receipts aggregated 1,432,000 bushels, compared with 1,194,000 bushels last year, which was more in line with recent bear predictions than were those of the previous day. Much of the alleged short interests in December, as a matter of fact, is said to be based on this talk about big receipts. The weather was perfect again, and the Ohio State report estimated the wheat crop of that State at 32,000,000 bushels, or the same as the last Government figures. The Minneapolis stock of wheat is said to have increased 725,000 bushels during the last five days. No. 2 red wheat in the local market was quoted at 87¾c elevator, and 89c free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 90¼c, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, 91c free on board, afloat.

CORN.—A good speculative demand existed for corn all day, which, in connection with scarcity of corn on spot, advanced the local market ¼c to ½c net for the day. It was somewhat surprising in view of the very bearish Price Current report and the splendid curing weather in all parts of the belt, but Chicago bulls supported it freely, and there was no aggressive short selling. Liverpool was partly ¼d net higher, and Broomhall estimated that Argentine shipments would be 1,000,000 bushels, against 1,722,000 bushels the previous week. The Ohio State report made corn conditions 89, against 73 a year ago. The local cash market closed at 58½c elevator, and 59c free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 60c, and No. 2 yellow, 60c free on board, afloat.

OATS.—Shorts and bull support put the oats market up sharply at the West yesterday, besides which receipts were under the estimates. Locally cash wheat was steady, at the following prices: Mixed, 26@32 lb, 32@33c; natural white, 30@32 lb, 32½@33½c, and clipped white, 36@40 lb, 35@36c.

COTTON.—The cotton market was much less active, but showed continued nervousness, with fluctuations comparatively narrow and irregular. The close was at practically the lowest of the day and barely steady at a net loss of 5@8 points. Sales were estimated at 225,000 bales.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3@5 points in response to higher cables, continued reports of firm interior holders, and strong advices from the dry good district. The main support, however, seemed to come from shorts taking prices, and soon after the opening a renewal of bear pressure and liquidation caused a partial withdrawal of these buying orders and prices sagged off to a shade under last Wednesday's finals. Rallying again before midday to within a point or two of the opening figures on a renewal of covering the market yielded in the afternoon to more general selling for both long and short accounts, the chief pressure, apparently, being the liquidation of scalping longs, who had bought at the low prices of the previous day.

Southern spot markets, according to official reports, were ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher, generally unchanged. Private advices received during the day were bullish in most instances, so far as the Southern spot situation was concerned, and private cables from Liverpool reported that but little actual was offering from the South. The English market made a fairly steady showing with prices during the opening call here, about 6 points net higher, afterward reacting and closing 3 points higher, while spot cotton was 8 points higher on sales of 10,000 bales. The weather map showed generally conditions through the South with seasonable temperatures.

Contract prices ranged as follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Wed. Close.
October	10.05	9.93	9.93@ 9.94	10.00

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 5.—Spot cotton, a fair business doing; sales, 10,000 bales; speculation and export, 500 bales; American, 9,000 bales; receipts, 27,000 bales; American, 26,000 bales; middling upland, 5.49d. Futures opened barely steady, unchanged on near and 1 point higher on distant positions; closed quiet, at a net advance of 3 points. October and October-November, 5.41; November-December, 5.45; December-January, 5.49; January-February, 5.52; February-March, 5.54; March-April, 5.56; April-May, 5.58; May-June and June-July, 5.60; July-August, 5.61. Manchester—Yarns dull; cloths quiet.

COFFEE.—The coffee market was quiet, sales for the day being only 32,000 bags, part of which was in the shape of switches from December to later positions. The general undertone was steady, however, and after opening unchanged to 5 points lower under moderate liquidation the market rallied and closed steady, net unchanged to 5 points higher. Bullish cables were in from Brazil regarding the present crop, which, it was said, promised to run slightly under that of last year, and which, if true, would seem to color the bull contention that the plantations in Brazil have deteriorated to an extent which will prevent a full crop and thus tend to modify expectations as to the coming crop, which, according to some of the latest advices, is showing a favorable promise. Otherwise the news contained little feature. European cables were steady, with Havre ¼f and Hamburg a partial ¼ pfennig lower, and primary markets were steadily held. Santos was unchanged, but a decline of 1-16d in the rate of Brazilian exchange was accompanied by an advance of 75 reis in the Rio market. Receipts for the day were a little over those of a year ago, but the interior movement showed signs of falling off, with the Jundiahy reporting 41,000 bags, against 36,000 bags last year, and Sao Paulo receipts for the day 48,606 bags, against 42,300 bags last year.

The market for spot coffee was steady, with quotations on the basis of 8 11-16c for Rio No. 7.

The sale of the above described property will be made in one parcel to the highest bidder upon the following terms and conditions, to wit:

Any party to this cause, or any holder of said general mortgage bonds, secured by the aforesaid mortgage, may bid and become the purchaser at such foreclosure sale.

No bid for a less sum than fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) will be accepted for said property, and no bid will be received from any one offering to bid who shall not first have deposited, as pledge, that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) in money, or in certified check or checks on a National bank or banks in the City of New York or the City of Philadelphia. The deposit so received from any unsuccessful bidder shall be returned to him when the property shall be struck down, and the deposit received from the successful bidder shall be held by the Special Master subject to the further order of this Court, to be applied on account of the purchase price of the property for which such bid was made. The remainder of the purchase price shall be paid in money or by receiver's certificates heretofore lawfully issued by the receiver of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railroad Company, such receiver's certificates to be accepted at par with accrued interest; or in the aforesaid general mortgage bonds of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railroad Company, above described, and the coupons appertaining thereto; but such general mortgage bonds and coupons when tendered in payment, shall only be taken or accepted for such sum of money as upon a final accounting they may respectively be entitled to receive on the distribution of the proceeds of the sale.

The provisions permitting the purchaser to respond to his bid with said general mortgage bonds and coupons of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railroad Company instead of cash, shall not be construed as impairing the power of the Court to require a further amount than $25,000 to be paid in money instead of bonds if it is deemed necessary hereafter to require further payment in money to discharge claims against the mortgaged property which shall hereafter be adjudged to be entitled to a preference over the general mortgage bonds or to pay to such holders whose bonds are not tendered in payment of the purchase price, such distributive share of the proceeds of the sale as upon the final accounting they are found to be entitled to.

The purchaser or purchasers of the property sold hereunder shall take the property and accept a deed therefor upon the express condition that such purchaser or purchasers, his or their heirs, executors, administrators, successors, and assigns, will pay all the allowed preferential claims, costs, and expenses mentioned in said decree, and all such liabilities as may have been contracted by the receiver, provided the purchase price bid at the sale for any reason proves inadequate to pay and discharge the same; and on condition that for non-compliance with this agreement or for failure to pay any part or portion of the purchase price of said property in cash as and when the Court may require, the Court may, by a receiver appointed for that purpose, resume possession of the property sold and all additions thereto and do therewith whatever may be deemed necessary to enforce compliance with said agreement and its orders for further payments in money.

The purchaser or purchasers of the property sold hereunder may elect not to assume or adopt any leases, agreements, or contracts sold as part of the mortgaged premises as aforesaid which the said purchaser or purchasers, or his or their assigns or appointees may specify by writing filed with the Clerk of the Court in this cause prior to the execution and delivery of the conveyance made in pursuance of such sale.

For reasons by the undersigned Special Master deemed adequate, he may adjourn said sale from time to time and without further notice, except an oral proclamation made when the sale is adjourned, and he may proceed with such sale on any subsequent day to which he may adjourn the same.

Reference is hereby made to the said amended decree for a full statement of its terms.

Dated, September 15th, 1905.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Rates for money were firmer in the market to-day despite the release of Government dividends. Discounts hardened with adverse foreign exchanges and dearer money in New York.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was generally dull owing to the prospect of dearer money in the near future.

Consols weakened and home rails did not benefit materially from excellent traffic returns.

Americans opened flat under the influence of the general disposition and selling from New York and declined mostly to below parity, recovered slightly later, and closed steady.

Foreigners were dull. Japanese were a shade easier.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1905 were quoted at 102¼ ex dividend.

Bullion amounting to £22,000 was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day for shipment to Portugal, and £13,000 was withdrawn for an unknown destination.

Bar silver steady at 28⅛d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 29; Lisbon, 5.

BANK OF ENGLAND.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The rate of discount of the Bank of England remained unchanged to-day at 4 per cent.

The retention of the Bank rate at 4 per cent. caused some surprise among the bankers. It was widely anticipated that it would be raised to 5 per cent., and it is still believed that the rise is only temporarily postponed.

Bankers explain that shipments of gold from India are expected next week, and the central financial institution hopes that these and other arrivals will replace the recent losses. Should Paris and Berlin continue to draw on London and further deplete the reserve, it is said that the rate will undoubtedly be raised next week. The Bank of England hopes to bring the outside market rate up to the Bank rate by calling in loans.

The bulk of the loss in bullion during the past week was due to Autumn requirements of gold and other local reasons. Less than $1,250,000 was exported on balance during the week. It is suggested in some quarters that Paris will relieve the pressure here.

It is learned that the $4,400,000 withdrawn from Paris to-day was for export. This is expected to relieve the pressure in London, and helped toward the decision not to raise the Bank rate to-day.

The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes:

	Decrease.
Total reserve	£2,830,000
Circulation	*502,000
Bullion	2,328,052
Other securities	2,924,000
Other deposits	2,911,000
Public deposits	2,188,000
Notes reserved	2,891,000
Government securities	4,000

*Increase.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability this week is 38.60 per cent., as compared with 40.03 per cent. last week.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Rates, 6@8 Per Cent.

Dullness and Moderate Strength Follow Higher Rate—Money Position Abroad.

On Wednesday the advance of call money to 7 per cent. served to reverse an upward movement in stocks, and to promote rather substantial declines, but yesterday a similar rise in the rates demanded for day to day funds led to only moderate losses in the early trading, which were later recovered in large part, and in many instances converted into small gains. The trading was also sharply contracted in volume as a result of the advancing rates. Much of the day's tendency in money was due to the calling of loans by the trust companies, which, there is reason to believe, have in many cases put out about as much money as lies within their power. Evidence of this condition of affairs was found in the fact that renewals of loans were made by the lending banks at lower rates than those offered elsewhere in the money market. The rate touched 8 per cent. again, as on Wednesday, but the transactions at this top quotation were few. Outside of the surprising firmness of the entire market under these adverse conditions there was little feature in the dealings. The most pronounced gains were made by American Sugar, which is said to be benefiting by the French sugar troubles; Colorado Fuel and Iron, where a contest for proxies is reported, and Pennsylvania, which just at the close was heavily traded in at rapidly advancing prices.

Owing to the possibility of relief from Europe for any actual stringency here, the money position abroad is naturally under close scrutiny. Yesterday's developments at London and Paris were not wholly cheering. The Bank of England, while maintaining the prevailing discount rate, reported a loss of $11,600,000 in gold during the week and a decrease of $14,100,000 in cash reserve. The ratio of reserves to liabilities has fallen to 38⅝ per cent., or well under 40 per cent., which has become the traditional deadline. This percentage is lower than it has been at this period, when the drain of gold is heaviest, in well over a decade, and suggests further protective steps by the institution. In the past under somewhat similar circumstances the Bank has taken radical steps in this direction, as in this week in 1899, when the rate was on Tuesday raised from 3½ to 4½ per cent., and on Thursday to 5 per cent. Yesterday the advance in private discount rates worked to the same end, and further measures of relief were found in the $4,400,000 gold sent to London by the Bank of France. The report of the French Bank revealed almost exactly this amount as its gold loss of the week. Demand sterling declined moderately, the rise in call money being more effective in shaping the quotations than offerings of cotton bills, which are still in only moderate supply.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 5.—Dealings to-day were in fairly good volume. United States Fidelity was again a prominent feature, while there was a fair demand for investment bonds. Some of the Baltimore brokers were bullish on the local market, but say the advance will not come until conditions in the money market are more settled. In the bond list the uniform strength of to-day's trading was a continuation of yesterday's high prices. Charleston and Western Carolina 5s advanced ¾. Seaboard 4s sold ¼ higher. United States Fidelity opened ¼ up, and claimbed by quarters to 131. International Trust was 3 points higher, on the sale of a single share. United Railways pooled stock declined ½, to 16½. The close was active and strong.

Shares, 3,489; bonds, $129,500.

Cigar Manufacturers Dissolve.

Montanez & Rodriguez, cigar manufacturers at 149 Duane Street, have disagreed over the winding up of the business, and Justice Scott of the Supreme Court has appointed Manuel Rodriguez, the capitalist of the firm, receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $5,000. Mr. Rodriguez sued for a dissolution of the partnership. Mr. Rodriguez became a partner in 1904. Creditors, it is said, will be paid in full.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

With the bull crowd cheerfully contemplating the possibility of 10 per cent. call money before the close of the day's business, the selling movement which began on Wednesday subsided abruptly in the first hour yesterday. Stocks simply ceased to come upon the market. In the initial trading fractional declines from Wednesday's closing quotations occurred throughout the active list, Union Pacific declining ½ per cent. further, Steel preferred ¾ per cent., and Steel common ⅛ per cent., but these and other corresponding losses were soon made up, and during the remainder of the session the market showed that the bull party's grasp of the speculative situation was unrelaxed. Money did not get as high as 10 per cent., but it loaned in the afternoon at 8 per cent., and whereas on Wednesday money loaned at 8 per cent. only on the very last of the day's demand, and many said it was a fictitious rate, there was nothing unreal about it yesterday. It was evidently considered a point in favor of the bulls that money got only so high, and did not touch 10 per cent., as expected.

There was a good deal of talk yesterday about a trick played in the money market on Wednesday which reacted unprofitably upon its authors. A certain house which is presumably committed to the bull side of the market made a transaction in money on the floor of the Stock Exchange at 5 per cent. apparently for no other purpose than to establish a quotation. Then it promptly called up a bank with which it had a large loan and asked to have the rate marked down to 5 per cent. because money had just loaned at that rate in the open market. The bank refused to do it, whereupon the house offered to take the loan up. The bank desired it to do so at once. The result was that the house had to renew the loan in the open money market at a considerably higher rate of interest. One floor version of the incident has it that in the open market the house got money at the higher rate from the very bank upon which it had tried to practice its trick, but that would make the joke almost too good to be true. Most commission houses learn by experience that it does not pay to quarrel with the banks about the rates they charge for money, for when it comes to calling in money the houses that have given the banks most annoyance in that way are likely to be called upon first.

Certain shrewd and calculating banking interests have been right on the money market, predicting what is now happening when others could see nothing but easy money through the Autumn, and at the same time have been apparently wrong on the stock market. The advance in money which they predicted has taken place, but the decline in the stock market which they thought should follow has not.

It would seem that all that can be said on either side of the money question has been said. Financial prophets whose words are equally respected have committed themselves to opinions which cannot be reconciled, and it remains for one side or the other to have its vindication in the stock market. On one side it is said that this is a time to be conservative in speculation, and the other side holds confidently to the belief that the tightness of money is but a temporary condition which need not influence anybody to abandon a bullish speculative position in the stock market. The bull crowd has the stocks. The indisposition of those who have stocks to part with them is even more remarkable, perhaps, than the disinclination of those who are out of the market to take on stocks. The floating of a number of stocks, especially the high-priced ones, is largely controlled by small cliques, and it is because they will not sell that stocks do not come out more freely than they do on moderate price recessions. Reading is the example of a stock so controlled which comes most readily to mind. The professional trading element finds that no stocks are pressing upon the market, and it goes in and bids prices up; then it finds that the market has not broadened, and it sells out. This selling causes a reaction of 1 or 2 per cent., and the situation is left precisely as it was.

The market has not been subjected to the test of a real selling movement for some time.

"Usually the outcome of a situation such as this," said an experienced operator yesterday, "is that after several weeks of dullness if there is still no easy money in sight some one who is carrying a large line of stocks becomes impatient and begins to sell out on his associates. Then another gets tired, and then another, and suddenly they all begin to sell. It is a question largely of patience. If money becomes easy again before any of the big bulls are tired out such a selling movement as I have suggested may not occur. I am only saying that it is likely to occur if after several weeks of this waiting there is not some promise of easier money and a broader market."

Those who fairly represent bullish sentiment at the moment argue that speculators who are carrying stocks are confident enough of the ultimate outcome to pay 6 per cent. or more for funds until the money begins to come back from the crops. Interest at 6 per cent on a stock which is selling at par amounts to only ½ of 1 per cent. a month, and that, a bull says, is nothing on which prices should decline 2 or 3 per cent. if those who have the stocks are content to hold them, which apparently they are.

The Wabash situation may become so complicated before the annual meeting that only those who present the actual certificates will be sure of getting their votes through.

Certain financial interests appear to be singularly sensitive of late to criticism of the weekly bank statement. Their resentment loses some of its force when William A. Nash, Chairman of the Clearing House Committee, is publicly quoted in the assertion that the weekly statement of the Associated Banks has become a farce so far as revealing the actual conditions of Wall Street's finances is concerned.

Instead of a $70,000,000 land sale, the Canadian Pacific issues some new stock. There are successful operators in Wall Street who believe that it is poor policy to support a bull movement in a stock with false reports, which must sooner or later be checked up. It is better, they say, to bull a stock on general conditions, which are fine enough to provide a bull crowd with all the argument it ought to need.

A great to-do has been made over the Hoadley cotton pool, which was to hold a million bales of the staple for 11 cents. Those who speak from close observation of the operations of this pool declare that its interest in the cotton market never exceeded 25,000 bales.

One of the most prominent stocks in the market yesterday was Amalgamated Copper. On Wednesday's reaction in the general list it showed more than average resistance and was very strong again yesterday. It is being bulled on the strength of the metal's position and in anticipation of an increase of the dividend to 6 per cent. at the next meeting. There have been no trustworthy intimations yet that the dividend will be increased, but Wall Street is strongly inclined to the belief that it will be. Speculative interest in the stock is rather limited. Commission houses are doing very little in it. About the only outside activity appears to come from New England, where the bull side of all "coppers" has suddenly become very popular. Boston has been buying the stock rather freely this week.

In the loan crowd after the close yesterday Illinois Central was the only stock of which there seemed hardly enough to go around. It loaned at a concession of 3 per cent. from the prevailing rate of interest. St. Paul, which has been scarce for some time, was reported to be lending at 6 per cent., as all other active stocks were.

COXE BROS. & CO. NOT SOLD

Denial of Reports That the Lehigh Has Purchased the Big Coal Concern.

Information so positive that it was believed in many quarters reached Wall Street yesterday that the Lehigh Valley Railroad had acquired the extensive coal business of Coxe Brothers & Co., but absolute denial of the report was secured last night by THE NEW YORK TIMES from sources which must be in possession of full information on the subject.

A report from Philadelphia had it that the deal had been arranged through J. P. Morgan & Co. In regard to this report a member of that firm said that it was without foundation, and that furthermore he knew of no such deal.

Irving A. Stearns, President of Coxe Brothers & Co., said in New Haven last night:

"There is nothing new in this. It has been reported every little while for some months, but nothing has been done about it. You can say emphatically that it is not so."

President Eben B. Thomas of the Lehigh Valley Railroad refused to discuss the report.

For a long time the relations between the Lehigh Valley and Coxe Brothers & Co. have been of an intimate character. A. B. Coxe was elected a member of the Lehigh Valley board last January. It was rumored then that his election foreshadowed the absorption of his company by the Lehigh Valley.

Coxe Brothers & Co. are the largest independent producers of coal in the anthracite district. By a traffic arrangement which has been in operation for a long time they have operated their own trains over the Lehigh Valley lines. Last year the shipments of coal by the Coxe concern amounted to 1,022,194 tons. In addition 21,499 tons were sold at the mines and 200,062 tons used by the company itself, making a total production of 1,243,706 tons.

In addition to their mining interest Coxe Brothers & Co. are the owners of the Delaware, Susquehanna and Schuylkill Railroad, which, including leased lines, operates 181 miles of track. The capital stock of the railroad is $1,500,000, upon which dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. a year are paid.

Coxe Brothers & Co. are incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania. The concern has no bonds outstanding and no preferred stock. The authorized issue of common stock is $3,610,100, of which $2,910,150 is outstanding. The dividends paid last year totaled 9 per cent. For the twelve months ended Dec. 31 last, the company's earnings were $5,057,556. The net earnings were $680,961. At the close of the year there was a surplus of $2,607,969 after the payment of the year's dividends, which amounted to $261,913.

In the past, reports have been current at various times of the purchase of Coxe Brothers & Co. by one or other of the anthracite railroads. The intimate relations existing with the Lehigh Valley, however, appear to preclude the possibility of the concern passing under the control of any other road than the Lehigh Valley.

Imitations of Precious Stones Dutiable at 20 Per Cent.—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Gen. Sharretts, the Board of United States Appraisers sustained a claim filed by Loeb & Co. of New York, it being held that imitations of precious stones in the shape of heads for hat and bonnet pins are dutiable at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem, and not at 45 per cent. as manufactures of paste.

General Appraiser McClelland wrote a decision for the board sustaining a claim made by Hop Yiek Lung & Co. of Boston regarding the rate of duty applicable to cuttlefish. The board finds that they are entitled to free entry, and are not dutiable at the rates provided for "dried fish."

A protest by the A. Bader Company of New York regarding the classification of millinery ornaments was sustained.

The board partially sustained claims by Albert Lorsch & Co. and others, Sullivan, Drew & Co., and Veit, Son & Co., New York.

Citta di Palermo Floated.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 5.—The Italian steamship Citta di Palermo was floated at noon to-day from Diamond Shoals, where she stranded on Tuesday. The vessel apparently is uninjured.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Chicago Subway Failed to Move—3,900 Shares Sold.

Standard Oil Jumped from 658 to 672—Erie Rights Heavily Traded In—Interborough at 213—Bethlehem Steel at 30.

Though the volume of transactions in Chicago Subway yesterday amounted to 3,900 shares the up-and-down movement was very dull. From 56½ at the opening the stock went up to 57¼, down to 56, and closed at 57, a loss of ¼ from Wednesday. Four thousand Erie rights were sold at from 6 to 3. De Forest Wireless Telegraph, which has not made its appearance on the curb in some time, was sold at 24 and 25, 1,000 shares changing hands. Standard Oil took a phenomenal jump from 658 to 672, at which latter figure it closed. Interborough closed at 213, Bethlehem Steel at 30, and Mackay Companies at 46.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—New York exchange was at par to-day. Time and call loans, 4@5 per cent.

There were signs that the pool in Boxboard preferred stock to-day had assumed a more aggressive bullish position in the local market than in the last two days. During the morning nearly 3,000 shares changed hands and caused the price to work up close to 15.

Other stocks were inclined to remain dull, though Can common found some small trading. Pneumatic Tool sold off to 50. Subway dipped as low as 56¾, and North Chicago eased to 81. Tool bonds sold at 80¾, and Tunnel 5 per cents. went at 94½@95.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL REPORT.

Road Earns 10 Per Cent. on All Its Stock—New Lines Acquired.

The report of the Illinois Central Railroad, just out, shows that the road has had a most prosperous year. The increase in net income was $2,431,465. After the deduction of fixed charges the surplus earnings were equal to more than 10 per cent. on the $95,040,000 outstanding stock.

In his remarks to stockholders, Secretary Hackstaff shows how a big road like the Illinois Central can absorb a little one without any trouble. Here is how he describes such an operation:

"In the Summer of 1904 it became known that a railroad called the Indianapolis Southern Railway was being built from Indianapolis to Switz City, Ind., and was projected to run thence westward for more than twenty miles parallel with the Effingham Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad to the coal fields in Sullivan County, Indiana. Negotiations were opened with those having this matter in charge, which resulted in getting full control and practical ownership of the Indianapolis Southern Railway. The cost of building the road from Switz City to Indianapolis, for a distance of 89.23 miles, including valuable terminals in the heart of the latter city and an elevated track reaching thereto without crossing streets at grade, is estimated at $4,511,800, of which there had been expended prior to June 30, 1905, $2,772,882.

"The Indianapolis Southern Railway traverses the so-called Bedford Stone District, from which a large and growing traffic is to be expected, as that kind of stone, an oolithic limestone, is now coming into general use."

The Illinois Central acquired the title to the Peoria, Decatur and Mattoon Railroad last march, and $2,500,000 of the road's bonds were issued, so that the amount of such bonds outstanding now is $14,662,000. The income account for last year compares with that for the year before as follows:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—There was a fair distribution of business, but floor traders thought the selling was as good as the buying. Prices did not vary much, the range not exceeding small fractions as a rule. Consolidated Lake Superior was an exception, advancing 1½ points on what looked to be manipulative buying, which had been held in reserve until the publication yesterday of the annual report. Lehigh Valley took the announcement that it had purchased the coal interests of Coxe Brothers calmly, holding strong, but not advancing much. Keystone Telephone eased off slightly, but Philadelphia Company again advanced sharply. Total sales, 42,248 shares. Summary:

INTERNATIONAL POWER SUIT.

Cyrus Field Judson Tells How He Was Forced to Dispose of Pool Stock.

Cyrus Field Judson was the principal witness at the trial of the suit of Franklin, Scott & Co. against Joseph H. Hoadley and Joseph Leiter, in the Supreme Court. The plaintiffs seek to recover $65,000 for losses sustained in International Power Company stock for Judson, and, as the plaintiff alleges, for a pool in which Leiter and Hoadley were interested. Leiter and Hoadley assert that the pool between them closed and a settlement was made before the bottom fell out of the stock.

The witness told of the pool formed between himself, Leiter, and Hoadley in 1900, and said he was to have full charge of the operations.

"When Hoadley returned from Europe," said the witness, "in October, 1900, I told him the Cramps had been selling the stock, and he said that was impossible, as they had agreed not to sell. He afterward said he had had an interview with the Cramps, and as a result had got 300 or 400 shares of preferred and a sum of money. He said my share of the stock and money was credited to me, but I never got a penny."

"From the first operation to the last," counsel asked, "did you ever hear Leiter give orders as to the sale or purchase of stock?"

"I did."

"Did you, Leiter, or Hoadley draw any stock or cash from the pool?"

"Mr. Hoadley drew from my end of it."

The witness said that at the suggestion of Hoadley he executed a blank assignment of all International Power stock or money held by him to Hoadley. At a consultation held in Hoadley's office the witness said Leiter told him that the International Power stock was going up too rapidly and that he must talk with Hoadley about it.

Checks were introduced to show the transactions between Judson and Hoadley, but counsel for the defendants argued that these checks did not prove the existence of the pool in 1902.

The witness said that on April 29, 1902, the pool had 7,000 or 8,000 shares of stock on hand. The following morning was a most exciting one. Stock was being thrown at him and he wanted money to cover and called on Hoadley for the latter's check. Hoadley, the witness explained, said he was cramped for money, but would shortly send a check for $250,000.

"Subsequently," said the witness, "he and his brother George came to the office. He said his brother would take charge. I turned over everything to George Hoadley, but asked Hoadley to leave a little. I turned over 700 shares of International Power Company common, 180 of International Power Company preferred, 3,000 shares of American Locomotive, and my bank balance. I turned over about $300,000."

His cross-examination will be continued to-day.

COLORADO FUEL FIGHT?

Rockefellers Said to be Out—Anonymous Appeal for Proxies.

Wall Street heard yesterday that it was to have still another annual election contest on its hands. With the Wabash fight looming up big and the Republic Iron and Steel proxy contest under way, contests appear to have come into vogue. Yesterday's report was that there was to be a contest for the control of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. According to the report an anonymous demand for proxies is in circulation. It was pointed out that unsigned requests for the return of proxies issued in blank would not be likely to receive much attention. Yet it was suggested that the United States Steel Corporation was in some way back of the blank proxies.

It was recalled that John W. Gates tried some time ago to gain the upper hand in Colorado Fuel, but had to yield the field to the Goulds and Rockefellers. The report now is that the Rockefellers have disposed of their interest in the company, presumably to the Goulds. It was intimated that the controlling interest had little to fear from an anonymous appeal for proxies.

CITY RAILWAY REPORT.

Cash Balance with Reserve Amounts to $1,700,000.

The balance sheet of the New York City Railway Company as of June 30, the close of the fiscal year, was made public yesterday. The chief changes in the figures on the debit side are in the "loans and bills payable" and the "open accounts" items. The latter shows a decrease of $2,276,387 and the former an increase of $2,890,000, indicating that bills payable have been issued for large sums carried the previous year as an open account. The cash on hand this year amounted to $711,093, as compared with $518,454 at the corresponding date last year. This is in addition to $1,032,450 cash reserved for the payment of coupons, &c. The profit and loss account shows a deficit of $4,688,989.

The full annual report of the company is in preparation, and is expected to be ready for publication in about a week.

CALL MONEY AT 8 PER CENT.

Rush of Borrowers Sends the Rate to the High Figure Again.

Call money loaned at 8 per cent. again yesterday, the highest rate since the close of 1903. Money rates were firm all day and such urgency was shown by borrowers during the last hour of business that the rate advanced to the high figure of the previous day.

The amount borrowed yesterday above 7 per cent. was much larger than on Wednesday, when the 8 per cent. rate governed only a very few loans. Time money also showed firmness, although thus far the advance in call rates has affected only the shorter time loans. Sixty day money is now quoted at 4¾ to 5, while six months money is still to be had at 4½ per cent.

RUBBER DIVIDEND DECLARED.

Second Preferred Stock Comes In for 1½ Per Cent. on Oct. 31.

The United States Rubber Company declared yesterday its dividend on the new second preferred stock. The dividend is 1½ per cent. for the quarter, and is payable with the regular dividend on Oct. 31.

The second preferred stock was issued to buy a controlling interest in the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company. The total issue is $10,000,000. The first preferred stock represents the increased issue of the old preferred.

The net earnings for the first six months of the year were $2,005,887.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—The local money market is unchanged. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 5 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 4½@5 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 4 per cent.; New York funds, 10c discount; clearings, $25,403,146; balances, $1,301,108; Sub-Treasury debit, $35,724. On a smaller volume of business, this market was generally strong to-day.

A little flurry was seen in North Butte shortly after the opening, when stop orders were uncovered, running the price down to 52¾, but aside from this the list has been steady and strong. Atlantic, Allouez, and Victoria were the features, and recovered about all they lost on the reaction. In the afternoon, commission houses appeared with more orders and helped prices along. The closing was strong, with stocks in good demand. Complete list of transactions follows:

TO GUARD TRUST FUNDS.

Chamber of Commerce Considers the Necessity for Legislation.

The first monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce since the Summer recess was held yesterday at its building in Liberty Street. The only business of importance was the passage of a resolution asking the committee on insurance to consider and report upon the advisibility of additional legislation for the proper regulation of trust funds. The resolution was proposed by A. Foster Higgins on behalf of the Executive Committee. It is:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce additional legislation is necessary for the proper regulation of life insurance companies and kindred organizations who are the custodians of large and important trust funds.

Resolved, That the subject be referred to the Committee on Insurance, who are hereby instructed to report at an early meeting of the Chamber upon the whole question involved in the foregoing resolution.

F. B. Thurber, President of the United States Export Association, introduced a resolution that the Committee on Foreign Commerce report on what changes may be desirable in our treaties affecting trade with China and Japan. The resolution recited that the ending of the war would probably bring about a great development in the commerce of this country with the East.

President Morris K. Jesup, who presided, said that he had received a call from Baron Kaneko, and that the Baron had wanted to meet the members of the Chamber of Commerce and place his views before them. His hurried departure for Japan kept him from being present at yesterday's meeting.

REBATES THE TRUSTS' PROP.

With Equal Rates Small Dealers Can Win, Says H. C. Staver.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—Freight rates and labor organizations were discussed to-day at the final session of the convention of the Carriage Builders' National Association.

"With the discriminating freight rates abolished," said Henry C. Staver of Chicago, "we can compete with and defeat the trusts. This freight rate evil is the secret of the trusts' success. Without it they would fall.

"I recommend that this association do not stop at denouncing the evil while assembled here in convention, but that the individual members make it their duty to see their Congressmen upon the subject and force them to realize the necessity of legislation."

Henry C. McLear of Wilmington, Del., was elected Secretary Treasurer. The next convention will be held at Atlanta.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Committee to Study It Here and Abroad Appointed by Civic Federation.

Samuel Gompers, First Vice President of the Civic Federation, presided at the conference of the commission of one hundred on municipal ownership in Earl Hall, Columbia University, yesterday. In a letter from August Belmont to Mr. Gompers he refers to his illness and says:

The subject of municipal ownership and operation of public utilities is forcing itself upon the attention of all thoughtful persons. Unfortunately the very lack of comprehensive and authoritative data and information on both sides leaves the discussion to theorists who often advance arguments which can neither be accepted nor rejected, for the very reason that no authoritative data exist. The National Civic Federation will now try to obtain true and reliable facts to guide the student and legislator in seeking the best means to establish peace and maintain co-operation between capital and labor. To the accomplishment of this purpose I have encouraged this movement and advocated the missions of the sub-committees.

Believe me, had I been able to attend the meeting, I would certainly have been present, and I trust that I may regain my health and strength at an early date, in order that I may co-operate in every way in the furtherance of the great object of the gathering over which you are to preside to-morrow.

Among those at the conference were Melville E. Ingalls of the Big Four Railroad, Isaac N. Seligman, Oscar S. Straus, Prof. Henry W. Farnam of Yale, Prof. John H. Gray, Northwestern University; William J. Clark, General Electric Company, and a number of heads of railroad and other corporations. John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers, attended the conference, but remained only a short time. He said he was not there as a speaker.

Melville V. Ingalls was chosen Chairman of the conference. He said if, as the call for the conference specified, a committee was to be chosen by the commission to investigate municipal ownership in this country and in Europe, it would have to get as many facts as possible to be of any value.

After the election of officers an Executive Committee of nineteen was appointed, also a committee of twenty-one on investigation of municipal ownership in America and foreign countries. This committee met later and appointed a sub-committee of five to devise ways and means of conducting the investigations.

DONALDSON UPHOLDS ALBERS.

Consul at Managua Arrives to Defend His Own Action in Case.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5.—Chester Donaldson, United States Consul at Managua, Nicaragua, whose exequator was withdrawn on account of his efforts in behalf of W. C. Albers and his brother of Philadelphia, arrived here to-day en route to Washington to explain the case to the Department of State. The Albers brothers are now held in prison by the President of Nicaragua. The evidence, Donaldson says, will show that the two Alberses were wrongfully imprisoned, and he intends to justify the stand he took to gain their liberty.

M'ADOO WILL HEAR RAID VICTIMS TO-DAY

Impression Is That Schmittberger and Dooley Will Win.

COUNSEL TO HELP THE INQUIRY

Inspector Says He Hasn't Lost His Appetite—Bon Ton Furniture Replaced.

Mayor McClellan received from Commissioner McAdoo yesterday morning the report and statement sent in by Inspector Schmittberger on Wednesday night explaining and defending his actions in the raid on the negro Bon Ton Club on Friday afternoon, Sept. 29.

Both the Mayor and the Commissioner refused to make the report public until the investigation of the case had been completed.

"It would hardly be fair to the Inspector," said the Mayor, "to make his statement public. I am informed that Commissioner McAdoo will hold a public hearing that will be in a sense a trial of Inspector Schmittberger."

As the situation stands at present, the Mayor will say nothing until he gets the Commissioner's full report on the raid, and McAdoo is waiting until the investigation is completed, to make his official report to the Mayor. Both Schmittberger and Dooley appear confident that the Commissioner will stand by them.

The so-called statement of Inspector Schmittberger is a long document of forty typewritten pages, and consists of a treatise on Tenderloin conditions, as well as a description of the Bon Ton Club raid.

Commissioner McAdoo said yesterday that he had received the reports of Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley on the raid and affidavits of citizens corroborating the statements of the police officers. There will be a public hearing of the case at Police Headquarters at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when witnesses from the Bon Ton Club will be present and give their testimony. Mr. McAdoo said, further:

"I have also received a communication from S. Flam, a tailor at 118 West Thirty-first Street, whose shop is in the building occupied by the Bon Ton Club. He has given a list of witnesses who, he states, can testify to acts of police violence. He does not give the home or business addresses of these persons except in one or two instances. I have addressed a communication to each one of them at the Bon Ton Club, so that they may be delivered in person by officers, requesting their presence at the trial. Chief Cortwright will sit with me, representing the uniformed force.

"As this inquiry involves questions of law as well as of fact, I am fortunate in having secured the friendly services of David McClure. He will act as counsel during the proceedings. This matter will be calmly and judicially examined and determined by the proven facts.

"Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley were assigned by me to their present posts because I had confidence in their honesty, intelligence, ability, and experience, and it will require evidence such as would obtain in a court of law to convince me that this trust has been betrayed and my confidence misplaced.

"If the evidence shows that they acted within their rights in the zealous performance of their duties for the enforcement of the law, I will sustain them at all costs to myself. If the facts show that any citizen, however humble, when engaged in his peaceful and lawful occupation, was assaulted without legal justification, and his property illegally destroyed or injured, I will be prompt to so find and to act accordingly."

The notices to attend the hearing were served on Tailor Flam and the damaged members of the Bon Ton Club at 5 o'clock yesterday by two plain-clothes men from Police Headquarters.

Inspector Schmittberger did not seem at all alarmed yesterday about the outcome of to-day's trial. "You can see how hard I'm hurt," he said. "I am smoking a good cigar and have not lost my appetite. I shall be there all right."

Capt. Dooley would not discuss the situation in any way, but said that he was not worrying and expected to be present at the hearing. It is said in Mulberry Street that the air of confidence worn by Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley is due to their belief that Commissioner McAdoo will support them and that the affair will be squelched. The police believe that Inspector Schmittberger was carrying out the Commissioner's instructions in making the raid, but that he lost his temper and went too far.

The club windows have been replaced and everything repaired except the iron gratings in the front door. New furniture has been ordered. Yesterday afternoon the place was guarded by a ferocious looking bulldog which sat on the stoop and growled resentfully every time a policeman hove in sight.

There was a rumor in Tenderloin police circles last night that Tammany had stepped in to hush the matter up, and it was understood that Inspector Schmittberger would be transferred and a new set of furniture given to the club in order to appease the colored politicians of the district. When questioned by a TIMES reporter as to the truth of this rumor, Tailor Flam said: "I will bet $500 that Schmittberger is shifted. You bring some one here with money and see how quickly I will cover it."

"That will not recoup you for the $450 loss on your furniture?"

"We'll get that back by and by," said the tailor with a confident air.

It is understood that Inspector Schmittberger's report will contain the charges that the Bon Ton has long been known as a poolroom for white and negro gamblers. The Inspector will admit that only necessary force was used to eject the members from the club; but that no violence was done.

The police theory is that the members of the club did the damage to the furniture themselves and ran against the policemen like startled young gazelles in their futile efforts to escape.

ARREST WITHOUT EVIDENCE.

Inspector Could Not Sustain Charge Against Alleged Handbook Man.

Inspector Richard Walsh failed to make a case against John Smith, whom he arrested on suspicion of making a handbook, yesterday, and Smith was discharged in the Harlem Court. The Inspector thought the man was acting suspiciously, and when searched after being arrested, the man was found to have $1,130.15 in cash, and a number of slips of paper, which the Inspector thought were racing slips.

Smith said he was a collector for Louis Kahn, proprietor of the Saratoga Stable, in East 128th Street. Kahn gave bail for the prisoner, but not until Smith had spent several hours in a cell.

"I haven't got him right," said the Inspector to Magistrate Crane.

"Then why did you arrest him?" demanded the Magistrate. "Return this man's property."

"Oh, you're not so wise," was Smith's parting shot to the Inspector.

"There'll be wiser men after you next time," said the Inspector.

Twenty-one Years for Burglary.

Martin Young, charged with helping two other men to rob the home of his father-in-law, George Robinson, at Pelham Bay Park on Sept. 18, 1904, was sentenced to twenty-one years in State's Prison by Recorder Goff in the General Sessions yesterday.

CLERK'S BRAVERY LANDS ARMED DIAMOND THIEF

Ex-Convict Tried to Steal $15,000 in Gems in Maiden Lane.

HE WAS CAUGHT IN THE ACT

Employe Went for a Detective and Negro Broke Away—Fugitive Used His Knife, Crowd Looking On.

Eugene Valle, a diamond expert in the employ of Cross & Beguelin at 17 Maiden Lane, had occasion to leave his desk about noon yesterday. The desk is inclosed by glass partitions and contains, besides shelves for sorting gems, a long green-baized counter.

The moment Valle went out a negro, who had been loitering about the store, stepped into the little office and vaulted over the counter. Oscar Windorf, a clerk, happened to catch a glimpse of the negro picking up a tray containing about $15,000 worth of diamond rings.

When Windorf got into the office the negro had climbed to the front of the counter again. The tray was lying on the green baize while the negro was absently admiring the fixtures.

"What are you doing in here?" Windorf asked.

"Jes' waitin' for the gem'man wiv de spectacles." Mr. Valle wears eyeglasses.

"You sit down on that stool," said Windorf, and don't move till I come back."

Calling some of the other clerks to hold the negro if he attempted to escape, young Windorf slipped over to Broadway to find Detective Nugent of Police Headquarters, who is usually on duty around the diamond district.

While Windorf was gone the negro became restless and attempted to walk out of the store. He was forcibly restrained by the clerks, whereupon he drew a pocket knife and flourished it. He then took advantage of the break thus caused in the circle of his guards and bolted into Maiden Lane, pursued by the clerks.

Windorf, having failed to find Nugent, was returning at the moment and came face to face with the negro. He tried to trip him, partially succeeded, and for ten seconds there was a tussle.

Before the reinforcements arrived the negro broke away and dashed across Broadway, with Windorf close at his heels. Persons, alarmed by the knife, opened a way. Policeman Daly of the Broadway Squad, tried to catch him, but the negro dodged successfully. The delay of this brief encounter gave Windorf a chance to come up. Opposite 8 Cortlandt Street he managed to throw his foot in front of the fugitive. Down went the negro with the clerk on top of him.

The negro tried hard to get to his feet, but the young clerk hung on desperately. For three minutes they rolled and writhed on the street, while thousands rushed from Broadway to watch the scrimmage. Strangely enough, no one offered assistance to the over-matched clerk, the crowd apparently thinking they were settling individual differences.

The affair became patently serious, however, when the knife suddenly ripped across Windorf's abdomen, cutting open his coat and vest and grazing the skin. At that moment Detectives Nugent and McGinn broke into the circle. The instant Windorf released his hold, thinking the fight was over, up jumped the negro, and, breaking through the crowd, dashed from Cortlandt to Greenwich Street. Here W. Reuper of 1,157 Broadway, attempted to grapple with the negro, but only succeeded in getting his finger nails nearly torn out.

The negro then turned along Greenwich Street. In attempting to double into Fulton Street, he ran into the arms of three policemen. He was later taken to Police Headquarters, where he was identified as Louis Brown, late of Kings County Penitentiary and Elmira Reformatory. His picture was in the Rogues' Gallery as that of a notorious robber.

When arraigned in the Tombs Court before Magistrate Pool, the negro was held in $1,000 for the assault with the knife upon Windorf, and $500 for unlawful entry. At this Brown scowled and said:

"If I had had a gun that little clerk wouldn't be where he is now."

The clerk was complimented by both the police and his employers for his pluck.

GOLDFOGLE MERELY COUNSEL

He Has Never Been Grand Master of B'rith Abraham.

Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle is not, and never was, Grand Master of the order B'rith Abraham. He is its counsel, and as such appeared for the order in the Supreme Court in a recent proceeding brought by Paterson City Lodge for a mandamus. The Paterson City Lodge has been expelled from the order, and Congressman Goldfogle, simply as counsel, defended the latter institution. The so-called Associated Ex-Presidents of the order are but a few members of the fraternity, probably not exceeding twenty in number, who have been opposed to the workings of the order and sided with Paterson City Lodge against the Grand Lodge. Except as a delegate to the Grand Lodge, Judge Goldfogle has had nothing to do with the administration of the affairs of the order, and only acted in the capacity of counsel for the order in its legal matters, though recently the counsel was made a member of the Executive Committee.

DEMANDS MORE POLICEMEN.

McAdoo Says New York Needs 1,000 New Men for Day Duty.

Police Commissioner McAdoo issued a statement yesterday declaring that his plan for the appointment of 1,000 additional policemen, as presented to the Board of Estimate, was absolutely needed to keep pace with the growth of the city.

"The conditions governing crime have changed materially in the last twenty years," says the Commissioner. "The old-time bank burglar and robber have practically disappeared and are no longer the factor they were. Years ago these people operated by night and very extensively. Burglar alarms and other methods of protection at night have been brought to such a high standard that this class of crime is no longer profitable.

"On the other hand, almost every known thief who is worthy of the appellation of 'professional' operates in the day, taking advantage of the carelessness of the people in general and servants and women folk who are left alone in apartments and houses. The pickpocket works on the cars during the rush hours of the daytime and in the shopping districts. The shoplifter works only in the daytime. The violators of the gambling laws, the professional wiretappers, the confidence man and bunco steerer, who lies in wait for the unwary immigrant along the river front; the furnished-room thief—all these operate principally in the daytime."

Then, says Mr. McAdoo, beggars are thicker than ever, and traffic keeps many policemen busy. He declares that New York should have a policeman for every 400 of population, or approximately 10,000 men. Most other large cities, he says, have more in proportion to population.

MEN BLACKMAILED TO JAIL.

And It Costs $30 a Day to Keep Each Victim, the Sheriff Reports.

"Ludlow Street Jail is the champion blackmailing institution of the United States," Sheriff Erlanger declared to the Board of Estimate yesterday when he presented his estimate for the 1906 budget. He asked for $100,750, an increase of $2,000 over this year.

"I did my best to have imprisonment by civil process abolished," said the Sheriff, "but the Legislature would not do it, to its eternal shame. The civil process has made Ludlow Street Jail a perfect hole of blackmail. I know of one man imprisoned in a breach of promise suit for $10,000, and the people compromised with him for $17, and at that the $17 was divided among three persons. I believe that nine out of every ten civil prisoners now sent to Ludlow Street Jail are there through process of blackmail."

Before this the Sheriff told the board there were three prisoners in the jail and that nine was the greatest number there at any time this year. The force on duty is composed of a Warden, eleven keepers, two engineers, two cooks, and a laundress. He said all the men were protected by law in their places and could not be dismissed unless the Legislature abolished the jail.

Deputy Controller Stevenson figured that, on a basis of nine prisoners, it would cost the city $80 a day for the keep of each.

Assistant District Attorney Knott asked an increase of $8,400 for the District Attorney's office, saying the money was needed for extra stenographers and clerks. He said the business of the year had increased 5 per cent.

No Case Against Mr. Axelrad.

Abe Axelrad, a wheelwright of 358 East Fifty-seventh Street, in whose shop a number of wheels supposed to be stolen were found on Wednesday afternoon, was honorably discharged in the Yorkville Court yesterday. It was all a mistake. Mr. Axelrad had come by the wheels fairly, and so the court decided.

END OF BOILER SQUAD GRAFT.

McAdoo Takes Away Its Powers and Will Issue Certificates.

Police Commissioner McAdoo took all power away from the Boiler Squad yesterday. Since its origin the squad has been considered the biggest centre of "easy graft" in the department. The man in charge has not had to report to the head of the Police Department and has had things pretty much his own way.

Stories have been circulated in the past of how "graft" has been collected for issuing licenses to engineers who were not capable of running an engine. Commissioner McAdoo issued an order yesterday that all examinations must be conducted in public and that the questions to be put to applicants must be in his hands thirty-six hours previous to the examination. The Commissioner will issue all licenses hereafter. Commenting on his order, Commissioner McAdoo said: "The Boiler Squad ought to be taken out of the department by law. It offers temptation to those in it and there is always a suspicion against those who have such extraordinary power. The bureau ought to be a civilian one."

Sergt. Brennan is in charge of the squad. The Commissioner said that he was satisfied with the Sergeant's work and did not intend to transfer him.

FIREMEN BURNED BY NAPHTHA

Tank Explodes While They Are Fighting a Blaze in Broome Street.

A fire in the dyeing and cleaning establishment of Maurice Cohen at 201 Broome Street about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon caused the explosion of a naphtha tank, burning Acting Chief Austin McDonald and Firemen Joseph Ketcham, Frank Braken, and Richard Smerling, all of Engine No. 55.

The flames reached the naphtha tank while the firemen were fighting the blaze. All four firemen were knocked down, but were quickly rescued by their comrades, and the injured men were taken to the Gouverneur Hospital. There their burns were dressed, and all except Smerling were discharged. He will be in the hospital for another forty-eight hours.

Hannah Hirsch, seventy years old, living on the third floor of the house, was overcome by the excitement and was carried out of the building. Damage about $300.

"PREACHER COP" IN TROUBLE.

Magistrate Crane Forces Him to Give Back $30 He Took from Finnish Girl.

John Smith, "the preacher cop," who gained his title because of his activity in the Finnish Church in 116th Street, and who has accumulated a fortune, was accused by Magistrate Crane in Harlem Police Court yesterday with having obtained money from a Finnish girl accused of theft. He got the money by saying it was to go to the Magistrate for signing a bail bond.

Smith, who had been asked to go on the girl's bond, took her to Magistrate Crane's house, and the girl innocently handed $30 to Mrs. Crane. She was surprised, and passed the money over to Smith. At that time the Magistrate knew nothing of the transaction.

"You told me at the time, Smith, that you were going on the girl's bond as an act of charity," said the Magistrate. "You lied to me. Hand over that money she gave you."

Smith gave $30 to the Magistrate, who then ordered him to get out of the courtroom. Then he sent for a friend to go on the girl's bond. When she was released, Magistrate Crane gave her the $30 she had given to Smith.

Jacob Wicks, Jr., is contesting the will of his mother, Barbara Wicks, who cut him off with a dollar. Mrs. Wicks died in September at 67 East Ninety-second Street, leaving an estate of $250,000. He alleges that undue influence was exercised over his mother by his brother William and his sister Margaret, to whom Mrs. Wicks bequeathed her estate.

M'CURDY FAMILY GOT $4,600,000

From the Mutual Life in Salaries and Commissions.

$2,000,000 TO YOUNG McCURDY

He Couldn't Tell What Salary His Father Got and Couldn't Answer Other Questions.

Yesterday's session of the insurance investigation developed new facts showing what the McCurdy family had made out of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. It appeared from a statement of salaries produced by the company at the insistence of Counsel Charles E. Hughes of the Armstrong committee that President Richard A. McCurdy, whose stipend is now $150,000 a year, had received $1,811,666 from the Mutual since he became its head, in 1885.

His son, Robert H. McCurdy, according to the schedule which THE TIMES printed yesterday, has received since 1889, $1,900,126, and President McCurdy's son-in-law, Louis A. Thébaud, has received $932,134 since he entered the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., general agents of the Mutual in the metropolitan district, in 1893.

This makes a total for the McCurdy family of $4,643,926, exclusive of the share that Robert H. McCurdy received from the profits of Raymond & Co. from 1883, when he became a partner, until 1889. This has not yet been reported to the committee. The enumeration made above also leaves out of consideration the salary of Dr. Elias J. Marsh, the Mutual's Medical Director, who is President McCurdy's brother-in-law, and of P. Stuyvesant Pillot, a cousin of Dr. Thébaud's. These salaries were not reported to the committee yesterday.

It appeared from the day's testimony that President McCurdy was not the only officer of the Mutual Life whose relatives appeared on the salary list. Dr. Grenville M. White, Secretary of the company, is a nephew of the wife of First Vice President Grannis. Howard Lewis, general agent of the Mutual for Northern New York, is n cousin of the Grannises. Vice President Gillett has a brother who is a member of the firm of Chamberlain & Gillett, general agents for the Mutual in Texas, and it appeared from yesterday's testimony that the Texas general agents, like the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., got special commissions on premiums in excess of those allowed to non-related general agents, and also had a special allowance on account of expenses.

Robert H. McCurdy, General Manager of the Mutual since 1903, was on the witness stand the greater part of yesterday's session. He said that he had in charge the general agency work of the company, was a member of the Finance Committee, and devoted his whole time and attention to the agency end of the business. Mr. McCurdy, according to the table printed herewith, has received from $30,000 to $127,000 a year for a series of years, and estimated his income for the current year on the stand on Thursday at $110,000.

Questions McCurdy Couldn't Answer.

The younger McCurdy said yesterday that he couldn't tell about these matters concerning the company:

What the total assets were in 1877.

What the total assets were in 1905.

What his father's salary or the salary of any of the other officers was.

What the seventy-five salaried managing agents of the company received in salaries and commissions.

What action the Finance Committee of the Mutual had ever taken in regard to any salary since he had been a member of it.

Whether any officer or employe had a contract for more than one year.

What the districts of the general agency system had been before he became General Manager, in 1903.

Why in 1895 the company began to change its agency system from a commission to a salary basis.

Why the contract between the Mutual and C. H. Raymond & Co., in which his brother-in-law is a partner, was never changed from a salary to a commission basis.

How much C. H. Raymond & Co. had been making out of their business.

What the profits of Dr. Thébaud in the firm of C. H. Raymond & Co. had been.

What proportion the expenses of the business had borne to the loading of the premiums in 1904 and prior years. (Mr. McCurdy explained that that was an actuarial matter.)

What statistics on this point were contained in the Insurance Year Book for 1904.

How much other life insurance companies in New York paid their general agents.

How much the profits of the general agents of the Mutual were throughout the country.

How much reduction in expenses he had accomplished in 1904.

What the ratio of expense to first-year premiums was in that year.

What loading was placed upon premiums to meet expenses. (This is also an actuarial question, according to Mr. McCurdy.)

What detailed consideration of reduction of expenses had been made by the executive officers; also several other questions not given here in detail.

GRATEFUL TO PAT CROWE.

New Yorker to Whom He Once Did a Favor Will Go on His Bond.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Oct. 6.—A friendly act of Pat Crowe toward a New Yorker many years ago may save the kidnapper from spending in jail the time between his arrival here next week and his trial. The New Yorker, who says he is a diamond importer, of Maiden Lane, reached Omaha to-day with a draft for $28,000 and a handful of diamonds. He says hs came to go on the bail bond of Crowe.

The New Yorker is William A. Scholl. He was in the West at the time of Crowe's arrest and came direct to Omaha to assist him.

"Crowe befriended me years ago in Leadville, Col.," said Scholl to-day, "and I am going to repay that kindness and go on his bail now. Crowe does not know that I am here, and it will be a great surprise to him when he comes and finds that I have arranged his bail for him.

"One time in Leadville Crowe came to me and told me of a plot on the part of a gang of toughs to rob me of my diamonds. At that time I was on the road and carried with me many valuable stones. With Crowe's assistance I managed to escape the gang and placed my diamonds in a bank vault until I got out of town.

"Since that time I have always had a good feeling for Pat Crowe, and I have met him many times in different places throughout the country."

This afternoon Mr. Scholl conferred with Crowe's attorney for some time. While nothing is known of the amount at which Crowe's bond will be fixed, Scholl says he is ready to go any amount.

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S TEXT.

"The Lord Is My Shepherd; I Shall Not Want"—Testimony at Service.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 6.—John D. Rockefeller's favorite verses of Scripture are those of Psalm xxiii. He quoted portions of them at the prayer service at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, of which he is a member.

The subject of discussion at the service was "The Place of the Bible." The pastor asked that his auditors rise, and give their favorite verses. Many people did so. After the quotations had reached twenty or thirty Mr. Rockefeller rose. He said:

"One of the quotations among those which I remember best, I took a long time to learn. We did it in the family together at one time—Mrs. Rockefeller, myself, and the children. It was the beautiful words, 'The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want,' and the rest of it. It is beautiful.

"The first one which I learned was that which spoke of the time when Jesus was born, how the wise men of the East came in the time of Herod the King, and asked: 'Where is the King of the Jews?'

"All these verses which we have heard to-night are wonderful treasures. The assembly is like the great desk of one of the editors of a modern newspaper. Each of you is like a pigeon hole where the Great Editor keeps treasures of knowledge at his instant disposal. These are his resources. These verses are our resources."

GIRL KILLED; MOTHER BEATEN

Two Brothers Missing from Their Farm Near Middletown.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The body of Alice Ingerick, 9 years old, was found to-night in the cellar of the home of Willis C. and Fred R. Olney, farmers, about four miles from this city, on the road to Howells. The discovery was made by Daniel Davis, a neighbor. A piece of gas pipe was found in the kitchen.

Mrs. Martin Ingerick, the child's mother, was housekeeper for the Olneys. Her daughter Lulu, 13 years old, came to Middletown early this morning. On her return at 7 o'clock to-night she was accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. Almeda Wheat of Ferndale, Sullivan County. They found no one in the house, and called on Davis to ask if his family had seen anything of Mrs. Ingerick and little Alice. Davis went and searched the Olney home, finding the mutilated body of the girl at the bottom of the cellar stairs. Everything about the spot was blood-stained.

When the Coroner and police arrived they found Mrs. Ingerick under a pile of hay in the barn. Her head was battered, but Dr. A. W. Preston of Middletown found signs of life, and stated that the woman would live, though her skull was fractured in three places.

Neither of the brothers could be found about the house nor any trace of them. They owned three horses, two of which were found in the stable, while the third was in a field near by. The murder apparently occurred soon after dinner. There were three plates set on the table which had not been used.

FORGERS INFEST EAST SIDE.

Lawyer Says an Organized Gang Is Working in That Locality.

During the trial of Louis Mittler, in the Essex Market Court yesterday, on the charge of obtaining $125 from Max Moscowitz, an east side saloon keeper, on a fraudulent check, John T. Smith of the law firm of Rollins & Rollins, counsel for the American Bankers' Association of this city, said that an organized band of forgers was working on the east side, defrauding business men through the medium of bad checks.

Moscowitz testified that he cashed the check for Mittler. Mittler said he had cashed the check for a third person at the request of his brother Samuel, who also keeps a saloon.

Magistrate Steinert held Mittler for the higher court, fixing bail at $1,000, in default of which the prisoner was remanded.

ROOSEVELT AIMS BLOW AT ST. LOUIS MONOPOLY

Orders Proceedings Against the Merchants' Bridge Company.

STANDS FIRM ON RATE BILL

Townsend, After Conference, Forecasts Message—Cabinet Hears Anti-Trust Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—An extraordinary reticence on the part of Cabinet members after to-day's session was explained when it became known that the President had directed the Department of Justice to proceed against the traffic monopoly at St. Louis enjoyed by the Merchants' Bridge Company.

At the Cabinet meeting the President read that part of his forthcoming message relating to the trusts and the course which the Administration has outlined in dealing with them. He made a stronger argument than in any previous utterance on the subject, going into the whole question of the need of trust control and Governmental methods of procedure in connection with violations of the Sherman law. On this account it was regarded as warrantable on his part to enjoin absolute secrecy on his official advisers.

Attorney General Moody brought up the St. Louis bridge case and was directed to take action against what is known as the St Louis Terminal Association in line with the policy of the President in cases of violation of the Sherman and Inter-State commerce laws. The prosecution will be similar to that involved in the Northern Securities merger case.

The association, composed of the interests dominating the fourteen railroads entering St. Louis, controls the two bridges across the Mississippi, the Eads and the Merchants, and also the ferry company, with large transfer and wharfage facilities. The combination, St. Louis merchants allege, has had the commerce of the city absolutely at its mercy.

The new assistant to the Attorney General, M. D. Purdy, successor of William A. Day, who had charge of the investigation made by the Department of Justice last Spring, will be placed in charge of the prosecution. The United States District Attorney at St. Louis, Col. Dyer, has made a report on the situation to the Attorney General, and taken steps to bring about indictment of the terminal company officers by a Federal Grand Jury.

The traffic situation at St. Louis has no parallel in this country. Under manipulation of the bridges by the Morgan, Gould, and other interests powerful in the railroad and business world, every passenger that enters St. Louis over the Mississippi pays tribute to the extent of 25 cents, and every car of freight about $5 to the Terminal Company.

Two years ago the St. Louis Merchants' Association appealed to Mr. Root, then Secretary of War, to revoke the charter of the Merchants' Bridge Company on the ground that the company had violated the provision of the act of Congress directing that it should not acquire a controlling interest in any competing bridge. Mr. Root made an investigation, but did not take action, and when he retired from the War Department the case was still pending.

Secretary Taft last June decided that the method proposed by the business men of St. Louis for breaking up the monopoly was impracticable and recommended that the Department of Justice start a prosecution. Meanwhile President Roosevelt had been put in possession of the facts and held conferences with Secretary Taft and the Attorney General relative to the most effective steps to be taken. Secretary Taft suggested mandamus proceedings or a prosecution under the Inter-State commerce law.

It was said to-day that a prosecution similar to that in the Northern Securities merger had been decided upon for the reason that the Attorney General is of the opinion that it can be shown that the two bridges are controlled by the same holding company, in violaion of the Inter-State commerce law. Whatever course may be followed, there is no doubt that a great battle in the courts will result.

The business interests of St. Louis, in the brief of Attorney General Crowe of Missouri, alleged that the monopoly had throttled business, prevented the growth of the city, and wrought hardship to every person engaged in business there. Attorney General Moody already has obtained facts relating to the character of the various companies in the Terminal Association, the relations between them, the amounts of stocks and bonds outstanding, and the hands in which they are held, as well as the manner in which the various properties involved are manipulated.

RATE BILL FIRST—TOWNSEND.

President Practically for Last Year's Measure, He Declares.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The Esch-Townsend bill, which was passed by the House last session and is pigeonholed in Senator Elkins's desk in the room of the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce, is almost the rate measure that the President desires to have passed this Winter.

After a long conference with the President last night, Representative Townsend of Michigan, joint author of the bill, by agreement with the President to-day gave out a statement reaffirming the sufficiency of the House bill. He said:

"The President's language in his last message on rate legislation was clear and explicit, and he stands on the same ground to-day that he did when he sent his message to Congress. He not only said it in his message, but on every proper occasion since sending his message to Congress he has reaffirmed his views. If I am not mistaken, when his message goes to Congress in December, among the first subjects, if not the first, that he will consider will be the railroad rate question."

Mr. Townsend said that he had no doubt of the passage of a rate bill at the coming session, as the House would show a stronger majority, and there probably would be a good majority in favor of it in the Senate.

The President and Mr. Townsend will have another conference within a few days, and Mr. Townsend will be asked to talk over the bill with Attorney General Moody before he returns to his home in Michigan.

HARLEM BLOCK BURNED.

250 Horses Rescued and Many Families Driven Out.

The entire block bonnded by the East River, 107th Street, Pleasant Avenue, and 108th Street, occupied by the stables and lumber yards of J. Resber & Sons, was ablaze at 1:15 o'clock this morning. The fire was under control at 2 o'clock.

A fourth alarm was sent in a quarter of an hour before, and twelve engines, eight fire trucks, and a fireboat were called into play.

Some 250 horses were released from the stables, but twelve were burned. Many families in the neighboring tenements were driven out by the flames.

The coal pockets and stables of Meyer Brothers, on the oposite side of 107th Street, were menaced and many horses were rescued and turned out there.

Three firemen were overcome by smoke and were carried out by their comrades, and an ambulance call was sent in to the Harlem Hospital.

The firemen had hard work to keep the blaze from spreading to the buildings occupied by the Carrara Marble Company, which adjoins Meyer Brothers' stables.

In response to the fourth alarm the fireboat David A. Boody went to the fire. Transfer Boat No. 6 of the New Haven Road also went to the assistance of the fire fighters.

The transfer boat turned two streams of water upon the blaze, but this boat and the Boody were unable to get near enough to render much assistance.

A strong northwest wind fannsd the flames and they illuminated the whole neighborhood. It was feared that the fire would spread to the gas tanks of the Consolidated Gas Company in 110th Street, but this danger was averted.

The fire started in a small shanty in the block and quickly spread to half a dozen stables and some rubbish heaps.

Two hundred Italian families living in tenement houses in Pleasant Avenue were driven into the street.

ANARCHIST LEADER CAUGHT.

Woman Held in Cleveland Said to be Known All Over the World.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Anna Balin, arrested here to-day by United States Marshal Chandler on the charge of being in the country illegally, is said by the Federal authorities to be an Anarchist of international reputation and a leader of one of the largest bands of Anarchists in this part of the country. The officials say that Czolgosz, who assassinated President McKinley, was a member of the band.

Several boxes of rabid Anarchist literature were found in the apartments occupied by the woman. She is said to be a native of Brünn, Moravia, and the wife of an Anarchist editor. It is charged that she was convicted of perjury in her native town several years ago and that she fled to America to escape punishment.

For about two years Secret Service agents have been searching for her with a view to having her deported. She is said to be known as Anna Najeday, and it is asserted that Anarchistic circles the world over are familiar with her. A number of persons who have attended meetings addressed by her were examined by the authorities to-day.

Washington officials have been notified and the local officials are awaiting word from them before making any further move.

WANT LYNCHING LEGALIZED.

Texans Appeal to the Governor—He Refuses to Support the Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 6.—A petition from a number of citizens has been presented to Gov. Lanham, asking that the State permit mob punishment of negroes guilty of assaulting women.

The communication sets forth that it is dangerous for white women to live in sparsely settled sections unless constantly guarded; that the tendency to commit these frightful crimes is increasing among the blacks, and must be stopped, even if it is necessary to wipe out the race; that suspicion may be entertained against every male negro, and that wholesale slaughter will ensue if the crimes are not checked.

The Governor is asked to indorse the proposals that negroes guilty of assault receive no sort of protection; that no legal inquiry be held, and that they may be instantly hanged when apprehended. He is advised that every community will hold a mass meeting and adopt resolutions in accordance with the foregoing.

Gov. Lanham's response is principally directed to the legal phase of the proposition. He sets forth that it is an impossibility for him to countenance the policy in view of his oath of office.

PUGNACIOUS SUMMIT

Tears Down a Railway Bridge Which Orange Councilmen Opposed.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 6.—Pugnacious Summit completed the job yesterday of tearing down the brand-new iron and masonry bridge of the Rahway Valley Railroad Company which spanned Ashwood Avenue. The job was done neatly and unostentatiously by a gang of workmen, with the assistance of the steam road roller.

The bridge was torn down because the company had put it up without permission and an injunction could not be secured. The City Councilmen got together in secret session and agreed to tear the bridge down.

A massive chain was passed around the iron work of the bridge and secured to the road roller, which was then started full speed astern. The bridge tumbled down into the street and was gradually pulled over to a vacant lot, where, if the railroad company wants any scrap iron, it can be found. The granite and concrete piers were then knocked apart. The whole job was done so quietly that no one in the city knew what was going on. The company had no knowledge of it.

Summit has a reputation for dealing peremptorily with corporations. Ten years ago, the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company undertook to do business in Summit without a franchise and erected poles and strung wires without permission. One quiet Sunday morning, Mayor, then Councilman, Wilcox, led a body of men about town and directed the chopping down of all the poles. Soon afterward the telephone company capitulated.

POLICE RAIDERS MET WITH AMMONIA FUMES

Eggers's Men Encounter a New Means of Defense.

HAD TO RETREAT AT FIRST

While They Were Battering a Door Some One Opened a Gallon of the Stuff Inside.

A dozen policemen on the staff of Capt. Eggers at Police Headquarters are prepared to testify that manifold are the laws of self-preservation of the poolroom keeper. A few weeks ago a squad of patrolmen, in making a poolroom raid, were received with a shower of acid. Yesterday Eggers's men encountered ammonia. The axemen had a lively time of it for half an hour, for between the fumes of a gallon of ammonia and the jeers of half a dozen of the raidees, who thought they had vanquished the raiders, they were driven to a state of mind bordering on distraction.

The raid was on an alleged poolroom in Bond Street, and was superintended by Roundsman Maher, who invaded the Mercer Street precinct without notifying the commander thereof. The room had been watched for two weeks by two of Capt. Eggers's sleuths. They got a warrant for the raid from Magistrate Poole. Yesterday the two detectives got into the room and took mental note of what went on. After they got in, Maher and a squad arrived with crowbars and axes. Immediately they began battering down the front door. The room was on the second floor of a six-story building, and as the policemen began work a crowd gathered.

Maher led the axe brigade, and he found the work hard. The first blow proved that the door was steel lined and fashioned like the door of an icebox. It was fully fifteen minutes before the outside door was demolished. At the last crash, however, Maher jumped forward and yelled:

"Come on, boys, the game is ours."

But the boys didn't come on. They fell back in disorder, Maher with them. For as they made a rush into the vestibule they were almost suffocated by the fumes of ammonia. All of them gasped for breath.

"What is it?" Maher managed to ask, breathing hard and rubbing his eyes.

"We're pizened, sure," sputtered O'Rourke, one of his patrolmen, stuffing his handkerchief into his mouth and retreating down the stairs.

The others followed suit. Tears were streaming down their faces and their breath came in gasps.

In the meantime some of the men in the alleged poolroom had gathered at the front windows upstairs, and they had fun with the police.

"Ten and the count; you're out," cried one.

"Take 'em to the Morgue," called out another.

"Ring for the Fire Department. Turn on the hose," was another's taunt.

Maher, however, was determined and quickly recovered himself. "Come on, boys," he cried again, "we'll get 'em yet."

He ran to the adjoining house and upstairs to the roof. Then, followed by his patrolmen, he climbed down the fire-escape to the back windows of the room, and after a moment's work with axe and hammer he got in. There he found the two detectives with their revolvers drawn holding a crowd of eighty men huddled in one of the big rooms.

The police on investigating found that the door which had been smashed was only the first of a series of four. It was discovered that while the outside barrier was being demolished an employe of the place had opened the other three and had emptied a gallon demijohn of ammonia upon the floor. The game was to cause delay by repulsing the police until every one had escaped through the rear. Had not the two detectives been inside the room the scheme would have worked.

Six men were arrested. They gave their names as Edward Carroll, 225 Sixth Street; William McManus, 289 Second Street; Jacob Wolf, 51 First Street, William O'Connor, 311 East Thirty-fourth Street; Abraham Gabriel, 56 East 118th Street, and Frank Cosgrove, 8 Hall Place. Among other things the police confiscated several signs about the place. One of them read:

> Selling Stakes for Platers.
> McAdoo Wins.
> Schmittberger, the Place.
> Dooley on the Limb.

Capt. Eggers's men also raided an alleged poolroom in Barclay Street, the raid being made over the head of Capt. McNulty of the Church Street Station. There were sixty-five men in the room, the doors of which were battered down. Charles Smith of 22 Hubert Street, John Thomas of 43 Sullivan Street, and Andrew Brennan of 22 Hester Street were held as the managers of the place. A similar raid was made in Cortlandt Street by detectives on Inspector Hogan's staff. Those held as managers were Frank Reynolds of 108 West Eighty-ninth Street, John Coleman of 135 Liberty Street, John Mallory of 402 Greenwich Street, and James Wilson of 55 Whitehall Street.

JUSTICE WRIGHT BEATEN.

Dead-Lock Broken, with Nomination of I. R. Devendorf—145 Ballots.

Special to The New York Times.

OSWEGO, Oct. 6.—The long dead-lock in the Fifth Judicial District Republican Convention was broken to-night and Judge Irving R. Devendorf of Herkimer was nominated for the Supreme Court on the one hundred and forty-fifth ballot. An agreement was reached after conference among the opposing delegates lasting three hours, and the Herkimer delegates who had supported Judge Maurice L. Wright for renomination during the strife voted solidly for Judge Devendorf.

The close of the convention was marked by much bitterness, and when the result of the vote was announced the voice of Judge Andrews, the presiding officer, could scarcely be heard above hisses.

Judge Wright, whose term expires on Dec. 31, has received the Prohibition nomination for Justice of the Supreme Court, and is certain to receive indorsement of the Democratic Judicial Convention in session at Syracuse.

Through express service bet. N. Y. and Portland, Me., will be extended, leaving New York, Gd. Cent'l Stat., eastbound, at 8:02 P. M., daily, except Sunday, until and including Oct. 28th.—Adv.

STEEL PASSENGER TRAINS.

Pennsylvania Orders 1,500 Cars to Make Travel Safe.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—An order for hundreds of steel passenger cars is about to be placed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. It is intended to use the steel care on the Pennsylvania fast trains, and it is claimsd that their use will reduce to the minimum the possibilities of fatalities in wrecks as well as elminate the liability of telescoping. The cost of the proposed order is estimated at $1,500,000.

The new cars will have steel floors, sides, and roofs. There will be nothing about them that can be easily broken or catch fire in the event of a wreck. They will weigh little more than the present wooden coaches. Steel cars are now being tested on the Long Island Railroad.

D. G. REID'S AUTO KILLS A MAN.

70-Year-Old Watchman Struck by Machine in Private Garage.

Alexander Lawson, seventy years old, a watchman in the employ of Daniel G. Reid, was killed in his employer's garage last night. Lawson was working in the private garage at 168 East Seventieth Street when William Tennent, Mr. Reid's chauffeur, brought in the automobile.

The machine balked as it was being driven in. Tennent got out to fix it. While he was doing so the machine started forward of its own accord and threw Lawson, who had been standing in front of it, against the wall. The old man was killed by the shock.

Tennent was arrested and taken to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station, where he was locked up on a technical charge of homicide.

25 MEN IN BURNING MINE.

Believed They Will Be Rescued—Ten Taken Out Alive.

PUEBLO, Col., Oct. 6.—A defective electrical generator started a destructive fire at the Fremont coal mine near Florence to-day. All the buildings, including the shafthouse, were destroyed.

Thirty-five men were working in the mine at the time the fire started. Ten of them were rescued with difficulty. Twenty-five were still in the mine, but it is expected they will be taken out alive.

Was Playing Around a Bonfire—Mother and Grandmother Hurt.

Robert Edmundson, three years old, was fatally burned in front of his home, 2,077 Bailey Avenue, the Bronx, yesterday afternoon. The boy, a son of Charles Edmundson, was playing with other boys about a bonfire when his dress caught fire. His mother and grandmother ran to the rescue and were severely burned about the face and hands. An ambulance was summoned from Fordham Hospital, where the boy died last night.

The mother, Mrs. Josephine Edmundson, and the grandmother, Mrs. John Edmundson, will recover.

Increase of 15 Per Cent. in Signaling Speed Expected Over the Line.

CANSO, N. S., Oct. 6.—The Commercial Cable Company's fifth cable across the Atlantic, from Canso to Waterville, Ireland, was completed to-day.

Bad weather delayed the final splice, which was made 180 miles off the Irish Coast. It is expected that the signaling speed of the new cable will be 15 per cent. greater than Atlantic cables of similar length. Its cost varied from $1,000 to $6,000 a mile. The greatest depth is 2,500 fathoms.

MANILA, Oct. 6.—Government reports show that the result of the recent storm is very serious. At least 200 natives and 25 Americans and foreigners were killed.

The storm, in connection with the severe drought which obtained early in the year, will, it is estimated, decrease the receipts of the islands 40 per cent.

HUGHES FOR MAYOR WITHOUT ASKING HIM

Republicans Take a Chance On the Insurance Lawyer.

HE WON'T SAY HE'LL ACCEPT

Richard S. Young and J. L. Wells Fill Out Ticket—Convention Long Kept in the Dark.

In many respects the most remarkable convention in the history of the Republican organization of New York City was held last night in Carnegie Hall and nominated this ticket:

For Mayor—CHARLES E. HUGHES of Manhattan.
For Controller—RICHARD S. YOUNG of Brooklyn.
For President of the Board of Aldermen—JAMES L. WELLS of the Bronx.

While the convention was nominating him, Mr. Hughes and his wife were at the theatre. They returned to their home, 790 West End Avenue, at 11:45 o'clock, after the convention had adjourned.

A sub-committee of the convention's Notification Committee met the lawyer and his wife half way down the block near their house and accompanied them home. The sub-committee was headed by ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff. With him were Attorney General Mayer, Col. Harrison K. Gird, Chairman Odell's secretary; Senator Alfred R. Page, Assemblyman Ezra P. Prentice, Secretary of the Insurance Investigating Committee; Herbert Parsons, and Assemblyman George B. Agnew.

Presently, along came Senators Armstrong and Tully. All went into session in Lawyer Hughes's library.

The reporters on the stoop were invited in to wait for results.

A long session of committee and unwilling nominee began. From time to time rumors of progress floated out. It was understood that Mr. Hughes told the committee that the only consideration that would make him accept was that he owed a duty to his party, but he did not feel justified in making quite so large a sacrifice as to lead this forlorn hope.

At 1:45 this morning Mr. Hughes and the committee were still there, and Mr. Hughes still had nothing to say as to whether he would accept or not.

At 1:45 this morning Mr. Hughes said this, and it was understood to be his final statement for the night, though the committee was still wrestling with him:

"I have given no encouragement to the sub-committee, and I am strongly convinced that I ought not to accept the nomination. I will say nothing further until formal notification is given me of the nomination, and this, I understand, will be on Monday."

While Mr. Hughes gave out this statement the sub-committee departed. Senators Armstrong and Tully had gone away a little while before. It was learned that the object of their visit was to record their protest against the proposal to take away the Insurance Investigating Committee's counsel, leaving the committee in the lurch.

Five minutes before Senator Elsberg put Mr. Hughes in nomination not twenty-five persons in the hall knew who the nominee was to be. The secret had been well guarded. One explanation given for this secrecy was that the leaders were afraid that if news of their intentions became generally known Mr. Hughes might decline to permit the use of his name.

The demonstration that followed when Senator Elsberg presented the name lasted exactly two minutes. It was hearty. At once the inquiry went around the hall, "Will he accept?"

When that question was put to William Halpin, President of the New York County Republican organization, he replied:

"All I have to say is that I believe this convention has given true expression to the desire of the best citizenship of this city."

"Did you or any other representative of your organization see Mr. Hughes, inform him of your intention to nominate him, and ask him whether he would accept?"

"I have said all that I care to say."

When the convention had adjourned many of the delegates crowded about Mr. Halpin to congratulate him. Some told him it was the best politics they had ever seen played.

The delegates were not unanimous, however, in the opinion that the nomination of Mr. Hughes was good politics, if, as they believed, no pledge had been secured from him that he would accept the nomination. Some of them expressed the view that the Republican organization would be put in a ridiculous light if Mr. Hughes declined to run.

Some went further in their criticism. Notwithstanding the warning which Senator Elsberg gave in his nominating speech that the nomination of Mr. Hughes should not be regarded in the light of an attempt to hinder the insurance investigation, there were not a few delegates who expressed the opinion that that was the view which a considerable part of the public was likely to take of it.

If Mr. Hughes resigned as counsel to the Armstrong committee to accept the nomination, it was said, such actiun would be injurious to his candidacy, and if he continued to act as counsel while at the same time a partisan candidate for Mayor it was argued injury might be done to the investigation.

Hughes Not Asked.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, the Chairman of the convention, who was a leading spirit in the Fifth Avenue Hotel conference yesterday afternoon at which the make-up of the ticket was decided upon, said that he had no information as to whether or not Mr. Hughes would accept. He said that he had not called upon Mr. Hughes to learn from him how he would view a nomination for Mayor, and that he did not know whether any other representatives of the organization had done so.

From another participant in the conference it was learned that no definite assurance had been received from Mr. Hughes that he would accept. His nomination was decided upon, it was said, upon the belief that he would not refuse the call of the convention to lead a fight for better government, if that call was backed up by a strong public sentiment in favor of his acceptance, which the Republican leaders were confident it would be.

Although Mr. Halpin was congratulated upon the nomination of Mr. Hughes, it was Chairman Odell, and not Mr. Halpin, who picked the candidate. From the very first mention of Mr. Hughes's name in the newspapers as an available Mayoralty candidate, Chairman Odell has favored his nomination. On more than one occasion he expressed to the reporters the opinion that Mr. Hughes would be the strongest candidate to oppose Tammany in the coming campaign.

When Mr. Hughes was seen after the first suggestion of his name as a probable candidate, he unhesitatingly declared that under no circumstances could he consider such a proposal. He said he would not be open to engagement for any other task until he had completed the work of the insurance investigation.

In nominating Mr. Hughes, Senator Elsberg said that the Republicans would not expect him to make a campaign.

"The most eloquent campaign he could make," said Senator Elsberg, "is the questions he is putting to witnesses in the insurance investigation."

A committee of seventeen was appointed to wait upon Mr. Hughes and the other candidates and notify them of their nomination. The committee did not attempt to discharge this duty last night. It was said by a member of the committee that it might make no attempt to do so if Mr. Hughes made known to the newspapers in a positive way that he could not be prevailed upon to accept the nomination.

The Other Nominations.

The nominations of Richard S. Young for Controller and James L. Wells for President of the Board of Aldermen were as much of a surprise to a majority of the delegates as was the nomination of Mr. Hughes. They aroused little enthusiasm.

A resolution praising President Roosevelt for his part in the negotiation of the peace treaty between Russia and Japan provoked more enthusiasm than the platform adopted. Condemnation of Mayor McClellan for his signing of the Remsen Gas bill called forth only slight applause.

The platform, which is printed elsewhere, also called for insurance reforms by the Legislature and the erection of a municipal lighting plant.

When Chairman Woodruff characterized President Roosevelt as "The man who always dares to try and never yet has failed" there was loud and prolonged cheering and waving of American flags.

Mr. Woodruff declared he believed the conditions more favorable for Republican success to-day than they were when Strong and Low were elected. He said that the candidacy of William R. Hearst indicated that there was a serious division in the Democratic ranks.

The Crowd Slow in Coming.

If Messrs. Odell and Halpin believed that they could draw a crowd to Carnegie Hall out of curiosity by keeping secret the names of those who had been agreed upon to go on the ticket, they miscalculated the public interest in the plans of the Republican organization.

From the appearance of the streets around Carnegie Hall at 7:30 o'clock it would never have been suspected that a city convention was to be held there. At 7:45 the seats on the platform were all occupied, but the absence of well-known men was striking. Only a few of the boxes were occupied at that hour and the galleries were bare.

As the politicians entered the hall they inquired of one another, "Who is it?"

Nobody seemed to be able to answer the question. Messrs. Odell and Halpin, and the few others whom they let into the secret of the make-up of the ticket, had kept a close mouth.

The ticket had been decided upon at a conference of Republican leaders held in the afternoon in Republican State headquarters in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. There were present, besides Chairman Odell and Mr. Halpin, ex-Lieut-Gov. Woodruff, Attorney General Julius M. Mayer, Senator Elsberg, and President Cromwell of Richmond. Arthur Brisbane, a personal representative of William R. Hearst, arrived at the hotel while the caucus was on and was admitted to the conference room. It was said afterward by Chairman Odell that Mr. Brisbane had called to see him about a personal matter and that his visit had no political significance.

Open Convention, Odell Said.

At the close of the conference the word was passed around that the ticket and platform had been agreed upon, but when Chairman Odell was asked for the slate he said:

"I cannot discuss the conference. Candidates will be named at the convention by the delegates. It is an open convention and the delegates will decide."

The only information given out by those who took part in the conference was that ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff had been chosen for chairman of the convention. Mr. Woodruff at once got busy preparing his speech, taking the Odell-Halpin platform as a guide.

Chairman Odell announced after the conference that he would take an afternoon train for Newburg.

At 8 o'clock, the hour set for the convention, there were not seventy-five delegates in the hall. There were still many empty boxes, and the top gallery was almost deserted.

Assemblyman Etzel's band tried to cheer up the crowd with lively music. The first selection was, "I Don't Care What Me Teacher Says, I Can't Do This Sum," and everybody laughed.

"Why not make a pool on the ticket at odds of 10 to 1 that no one can name the slate, 50 per cent. of the pool to go into a campaign fund," was the suggestion of a Republican who sat on the platform.

William Halpin, wearing a silk hat and frock coat, entered by the centre aisle of the hall at 8:05. There was not a single hand-clap, and he went to his seat unnoticed. Mr. Halpin, when asked about the slate, said:

"You will know when the nominations are made, and not before."

Other leaders also refused to talk. They said that they had been pledged by Chairman Odell and Mr. Halpin not to say a word.

At 8:27 a feeble cheer was heard, and everybody got up to see what had happened. Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff was making his way across the hall, and about a dozen delegates applauded him.

By 8:30 the galleries had filled up and the delegates were all in their places. City Chairman John K. Neal called the convention to order at 8:43 o'clock.

There was applause for Lieut. Gov. M. Linn Bruce and Attorney General Mayer when their names were reached on the roll call for temporary Chairman.

Chairman Woodruff's Speech.

Messrs. George H. Roberts of Brooklyn, and William H. Ten Eyck of Manhattan, were appointed a committee to escort Mr. Woodruff to the chair. The crowd seemed to thaw out a bit, and gave Mr. Woodruff something of an ovation. He began his speech at once.

"This is the fifth consecutive Republican City Convention over which it has been my privilege and honor to preside," he said, "and this convention, with the four that have preceded it, the one of 1897, the one of 1901, and the two of 1903, constitute all the city conventions held by the Republican Party since the creation of the greater City of New York.

"This convention is held at a time when the Republican Party, our honored and beloved party, (applause,) is supreme in the Nation, is supreme in the State, indeed, in nearly every State in the Union, and supreme in all, or very nearly all, of the municipalities of the Empire State, except this one, in which, unfortunately from a political standpoint, we happen to live. (Applause.)

"The Republican Party wields its diversified power because it has presented principles and candidates which have commended themselves to the conscience and judgment of the vast majority of the people of the country. (Applause.)

"But over and above our party view of National and State principles stands out clearly and distinctly the fact that the Republican Party in the Nation, in the State, and in the municipality has given to the people every time a clean, honest, and efficient administration of their affairs. [Applause.]

"And as we contemplate this honest, clean, and efficient administration of affairs our thoughts go back to-night to the splendid, I may say the superior record in time of peace and in time of war of our dearly beloved lamented President, William McKinley [Applause.]

McKinley and Roosevelt Cheered.

"And as our thoughts move from the past into the living present we share both as individuals and as Republicans the pride of the entire American citizenship in the achievements of the man who always dares to try and never has failed, Theodore Roosevelt. [Applause and waving of flags.]

"Well do I remember, during my trip abroad this Summer, the facial expressions which I saw and the oral expressions which I heard as the German, the Frenchman, or the Englishman declared with sneers and cynical expressions how fortunate he considered it that his sovereign or his President had not undertaken to be the impossible, the seemingly absurd, in bringing together in the interests of peace the plenipotentiaries of the great warring nations, Russia and Japan.

"No such thing has stopped him, until through his efforts and those of the plenipotentiaries of Japan and Russia the terms of peace were signed at Portsmouth, and all the nations of the world were brought into more happy accord with one another than they ever had been from the dawn of civilization until the present time."

Says the Democrats Are Divided.

Getting down to the municipal situation, Mr. Woodruff said:

"I believe that conditions to-day are more favorable than they were when we elected to the Mayoralty of the city William L. Strong, or when we elected Seth Low. (Applause.) For, my fellow-Republicans, is not the Democratic Party as a party in the City of New York torn asunder? Have we not had in the last few days an illustration of it in the nomination of one who was recently one of its most stalwart supporters for the Mayoralty with an attack that may be of such a character and such magnitude as to insure with a good candidate by this convention the defeat of the Tammany candidate for Mayor?

"Bear in mind, also, that there is not to-day—I believe I am right—a single straight democratic paper in the City of New York supporting the Tammany candidate for Mayor. Therefore, it seems to me that our plain and simple duty in this convention is to adopt a platform of principles and nominate candidates who will appeal to the citizenship of the City of New York, regardless of party affiliations, on the ground that they are of the character of men that will honestly and fearlessly administer the affairs of the city. (Applause.)

"We shall appeal in our platform and through our candidate for the support of all who are opposed to the continuance of the corrupt rule of Tammany Hall; to those who are opposed not only to its corrupt rule, but to its utter disregard of the people of this community.

A Blow at McClellan.

"We will nominate to-night a candidate who will see to it that the great public improvements which have been put under way and are contemplated will be carried to completion with speed and with economy, men who will see to it that the lighting monopoly which has entered the executive chamber of this city shall be summarily expelled from the City Hall, [applause;] men who will see to it that new franchises and franchises which have expired or which may expire will be sold for the benefit of the people, or else directly utilized by the municipality for the benefit of all the people.

"What we want to do, after nominating candidates and adopting a platform, is to go forth from this hall to-night determined to do as Roosevelt does. [Cries of 'Good!'] Determined to put our shoulders to the wheel and overcome all obstacles. We can win this fight, and with one good, long, strong pull, and a pull altogether, with the help we are bound to get, we will win."

Joseph M. Levinson, leader of the Fourth Manhattan District, was made Secretary, and Assistant Secretaries were selected from the other boroughs. Committees on Credentials, Resolutions, and Permanent Organization were appointed and a recess of five minutes was taken at 9:37 to enable the committees to frame their reports.

During recess many of the delegates walked up to the press table and asked:

"Tell us who we're going to nominate, boys."

Then they went to the leaders, asking for information, but failed to get it. All the time the band was playing "Go Forth and Find."

At 10:05 the convention was again called to order. L. L. Fossett of Brooklyn, Chairman of the Committee on Credentials, reported in favor of seating the Herman Joveshof delegates from the Thirteenth Manhattan District. This was the only contest filed.

Chairman George Cromwell of the Committee on Permanent Organization offered a resolution making the temporary organization permanent.

Senator Alfred R. Page, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, before reading the platform, read this resolution indorsing President Roosevelt for bringing about peace between Russia and Japan:

"While every civilized nation, including the belligerents themselves, are extending deserved congratulations to Theodore Roosevelt, our President, for his unexampled achievement in substituting the blessings of peace for the horrors of war by a successful intervention, unparalleled in the history of diplomacy, we, in no partisan spirit, recognize in that accomplishment the crowning glory of a career that began in our own city and had its origin in the same kind of battles for good government as that in which we are now engaged."

The resolution and the platform were quickly adopted.

At 10:15 the convention proceeded to the nomination of candidates for Mayor, Controller, and President of the Board of Aldermen.

ELSBERG NAMES HUGHES.

Senator Elsberg was recognized to present the name of the candidate for Mayor. He said:

"This convention meets in an epoch-making period in the history, not only of our country, but of our State and City as well—a period of aroused and active public sentiment, and of awakened public conscience and spirit. A period when the individual citizen, alive to the responsibility that is his under a government of freedom, is taking unprecedented interest in the public service and in the acts and the omissions of our public servants.

"I shall not catalogue the doings of our city's rulers in the last two years. I shall not speak to you at length of how the people's government has been used to further selfish ends, of how it has been used to the advantage of grasping and dangerous private interests. I shall content myself with calling your attention to a subject that seems to be of transcendent public interest and importance, and that I firmly believe creates the opportunity, and it clearly marks the duty of this convention.

The Candidate's Record on Gas.

The people of New York believe and feel that there has been in these two years too close a friendship between the City Government and certain public service corporations, and in particular those corporations which deal in that great and indispensable necessity—the gas that all our people use for light. In answer to what seemed an overwhelming cry for relief from the situation of gas consumers in our city, the Republican Party and a Republican Legislature appointed a committee to investigate the gas companies of New York. There was selected as its counsel the most remarkable and indefatigable man who has come into the public view in a generation—Charles E. Hughes—and who, with unerring judgment and marvelous ability, exposed the true condition of these corporations, exposed the extortionate burdens they had laid upon the people of the city from which all their privileges and franchises were derived, and let in the flood of wholesome light and publicity which resulted in the remedial legislation that a Republican Legislature has placed upon the statute books.

"In the next four years that legislation will be unavailing to secure all the benefits of the work so ably done by the man whom I have named, unless the City Government is directed and controlled by those who were in sympathy with that work. And the complicated questions of the relations between the city and the companies whose franchises have expired or will expire, can only be rightly solved if their solution be intrusted to the man who brought those problems and abuses to the light.

The Insurance Inquiry.

"To-day another investigation is proceeding, another committee appointed by a Republican Legislature is at work, and that committee is investigating a subject that interests every man and woman not alone in the City and State of New York, but in the whole United States, and that has attracted the attention and the comment of the civilized world. Who is the man that, looking neither to the right nor left, and careless where his blows may fall, is making of that work unparalleled success?"

Continuing his praise of Mr. Hughes, Senator Elsberg said:

"I care not that, in his modesty, he may think himself unfitted by experience for the service the people now ask of him to give. Nor do I think that any demand which this convention may by its action make, should be permitted to interfere for one moment with the work in which he is now engaged.

"On the contrary, the Republican Party, I feel sure, wants that work to go on and on, no matter where the blows may fall, for this investigation, initiated by and carried on under Republican auspices, will never stop until it has brought with it results that will rid the State and Nation of the scandalous incubus of insurance company abuses and mismanagement.

"And so I say that in presenting to this convention the suggestion I am about to make, we must have no thought that the man whom I shall name will give time to the work of the campaign. We shall ask no time from him. We believe that the most eloquent campaign addresses he can make are the questions he is daily putting to the witnesses before him.

"We insist that whatever be the action we may take to-night, it shall not deter him from relentlessly pursuing every evildoer, high or low, Republican or Democrat."

In presenting Mr. Hughes's name Senator Elsberg said:

"Expressing the thought in every mind and the hope in every heart in this convention hall to-night, laying upon him the mighty pressure of an overwhelming public call, the great and inspiring duty, I nominate for Mayor Charles H. Hughes of New York County."

Demonstration for Hughes.

Senator Elsberg finished at 10:30. The crowd was on its feet cheering before he had sat down. The delegates took up the cry:

"It's Hughes! It's Hughes!"

The demonstration lasted for two minutes. Leander B. Faber of Queens, William H. Bass of Kings, William H. Healy of the Bronx, and George L. Nichol of Richmond seconded the nomination of Mr. Hughes, as did Gilchrist Stewart, representing the negro voters. On motion of Herbert Parsons the Secretary was ordered to cast one ballot for his nomination. The ballot was cast at 10:35.

The Ticket Filled.

J. H. Burroughs of Brooklyn presented the name of Richard S. Young, ex-Park Commissioner of Brooklyn, for Controller. Each of the other boroughs seconded the nomination, and in five minutes after Mr. Young's name was presented he was nominated, the Secretary casting one ballot for the convention.

Ex-Justice Ernest Hall of the Bronx presented the name of James L. Wells, ex-President of the Tax Board, for President of the Board of Aldermen. One ballot was cast for him, and at 10:45 the ticket was filled.

The Notification Committee.

On motion of Attorney General Mayer the Chairman appointed a committee to notify the candidates:

These are the members: Mr. Mayer, Chairman; William Berri, M. Linn Bruce, B. Aymar Sands, George Cromwell, William M. Calder, Charles A. Schieren, Leander B. Faber, Alfred R. Page, W. W. Niles, William Halpin, Herbert Parsons, George B. Agnew, and Nathaniel A. Elsberg.

William Halpin was made Chairman of a committee on vacancies.

"The work of the convention is finished," said Mr. Halpin, "and it has been well done. I think this also will be the verdict of the people on election day. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I move that this convention now adjourn."

At 10:50 the convention adjourned.

THE CANDIDATES.

Hughes, the Gas and Insurance Counsel, and the Others.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES, whom the Republicans have nominated for Mayor, became well known to New Yorkers as counsel in the gas investigation last Winter, and better known more recently as the counsel of the insurance investigating committee. He has the reputation of liking to see others play at politics, and preferring for his own part to play golf or work at his profession.

Mr. Hughes is 43 years old. He has practiced law since 1884, when he was graduated from the Columbia Law School. In spite of this, he is to-day regarded as one of the local leaders of the profession. It must be said, too, that he had that reputation among his colleagues even before his appointment as counsel to the legislative Gas Investigating Commission—at which time the public at large hardly was aware of his existence. The explanation of this was given by another lawyer last night. He said:

"While others are talking and posing, Charley Hughes is generally found sawing wood. I think he has to-day as large a law practice as any man in this city. He has appeared in as many cases before the Appellate Division as any other lawyer here in the same length of time, and I have a suspicion that he has been more successful in that direction than any other member of the New York bar."

Born at Glens Falls, N. Y., the son of a Baptist minister, Mr. Hughes came to this city while still a mere boy and became a pupil in one of the most famous public schools in New York, the "Old No. 35," which has a record for graduates of ability and eminence that is seldom duplicated. In those days it was taken for granted that young Hughes would follow in the footsteps of his father. Instead, he seemed to turn his attention to teaching, and his first step toward the making of a career after his graduation from Brown University in 1881, was to get an appointment as Professor of Greek at Delaware Academy. Soon, however, he returned to this city to stud ylaw.

After his graduation he was soon admitted into partnership by the late Walter S. Carter, whose daughter Antoinette Mr. Hughes married in 1888. Always an inveterate worker, whose pet contention was that brain activity serves only to develop the brain without tiring it, he nearly broke down in health. Then he received an offer of a Professorship at Cornell University, which he accepted, filling that post with conspicuous success for two years. On his return here in 1893, he entered into partnership once more with his father-in-law. This relation lasted to the death of Mr. Carter not long ago. Since then the firm of which Mr. Hughes is the senior partner has had the name of Hughes, Rounds & Schurman, with offices at 96 Broadway. For two years after resuming his practice he continued his connection with Cornell University as special lecturer, and also did work of that kind for the New York Law School. But his business took his time more and more fully to the exclusion of all other activity.

When he became known to the public through the gas inquiry, he also became known as a lawyer who could hold his own with a brilliant array of legal antagonists. His grasp of business details has been made plain in the insurance inquiry. Only last Thursday, while addressing Justice Davy in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, District Attorney Jerome referred to Mr. Hughes as a man of highest ability and integrity.

Mr. Hughes has been a member of the Republican Party ever since he began to vote, but he has kept out of what is generally known as active politics. Outside of his office, when not keeping a stenographer busy at his home, as his custom is, he devotes himself principally to music, to golf, and to his family. He has a young son just about to enter Brown University and two younger daughters. A pet hobby of his is Alpine climbing, and for the last thirteen years he has made a trip every Summer to Switzerland, avoiding the ascents that tempt men to risk their lives, but getting plenty of wholesome exercise.

RICHARD S. YOUNG, the nominee for Controller, is a leather merchant of 87 Lincoln Road, Brooklyn. His place of business is at 35 Spruce Street, Manhattan. He was born in Ireland fifty years ago, and came to this country in the early seventies.

For seven years he was a member of the Board of Education of the old City of Brooklyn. Under Mayor Low he was appointed Park Commissioner of Brooklyn and Queens. In the two years of his régime he did much to build up the parks and extend them, and won the esteem of Brooklyn citizens for his services.

He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, of the Hamilton Club, Brooklyn, and the Union League Club of Brooklyn. He is also a Director of the Mercantile Bank, also of the East River Savings Bank, and is interested in many other financial institutions.

JAMES LEE WELLS, nominated for President of the Board of Aldermen, has been well known in the upper end of the city for forty years. He was born at West Farms, in 1843, and was graduated from Columbia College twenty-two years later.

He began his public career as a School Trustee in the Bronx. He served as member of the Assembly for three terms, 1879, 1880, and again in 1892.

Mr. Wells was a member of the Board of Aldermen for three years, beginning in 1881. In 1895 he was appointed a Tax Commissioner to succeed John Whalen of Tammany.

Mr. Wells has been for many years in the real estate business with offices at 141 Broadway. His residence is at 604 Tremont Avenue.

REPUBLICANS DEMAND INSURANCE REFORMS

Platform Also Favors a Municipal Lighting Plant.

MAYOR'S RECORD ATTACKED

His Appointments Called Scandalous, and His Action on the Remsen Gas Bill Condemned.

This is the platform adopted by the Republican City Convention:

"The Republicans of New York City appeal to their fellow-citizens in behalf of the candidates nominated by this municipal convention upon the following arraignment of the Democratic City Government, and the following declaration of Republican principles:

"We allege that the Tammany Mayor of New York does not perform the duties of his office in the interest of the people of this great municipality, but that he is notoriously a mere agent in the Mayor's office of the oligarchy known as Tammany Hall; that this association exists solely for the purpose of public plunder, and that its head is the real Mayor of New York, in accordance with whose will and direction practically all appointments are made and the affairs of the several city departments are administered.

Appointments Called Scandalous.

"We allege that most of the appointments to office made by Mayor McClellan in obedience to this direction and in conformity with this system of government have been scandalously unfit.

"We allege that the financial interests of the city and the rights of the citizens in their highways and franchises, in further obedience to this direction, have been grossly betrayed, as in the case of the lighting contracts and the Mayor's part in the attempt, by his approval, to permit the so-called Remsen Gas bill to become law, and in the continued use by corporations of franchises that have expired.

"We allege that the Tammany administration is, as it always has been, an administration of favoritism for favorites, extravagant, corrupt, and indifferent to the public welfare; that it has failed to provide adequate school accommodations, to properly clean the streets, especially in the congested sections, or to enforce the laws and ordinances, especially in respect to the construction of buildings, the conservation of health, the eradication of vice, and vicious assaults.

"We believe in the principle to which we have heretofore given our allegiance, of a non-partisan Municipal Government, and pledge the candidate of this convention if elected to a conduct of municipal affairs from which there shall be absent all mercenary or merely partisan considerations, to the strict observance of the civil service law in letter and spirit, and to the decision of all public questions, including appointments to office, with an eye single to the public advantages.

Pledged to Insurance Reforms.

"The investigation recommended by Gov. Higgins and ordered by the Republican Legislature and now being so ably and thoroughly prosecuted into the conduct of the business of life insurance, having developed grave abuses of executive authority in life insurance companies in the use of trust funds, and gross neglect of duty on the part of Directors and managing committees, requires of the next Legislature the passage of laws for the protection of policy holders, for a more rigid official scrutiny of the life insurance business and for a greater publicity of life insurance affairs.

"We believe that, in the future development of the subways of this municipality, there should be secured the freest opportunity for competition in their construction and equipment and the largest advantage to the people in their operation, and that such subways should at all times be under the absolute control of the City Government.

"The fact has been established by an inquiry, conducted by the Republican Legislature of 1905, into the existing lighting monopoly in New York City, that it is permitted by the city authorities to operate franchises that have expired and that the price of gas to the private consumer is extortionate. Light is as much a public necessity as water, and it is the duty of the City Government to see to it that the people are supplied with lighting accommodation at the lowest possible price.

For a Municipal Lighting Plank.

"In view of the fact that the Lighting Trust is an absolute monopoly and of its failure to render to the people fair service at fair rates, we are in favor of an establishment of a municipal lighting plant, for the use of the municipality and of its citizens, and of its operation by the city.

"In the Nation, in the State, and, as was witnessed by the high-minded and businesslike administration of Mayor Low here, in New York City the Republican Party has constantly demonstrated that it is the party of honest, conservative, and competent administration of public affairs. Its unfailing record and the high character of the candidate nominated by this convention provide full assurance that, if elected, their conduct of city affairs will be distinguished by that efficiency, moral sense, progress, and respect for law which have been at all times the characteristics of Republican government.

MEANS A REAL FIGHT.

Justice Seabury's Comment on the Nominations—Will He Help?

Justice Seabury of the Municipal Ownership League, when informed of the Republican nominations late last night, said:

"It's a good ticket. The nomination of Mr. Hughes certainly shows that the Republicans intend to win, and are going to make the biggest kind of a fight."

Asked if the municipal ownership organizations would help elect Mr. Hughes, he said: "I can't say anything about such a thing."

HEARST STILL CONSIDERING.

When He Decides If He Will Run for Mayor or Not He Will Say So.

The committee appointed at the municipal ownership mass meeting to wait upon William R. Hearst and request his consent to head the municipal ownership ticket in the coming campaign, yesterday performed that duty. Judge Samuel Seabury, acting as spokesman for the committee, presented to Mr. Hearst the resolutions adopted and addded a strong appeal on behalf of the committee that Mr. Hearst would see his way clear to accept.

Mr. Hearst said he would receive the resolutions and give the matter careful consideration. When he had made up his mind, he said, he would send a letter to the committee announcing his decision.

Judge Seabury said last night he had no definite idea when the reply from Mr. Hearst might be expected by the committee, but thought it would be received within the next few days.

TAFT WILL STOP FRAUDS.

Secretary Issues a Sweeping Order Regarding Army Contracts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—As one outcome of the Schuylkill Arsenal frauds, Secretary Taft to-day issued a sweeping order of great importance to every person interested in furnishing supplies to the War Department, and possibly to all other departments, for it is probable that the principles laid down in this order will be promptly adopted in the other departments of the Government.

The order provides that advertisements instruct non-manufacturers of goods to state in their bids the name of the manufacturer who will supply them unless manifestly impracticable; that lack of commercial standing or inadequate facilities on the part of a manufacturer shall be sufficient ground for the rejection of bids, and that all bids from contractors who have failed unjustifiably to fill former contracts shall be rejected. It is required that abnormally low bids be strictly scrutinized, and that the financial status of individual bondsmen be carefully investigated.

The instructions also provide that contracts once executed cannot be modified, but if it is found that for any reason the stipulations cannot be rigidly enforced the contract may be annulled with the approval of the Secretary of War.

SUBWAY INN DISGORGES.

Three Who Sought and Got Souvenirs in the Abandoned Place.

On the corner at Mulberry and Bleecker Streets, where once the Subway Tavern dispensed hospitality Detective Sergeants Summers, Brown, and Burnett came upon a seedy youth yesterday standing by the deserted tavern door. Seeing the three he started and idly tapped upon the door.

"What are you doing there?" asked Summers. "That place is out of commission."

"So am I," said the youth. "That's why I'm here."

One detective took the youth gently but firmly by the arm. The other two pushed the Tavern door. It opened. The place was locked up several weeks ago.

There was a funereal gloom inside. Mildew was on the Shakespearean mottoes; a dim religious light streamed through the colored glass panes in the Mulberry Street door, and Misfortune brooded with spread wings over all. There was a slight noise behind the bar.

Brown stepped behind the bar, kicked a long box, put his hand in and found a second youth wrapped in slumber. He was dragged out. He said he had entered to look around, but the place was so "quiet like" that he fell asleep.

Burnett then went to the rathskeller and found a youth who sat under a table and grinned.

"What's your name," said Summers to his prisoner.

"Baoldts," was the reply.

"Yours?" said Brown to his man.

"Basso."

"And yours?" chimed in Burnett to the youth under the table.

"Bassassa," replied the grinning youth, with a twinkle of his eye.

All three, with a bag of bottles—all full—were taken to Headquarters. They had tried to take away—as relics, of course—all that was left of the Subway Tavern stock. They were later arraigned in the Tombs Court and held in $500 each.

Inspection Law Has an Excellent Effect on Goods from Abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Secretary Wilson to-day made public the report of Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, concerning his investigation in Europe of the production of food for export to the United States. In the course of the report Dr. Wiley says:

"The inspection law and its regulations and enforcement have had a most salutary effect upon trade relations. We are getting in this country now better and purer goods, and the result will not be, as was expected, a diminution in the volume of trade, but, on the contrary, a large increase. Our consumers, being sure of the purity and character of these products, will eat more freely of imported food products for this reason."

Dr. Wiley devotes a large part of the report to the subject of blended whisky. He says:

"Practically all the pure malt whisky made in Scotland except that for local consumption is sold to the so-called blenders. It is mixed with varying proportions of silent spirit, colored if desired, and reduced by water to an alcoholic strength of about 45 per cent. by volume. It is generally labeled as if unmixed malt or Scotch whisky."

DEATH AT SECOND ATTEMPT.

Girl Who Had Been Rescued from the River Jumps from a Roof.

Delia Markowitz of 236 Henry Street jumped from the roof of the seven-story building at 74 Goerck Street yesterday morning. She died in Gouverneur Hospital last night.

This was the girl's second attempt at suicide in a week. She jumped into the East River on Tuesday morning and was rescued by William McMahon.

In Essex Market Court she told Magistrate Walsh that she had tried to end her life because her sweetheart had jilted her. She promised not to try to kill herself again and was discharged.

When she was greeted at the tailor's shop where she worked yesterday morning she said to her girl friends:

"You needn't be glad I'm back safe and well. I will end my life yet. I am half crazy from this blow."

Half an hour later she went to the roof of the building and jumped off.

Lentz Replies to Colby.

NEWARK, Oct. 6.—At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee this evening, Major Carl Lentz, the Chairman, replied to the statement of Everett Colby, the Senatorial candidate, that he and his followers would run the campaign independently of the Major. He says that Colby knew that he, (Lentz,) as Chairman, would have to conduct the campaign, and that he proposes to conduct it unless the County Committee asks for his resignation.

Not more red tape but less is our recommendation. Simplification, doing away with duplication of effort, making all of the work resultful, these are the things we do for your organization.

PLAN TO KEEP M'CLELLAN IN THE MAYOR'S CHAIR

Legislature May Be Asked to Decree Successor's Election.

ALBANY HAS POWER TO DO IT

But Can a Two-Thirds Majority Be Got to Pass It Over the Mayor's Veto?

A plan has been suggested to the Republican State leaders by which it is thought a quietus can be put upon Mayor McClellan's Gubernatorial boom. In the event of the Mayor's re-election by a great majority, he will be the logical Democratic candidate for Governor, and everybody believes that Charles F. Murphy will try to put him at the head of the State ticket next year, and if he should carry the State, urge him as New York's candidate for the Presidency in 1908.

Because of this plan much stress was laid, previous to the Democratic City Convention, upon the importance of selecting for President of the Board of Aldermen a man in every way qualified to be Mayor. Charles F. Murphy has since been criticised for choosing Patrick Francis McGowan as the Mayor's political heir.

But if the Republican plan goes through, Mr. McGowan is not likely to become New York's Mayor for the unexpired period of the four-year term for which Mayor McClellan will have been elected. In that event either Mayor McClellan will serve out his full term or the people of the city will have an opportunity of choosing his successor.

It is understood that in the event of Mayor McClellan's triumphal election and the launching of a Gubernatorial boom for him, a bill will be introduced in the Legislature next Winter providing that any vacancy which may occur in the office of Mayor of the City of New York either by death or resignation shall be filled at the next ensuing regular election.

Prominent lawyers who were consulted yesterday about the plan said there was no obstacle in the way of its accomplishment. The city charter does not even go so far as to provide that the President of the Board of Aldermen shall fill out the unexpired term for which the Mayor was elected. It merely says:

In case of a vacancy he [the President of the Board of Aldermen] shall so act until noon of the 1st day of January succeeding the election, at which the Mayor's successor shall be chosen.

The Republican argument is therefore that should the Legislature pass a bill providing that in the event of the office of Mayor becoming vacant, by death or resignation, the successor to the Mayor shall be chosen at the regular election to be held in November following his resignation, or even at a special election, it could hardly be contended that the man elected President of the Board of Aldermen had been unfairly dealt with by the Legislature. The charter does not guarantee to him that he shall serve as Mayor for the unexpired term of the man chosen by the people to fill that office.

About the power of the Legislature to enact a law which would compel the election of a successor to Mayor McClellan within a comparatively short time after his resignation, the lawyers said there could be no question. They cited the fact that two years ago Senator Elsberg had before the Legislature a bill which provided for the abolition of the office of Coroner before the expiration of the term for which the incumbents of that office had been chosen.

No question of the constitutionality of the bill was raised in the Legislature. Its defeat was due to the fact that a majority of the members of the Legislature considered it unfair to abridge the terms of office of men chosen by the people for a defined period.

One difficulty about the plan is suggested, however. Would the Republican State leaders be able to command the two-thirds majority in the Legislature necessary to pass the bill, as a city measure, over Mayor McClellan's veto?

MAYOR'S CAMPAIGN PLANS.

To Make a Dozen Speeches—Secretary O'Brien to be His Manager.

Mayor McClellan's political campaign headquarters will be opened on Monday at the Hotel Bartholdi, with the Mayor's secretary, John H. O'Brien, in charge as campaign manager. In the last municipal campaign Corporation Counsel John J. Delany, who this year is slated for a Supreme Court nomination, was the Mayor's campaign manager. At the Mayor's headquarters, as last time, will be bureaus in charge of Italian, Yiddish, Scandinavian, and German speakers.

Mayor McClellan received congratulations on his nomination yesterday at City Hall, scores of personal friends, together with practically all of his official family, waiting on him to pay their respects. The Mayor intends to spend some time each afternoon at his political headquarters, his mornings and early afternoons to be spent, as now, at the City Hall. He does not intend to make many speeches in the next fortnight, as he desires to confine his speaking to the last two weeks of the campaign. He does not expect to make more than a dozen speeches in all.

Tammany Hall was deserted yesterday, as Charles F. Murphy remained at his Summer home, in Good Ground, where he will stay until Monday. At that time he will come to Tammany Hall and put the finishing touches to the county, borough, and judicial slates.

Commercial Travelers for McClellan.

The first gun of the campaign was fired yesterday, when a noonday meeting was held at the home of the Commercial Travelers' League, 507 Broadway. Resolutions were adopted indorsing Mayor McClellan. Incidentally there was a band which played nothing but "Tammany." The speakers were Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, N. Taylor Phillips, and John S. Crosby.

First Tammany Ratification.

The first ratification of the city Democratic ticket was held last night at 42 Second Avenue in the Tenth Assembly District Tammany Club. William Sohmer presided and resolutions offered by Leader Julius Harburger commending the City Convention for the nomination of McClellan and the rest of the ticket were adopted.

MORE CANDIDATES IN QUEENS.

Independent Democrats Turn Meeting Into a Convention and Nominate.

At a meeting of Independent Democrats held in Crawford's Hall, Jamaica, L. I., last night, an independent borough ticket was put in the field for Queens, the meeting turning itself into a convention and making the following nominations:

For Borough President—JAMES C. ARCHER.
District Attorney—EDWARD J. KIELEY.
Coroners—JAMES H. ELLISON and CORNELIUS B. VOORHIS.
Alderman Fourth Ward—HENRY A. GUPTIL.
Assembly—J. B. SMYTH.

After the meeting adjourned the Independent Citizens stood on the sidewalk and declared that if Mr. Archer refused to accept the nomination for Borough President they would indorse Borough President Cassidy.

BROOKLYN SLATES NOT DONE.

The Republicans Still Trying for a Fusion Conference.

Although the Borough and County Conventions of both the Republican and Democratic organizations in Brooklyn are to be held to-day, the slates were still incomplete late last night.

In confusion, but with a manifest desire to go it alone, the Republicans have made repeated attempts to bring about a conference this week of representatives of bodies supposed to be opposed to the regular Democratic organizations, but have not yet succeded in getting the members of the Nominating Committee together. It is settled, however, that William A. Prendergast will be the Republican candidate for Borough President and Alfred T. Hobley will be their candidate for Sheriff of the county. The other offices are being held open pending determination of the Fusion conferences.

Coroner Michael J. Flaherty, Chairman of the Municipal Ownership League, wants very much to run a third ticket, however, to test the strength of the movement, and declares that he himself will be willing to run for any office on the ticket.

The bitterness engendered in the Democratic organization because of the attempt of Senator McCarren to renominate Mathew E. Dooley and Edward Kaufmann as Register and County Clerk, has not yet been dissipated, and much trouble is expected if their names are presented to-night. Senator McCarren has preserved the silence of a sphinx about these men.

TO SUE TOWN TOPICS.

John Armstrong Chanler Begins Action Against Col. Mann's Paper.

Acting on behalf of John Armstrong Chanler of Virginia, Neuman & Newgass filed a precipe in the United States Circuit Court yesterday as the first step in a suit to be brought against the Town Topics Publishing Company and William D'Alton Mann, editor-in-chief of Town Topics. All further information regarding the nature and scope of the suit was refused by the lawyers.

It was understood, however, that alleged libel will form the basis of the suit and that the supposed libelous matter has appeared in connection with certain references in The Town Topics to the mental condition of the plaintiff.

Mr. Chanler is a member of one of the oldest New York families. He is a relative of the Astors, the Livingstons, and the Wards. At one time his relatives were instrumental in his commitment to a sanitarium, and at the same time his estate was placed in charge of a committee.

Mr. Chanler left the sanitarium and went to Virginia, where he claims legal residence. There he began suit for the recovery of the control of his property, as well as to have all the proceedings in the New York courts declared illegal. Those suits are still pending.

OLD EXCURSION BOAT BURNS.

The William Mayer Destroyed—Captain and His Wife Swim Ashore.

The old excursion boat William Mayer, pleasantly remembered by many grown-up boys and girls who danced on her decks in their young days, has gone the way of all earthly things. After having become a hay barge, she caught fire early yesterday morning while tied up at the foot of East 116th Street, and was burned to the water's edge. Before the boat was destroyed she set fire to the pier and a scow, which lay at anchor near by. John McMaster, Captain of the steamer, and his wife, both of whom were sleeping aboard, saved themselves by jumping into the river and swimming ashore. The Captain and the mate of the scow saved themselves in the same way.

The fire was discovered about 2:15 o'clock yesterday morning by McMaster. His first thought was to save his wife and himself. While they were still trying to reach safety, the hawser of the Mayer parted, and the boat began drifting down stream, blazing from stem to stern. In the meantime an alarm had been sent in and the fireboat Zophar Mills responded. To save the steamer was out of the question, and the firemen directed their attention to the scow and the pier. Both were saved, but only after the pier had been damaged to the extent of $1,500.

money by the Mutual Life that were unexplained by either Mr. McCurdy or Auditor Preller. Among them were three payments of $25,000 each, payable to Robert Oliphant, Chairman of the Mutual's Committee on Expenses, which appeared like many other matters in the minutes of that committee, and in such ledgers of the company as the Auditor produced, without further explanation. There were several payments on account of legal expenses which the Auditor could not explain. He said that the vouchers which he handled showed only that money had been paid to a certain individual on a certain date. Counsel Hughes thereupon made formal demand on the company to produce the books and the persons who would be able to explain all these matters.

The name of A. C. Fields was referred to yesterday as that of the head of the Mutual Life's department of supplies. It did not appear whether this A. C. Fields had any connection with Al Fields, who has been recognized as a part of the Andrew Hamilton-Eugene Wood-"Moe Dinkelspiel" combination, but Mr. Hughes made a persistent effort to get at the details of an item of $1,834,833, appearing in the Mutual's last annual report as the expenditure for printing stationery, postage, and advertising.

The prime object, however, of the inquiry which Mr. Hughes made into the Mutual's affairs yesterday was to determine whether the salaries paid to the high executive officers and the special arrangements between relatives of the management and the company akin to those which have been noted in the case of the Raymond firm and the Texas general agency, correspond to returns to the policy holders of the Mutual Life. To this end he introduced in evidence, when James M. Beck, counsel for the company, had produced it, a record of the increases of salaries in the Mutual from 1877 to date. President McCurdy became the head of the Mutual in 1885 at a salary of $30,000 a year. It is now $150,000 a year.

The Vice President's salary in 1885 was $15,000 a year. It is now $50,000 a year. The Second Vice President's salary in 1885 was $9,000 a year; it is now $17,500 a year. An additional First Vice President has been added to the executive staff of the company in the meantime; his present salary is $40,000 a year. There also has been added a Third Vice President, who receives $10,000 a year. The salary of the Treasurer in 1885 was $10,000 a year; it is now $50,000 a year; and the salary of the General Manager, which was fixed at $20,000 a year in 1890, when the office was created, is now $30,000 a year.

When this list of salaries had been read yesterday and entered on the record, Counsel James M. Beck of the company got permission to address the committee and made the following statement:

"Mr. Chairman: In connection with this increase of salaries, wouldn't it be fair to note on the record that the witness [Robert H. McCurdy] can testify that the size of this corporation is measured by its accumulations, and its assets have increased fourfold? I will not venture the exact percentage, but I think, if Mr. McCurdy is able to tell us how much the accumulated assets were in 1877 and what they are now, we will see why the salaries have grown."

Benefits to the Insured.

Mr. McCurdy, who is General Manager of the company, was not aware of the size of the assets of the Mutual Life in 1877 and he was obliged to ask an assistant what they are now. From Auditor C. A. Preller and Supt. of Agencies Dexter it was ascertained that the assets in 1877 were a little over $90,000,000, and that in 1905 they were about $450,000,000. Mr. Beck thereupon remarked that he was about to say tenfold instead of fourfold. Then came an interesting conversation by Assemblyman Rogers of the committee, Mr. Beck, and the witness.

"I would like to ask," said Assemblyman Rogers, "if the resultant benefits to individual policy holders have grown in a like proportion?"

At this there was a burst of applause that resounded through the Aldermanic chamber. When it had been squelched by Chairman Armstrong of the committee Mr. Rogers said:

"I asked the question seriously, because the relation of the policy holders to the company is, after all, of vital importance, and the great accumulation of assets, unless there is to some extent a resultant benefit to policy holders, is of slight consequence."

Mr. Beck replied:

"In the first place it is obvious that the growth of this corporation in the vast number of policy holders cannot be measured by mere questions of the contributions of any specific number. In other words, the policy holder's profit must bear some relation to what he puts in."

Mr. Rogers then turned to Mr. McCurdy, who was on the stand, and asked:

"Do I understand that it is seriously contended, Mr. McCurdy, that the salaries of executive officers are increased in proportion to the accumulation of the assets of the company?"

"I don't know that the policy has ever been planned in that way," replied Mr. McCurdy, "but it certainly would seem reasonable."

Might It Reach $250,000?

"Now," said Mr. Rogers, "if the company goes on growing, do you think it would be proper in the course of time to increase the President's salary to $250,000? Have you any idea in your mind that it should be increased further if the accumulations increased?"

"I have never formulated any idea in my mind as to that subject," was Mr. McCurdy's reply.

"Of course, in ordinary business enterprises," Mr. Rogers continued, "conducted for the gain of the individuals who contribute to the capital, the amount to be paid for management is generally considered with reference to the amount of profit made by those individuals, isn't it?"

"I don't know about that. I presume it is so."

"In other words, as a mutual company the question of whether its salaries should be increased depends entirely on whether it is profitable for the policy holders to have them increased; is that not so?" demanded Mr. Rogers.

"Not entirely," was the reply. "I think that the responsibility and the duties that are imposed by the Presidency or Vice Presidency of a corporation of the size of the Mutual Life make it necessary that the amount of salary should bear some relation to the size of the corporation and the responsibilities of the officers."

"And now," said Mr. Rogers, "finally, do I understand that there has been any interest of the policy holders conserved by increasing the salary of the President from $100,000 to $150,000 a year? And if so, what?"

"Only I think it a proper compensation for increased responsibilities," was the reply.

"Do you think the responsibilities increased in 1900?"

"The Trustees evidently did," said Mr. McCurdy.

How the Salaries Are Fixed.

"Did the Trustees fix this salary?"

"I presume they did. I was not then a member of the board."

"Has it ever been brought before the Board of Trustees since then, so far as you know?"

"I cannot say."

"Never brought before the Board of Trustees at any meeting which you attended?"

"I think it may have been in 1903."

"Must there not have been an annual agreement under the insurance law, regulating contracts between companies and their officers and employes."

"I have no recollection of it."

Mr. Hughes had previously examined Mr. McCurdy with considerable care as to just how much he did know about the affairs of the company. After his witness told how he became General Manager in 1903, succeeding Dr. Walter R. Gillett, Mr. Hughes asked him what salary Dr. Gillett had received. He said he didn't know.

Q.—How are the salaries paid to officers of your company fixed? A.—They are fixed by the Finance Committee.

Q.—Do the records of the Finance Committee show the salaries paid to the various officers? A.—I can't say whether they do or not. They instruct the cashier.

Q.—They instruct the cashier by resolution? A.—Yes.

Q.—You are a member ex-officio of the Finance Committee? A.—Yes.

Q.—Does the Finance Committee fix the salaries yearly? A.—Yes.

Q.—How recently was the salary of the President of the company fixed by the Finance Committee? A.—I don't know, Sir.

Q.—Has it ever been fixed by the Finance Committee? A.—I have only been a member of the Finance Committee since 1903, only two years. During that time I don't know that it has.

Doesn't Know Father's Salary.

Q.—What is the salary of the President of the company? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You have never known? A.—Never.

Q.—Does anybody know besides the President himself? A.—I can't say, Sir.

Q.—I notice by By-law 11 the Mutual Life Insurance Company may suspend or remove any agent, manager, or general agent at pleasure. Does that receive the practical construction that all contracts that general agents have made must be accepted by the President directly or indirectly, and on such terms as he may see fit to make? A.—As a matter of fact they are usually made by the general manager, the contracts with the general agents.

Q.—So that since you have been general manager you have had supervision of these contracts? A.—Yes, Sir.

Taking up the question of agencies, Mr. Hughes drew from the witness that there were seven general agents in the United States on a commission basis, and seventy-five or seventy-six local departments supervised by salaried general agents who received in addition to their salaries a small percentage on first year renewals. What this would amount to the witness didn't know, so for the purposes of illustration Mr. Hughes took up the situation of the general agent for Cook County in charge of the Department of Chicago. His salary alone is $10,000 a year.

"What would his compensation be from first-year premiums in addition to salary?" Mr. Hughes asked after the witness had said that the Cook County man was the highest paid of the salaried general agents.

Mr. McCurdy turned to Auditor Preller of the company for light on the subject, but Mr. Preller had forgotten. Mr. McCurdy at last remembered that the Cook County man received 1 per cent. on his first year's premiums.

"And that amounted to how much?" asked Mr. Hughes.

Again the witness turned to Mr. Preller. "Can't you help me, Mr. Preller?" he said. "Can't you tell me what the new premiums were from Cook County?"

This time Mr. Preller could not come to General Manager McCurdy's assistance, so the latter offered to telephone down to the company for the information.

Mr. Hughes then took up the organization of the agency system, with particular reference to a change made from the commission to the salary basis in the St. Louis agency in 1895. General Manager McCurdy explained that as he was not an officer of the company at that time he did not know for what reason the change had been made, but that as he understood the matter at present he believed the theory was that the salary basis would be more economical for the company, more easily handled, and productive of more business.

Mr. Hughes then took up the contract with C. H. Raymond & Co., and wanted to know why that was not changed to a salaried basis. The witness offered to explain the contract which he made with the firm late in 1903, but Mr. Hughes wanted to go back of that to the contracts under which C. H. Raymond on a commission basis had received various special rates of commission and other allowances. He suggested the date of 1900 as a basis of discussion, and asked why the Raymond firm was not changed then with the others.

C. H. Raymond & Co.'s Case.

"I am not familiar with the conditions existing with their agency or any other of the domestic agencies of that time," was the reply.

Q.—That is the point I wanted to get at. So far as you know through whatever familiarity you have with the affairs of the company there was no reason why that change should not have been made at that time? A.—I had no familiarity with the agency affairs in this country at that time.

Q.—Didn't know anything about it? A.—I knew nothing about it.

Q.—Was that question discussed with you by any one? A.—At that time?

Q.—Yes. A.—No, Sir.

Q.—I mean now in the years 1900 to 1903; we will say, before you became general manager? A.—No, Sir, it was not.

Q.—Did you ever talk with your father with regard to the domestic business? A.—Only in a general way, not with reference to this contract.

Q.—Not with reference to the changing of agencies from one system to the other? A.—Only as an expression of my views as to the advantage of doing so principally as applied to foreign agencies.

Q.—The advantage was more conspicuous in the United States, I suppose, but you expressed your opinion as to the undesirability of it abroad; is that what you mean? A.—I tried it abroad, and it didn't work.

Mr. McCurdy then went into a detailed explanation of his reasons for making the contract with C. H. Raymond under which that firm has done business since 1903, and said that this was done to pave the way for the conversion of the agency to a salary basis at the end of the present year. The details of this contract were brought out in the testimony on Thursday.

"Did you know what amount they had been making?" asked Mr. Hughes.

"I did not," was the reply.

"Did you inquire?"

"I did not."

Q.—Didn't you think it a part of your duty as general manager of the company to ascertain whether the general agent was getting more money than the company could afford to pay? A.—The general agent was getting the same—was receiving the same commission contract that the other general agents—that is to say, commission agents—of the company were getting, plus an allowance of 10 and 2—about 12½. I think—I think it was 10 and 2½ per cent., something or other, which was necessitated by the conditions existing in the insurance business in New York City. These conditions do not exist in certain other districts of the United States, except principally in the large cities, where men have got to be paid more.

Don't Look Up Profits.

Q.—Is it the practice of those who make contracts with general agents to find out how profitable the contracts already existing with such agents are? A.—It is not.

Q.—In other words, you go on making contracts with general agents for the payment of commission, or salary plus commissions, without knowing how much money the agent is making under the system already in existence? A.—That is not quite so. The company pays as does every other company, and, I suppose, every other business, as much commissions as it is necessary to pay to secure business.

Q.—You recognize the fact, don't you, that the expense in securing business presents a very serious question for insurance companies? A.—I think all the companies would be glad to reduce their expenses wherever it is possible.

Q.—Has it not been brought sharply to your attention as general manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Company that in the year 1904 the amount expended by the Mutual Life Insurance Company was very largely in excess of the loading upon its premiums to meet expenses? A.—Not in that form, I think, Mr. Hughes.

Q.—I find in the Insurance Year Book for 1904 that loadings on premiums and annuities by your company amount to $13,973,720, and that the insurance expenses incurred were $15,278,727, and that the percentage of insurance expenses to loading was 109.34 per cent. Are you acquainted with those facts? A.—No, Sir; I was not acquainted; I may say that the actuary—[Mr. Hughes shows the book to the witness, who said, "No, I had not seen it."] I may say that the actuary makes those calculations; my duties have not been in that direction.

Q.—It also appears from the Insurance Year Book that the dividends to policy holders, exclusive, of course, of death claims paid and matured endowments and surrendered policies, aggregated in 1904 $2,674,207, about $200,000 less than in 1903 and about $200,000 more than in 1902, and that during the same year your gain and loss exhibit showed an excess of insurance expenses incurred over the amount loaded upon premiums and annuities to meet such expenses of considerably over $1,000,000. Now, was there not a discussion among the officers of your company to ascertain what steps could be taken to reduce your expenses, and among your expenses the expense of getting new business? A.—That is a standing effort of the officers, to reduce expenses; but no means has been found to reduce expenses unless you very seriously reduce your business.

Raymond's Profits Increased.

Q.—It would appear from the statement that has been introduced in evidence that in the year 1902 C. H. Raymond & Co. had made net some $214,000 over and above their expenses, in 1903 some $228,000, in 1904 some $247,000. Are we to assume that in making this new contract in 1903 you didn't take any steps to ascertain whether C. H. Raymond & Co. were making more money than could properly be expended by your company in rewarding general agents for their services? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did anybody else in your company? A.—Not that I know of; no, Sir.

Q.—Of course you know Mr. Thebaud very well? A.—I do.

Q.—You both live in Morristown? A.—Practically, yes.

Q.—You are intimate not only as members of the same family, but as associated in the same business? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't you know what Mr. Thebaud was making out of the company? A.—I didn't have the faintest idea.

Agents Just Merchants.

Senator Armstrong wanted to know whether or not the witness, as the custodian of the funds of his company, could justify his failure to make the inquiry into the profits realized by the general agents. Mr. McCurdy said:

The company never had any means of knowing what the profits of any general agent were. The business—on a general agency system, as I said yesterday—is farmed out. The general agent is paid a gross commission. That gross commission is regulated by the amount that we know other companies pay in the same field, that it is necessary to pay, that the general agents shall be in a position to pay as much as is paid by other companies. That is the way that the gross commission is regulated. The amount that the general agent makes out of that contract depends largely on himself and the organization of his particular territory. If he can get business from his sub-agent for 30 per cent. when he is receiving 60 he does it. If it is necessary for him to pay 80 per cent. when he is receiving 75 he is very apt to do it. He wants the business and he wants to get the renewals of it.

In other words, the general agent is practically a merchant conducting business on his own account for his own profit. He is responsible to the company practically for everything, every policy that is delivered, he is responsible for that premium; he is responsible for all defalcations that may occur; he is responsible for losses; he is responsible for medical fees on policies not taken; he is responsible for a variety of payments—postage, telegrams, and things—everything; he is in fact a merchant on his own account. That has been the system on which all the life insurance companies, not only in this country, but abroad, have built up their business.

Large Returns, Large Rewards.

"That responsibility does not amount to a guarantee of payment of premiums, if they are not paid by the insured, does it?" Mr. Armstrong asked.

Mr. McCurdy replied:

Not by the insured, but if they are collected by his agent. Of course, he is at liberty to renew the policy if he doesn't collect the premium, but that general agency system, as it is called, has been the system which has built up all these large companies. It is large rewards for large achievements. It has been not only so in the life insurance business, but it has been so, I may say, in this whole country—large rewards for large achievements; been so in steel, been so in railroads, in iron, and every other industry, and the agent for the Mutual Life or any other general agent for any other company, if he does a large business and a good business, stable business, a business that renews, a business that is profitable to the company, makes large profits out of it.

And with regard to this New York general agency, as I said, I was not aware until two days ago, when I saw that statement, what the profits were. I had no idea what the profits of C. H. Raymond & Co. were, nor did I know until a couple of months ago the proportion in which they were divided between Mr. Thebaud and Mr. Raymond, but I want to say that this business in New York is probably the best business that the company has got on its books; it renews better; the medical examinations are made more closely; it is under our direct supervision, and if the general agent has made large profits he has given a large and a most excellent business to the company, and he has only, to my way of thinking, followed out the entire system which has prevailed in the developing of this whole country—large rewards for large achievements, and in that sense I think he has been justified in making large rewards, large profits.

Mr. Hughes took up the conversation at this point, saying:

"It is very interesting to follow that thought of yours about large rewards for large achievements, but it is pertinent to inquire just who are benefited by these achievements. It is easy to see that C. H. Raymond & Co. have been, but I see by looking at your dividends to policy holders that in 1897 they amounted to $2,507,521, whereas in 1904 they amounted to only $2,674,207—that is to say, the dividends to policy holders increased only about $170,000. Now, isn't that because of the large expense that your company was under?"

The witness said that the dividends to policy holders in any given year depended on the number of deferred dividend policies that matured that year, and that the twenty-year distribution policies of the three great companies had not yet begun to mature, so that a relation could not be figured out between business done and dividends.

Mr. Hughes, taking up the question of a possible reduction of expenses, asked the witness whether it had ever occurred to him to ask Dr. Thébaud how much the doctor was getting out of the company.

Dr. Thebaud's Personal Affairs.

"I never asked him about his personal affairs," said Mr. McCurdy.

Q.—His personal affairs happened to be also the affairs of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. What have you done, if anything, in the last one or two years under your management to reduce the expenses of the Mutual Life Insurance Company? A.—I have cut down commissions in some of the agencies where it was possible.

Q.—In what agencies have you cut down commissions? A.—I am afraid you've got me there; there were some managing agencies in the smaller districts.

Q.—Have you cut down in any of the large general agencies? A.—Not in the large cities, where it is necessary to pay large commissions; no.

Q.—Have you cut down any salaries, either in the home office or elsewhere? A.—No salaries.

Q.—Have you cut down any other expenses? A.—Yes; I reduced last year, for 1904—the printing and stationery and supplies were reduced. [Speaking to Mr. Preller.] Do you recollect, Mr. Preller, how much it was cut down?

Mr. Preller—In 1904?

The Witness—Yes.

Mr. Preller—I cannot answer that offhand.

The Witness—It was considerably reduced, and the general expenses of the company last year were reduced.

Q.—In what way? A.—For 1904 the company did $26,000,000 more business than the year before, and its ratio of expense was reduced on the first year's—it is my impression it was reduced the first year about 2 per cent. It is difficult to recollect.

A Mistake of $10,000,000.

Q.—It would appear that the new business of 1904 was $16,000,000 more than the new business in 1903? A.—Sixteen; I thought it was twenty-six.

Q.—The figures here are $215,000,000 for 1903, and $231,000,000 in 1904? A.—I think the increase for the previous year was about $10,000,000.

Mr. Hughes—The expenses in 1902 were $15,078,050; in 1903, $16,152,000; in 1904, $16,898,000.

Here Mr. Hughes was interrupted by the Chairman.

The Chairman—What ratio do you figure of expenses, Mr. McCurdy?

The Witness—What did it cost?

The Chairman—The ratio of expenses.

The Witness—Average about 25 per cent., would it not, Mr. Preller?

The Chairman—No, you don't understand me. What basis do you adopt, what ratio, by dividing the gross expense by the amount of the first year's premiums?

The Witness—There are a number of ways of calculating expenses.

The Chairman—What ratio do you use?

The Witness—On the percentage of income and outgo.

The Chairman—The total income and the total outgo?

The Witness—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Well, the total income of your company in 1902 was $73,305,023; your expenses were $15,076,950. In 1903 your total income was $77,333,713; your total expenses were $16,152,412. In 1904 your total income was $81,200,984, and your total expenses were $16,898,456. Do you know what loading there is on your premiums to meet expenses, what percentage is taken of the premiums for that purpose? A.—It varies. That is an actuarial question I am not competent to answer. I think it varies on different forms of policies.

Loaded 109.34 Per Cent.

Mr. Hughes brought out the fact that in the Equitable the loading on premiums and annuities was $15,346,022 for 1904, and the insurance expenses $13,880,053, or about 90.45 per cent. In the case of the New York Life the loading was $18,279,492 and the expenses $18,237,764, or about 99.77 per cent., while in the Mutual the loading was $13,973,720 and the expenses $15,278,727, or 109.34 per cent. The witness said that the subject had probably been taken up by the executive officers, the Actuary, and, he assumed, by the President and Vice President, but had never come under his attention.

Mr. Hughes wanted to know then if any other general agent was getting the same rate of commission that was paid to C. H. Raymond & Co. The witness said he believed the Texas general agency was under as liberal a contract. Mr. Hughes called for the contract, which was produced later, and then asked why extra commission was necessary in Texas, as well as in New York. The witness answered the latter question first, by saying that it cost more money to get business here.

Q.—Do you think you could get Mr. Thebaud's services for $100,000 a year if you wanted to? A.—If he did not have a contract with the company; I suppose so.

Q.—If you had not made a contract with him by which he got more you could get his services for $100,000 instead of $147,000 that he received last year? A.—If he had not had any contract, and I had offered him $100,000 salary, I have no doubt he would have been very glad.

Q.—And for that matter $50,000? A.—I am not prepared to say.

Mr. Beck: Mr. Hughes, you ignore entirely the question of what you have to say to subagents in New York who deliver the business.

Mr. Hughes: Not at all; it is the profit I am getting at.

Mr. Beck: The purpose of my suggestion was to know if the conditions in New York City made it imperative to offer general agents good large results.

Mr. Hughes: I understand entirely that the condition of competition in New York is such that the men who write the business have to be paid something like what the other men have to be paid to get the business, but I am talking about what C. H. Raymond & Co. have to pay net, of which Mr. Thebaud got three-fourths, and of which he got last year $147,000; and I want to know what reason there is for having such a contract outstanding which would justify such a payment by a life insurance company. A.—Because the business was very large and very good, and therefore the profits were very large and good.

Mr. McCurdy explained that the competition in New York is keener, commissions to sub-agents higher, and the office expenses larger, but that when it came down to details of profits he could say only that the company had no knowledge of the exact amount the firm was making out of its contracts. He believed C. H. Raymond & Co. were trying to make the most money out of their business that it was possible to make. Then Mr. Hughes took up the case of Texas. It soon was shown that G. L. Gillett of the firm of Chamberlain & Gillett was a brother of Dr. Walter Gillett, the Vice President of the Mutual. Mr. Hughes wanted to know what the general conditions were in Texas that demanded an exceptional contract.

"It is a very sparsely settled country," said Mr. McCurdy, "and in relation to the amount of business—I do not mean to say that it is not reasonably civilized—traveling expenses are very high. It is a large State and requires a large agency organization and branch offices and traveling agents."

Chairman Armstrong interrupted at this point and said he did not see yet why life insurance fees should be any larger in Texas.

"They are extra-hazardous," volunteered Mr. Beck.

"Especially in the matter of affidavits," put in Mr. Hughes, and the hearing was halted a minute until the laugh had subsided. Then Mr. Hughes continued:

New York and Texas.

"As I understand you, if a territory is thickly settled, like Manhattan Island, it is necessary to give special rates, and if it is sparsely settled, like Texas, it is necessary to give special rates."

There was another laugh at this sally, and the witness finally replied:

"I did not say that."

"What is the fact?" said Mr. Hughes.

"The fact is," said the witness, "that it costs more to live in New York City."

"And it costs less to die in Texas," said Chairman Armstrong, sotto voce. The hearing was suspended again for a few moments until the laugh had died down.

Mr. Hughes took up the inquiry.

"And I suppose in Texas you have to be paid more for living there?"

"I don't know that," said the witness, still in good humor. "But the expenses of getting business in Texas, owing to the fact that the business has to be produced from long range, make it very expensive business to get."

Mr. Hughes then took up the list of general agents, bringing out the facts with regard to Agent George W. Raymond of Newark and Howard Lewis of Northern New York, as have been noted. When the question about Mr. Marsh was raised the witness said his impression was that the Mutual's Medical Examiner had married the sister of President McCurdy after he had entered the service of the company.

"Who is P. Stuyvesant Pillot?" Mr. Hughes asked.

"I suppose that it is his relation to Mr. Thébaud that you want to know," Mr. McCurdy replied. "He is a cousin to Mr. Thébaud, and has the title of Inspector of Risks."

Q.—What does that mean? A.—It means that the risks that are—well, that don't go right straight through as perfectly clean risks, he takes up, considers them, corresponds with the doctors about them or the agent, or brings them before the committee that meets to consider such cases, or brings them to an executive officer—that sort of thing.

Q.—How long has he held that position? A.—I really don't know; a number of years.

Q.—What is that? A.—I really don't know; a number of years; six or seven, I don't know.

Q.—What is his age? A.—I should say he was about 40.

Q.—Was he connected with the company prior to that time, prior to the time he became inspector of risks? A.—Yes; his first connection with the company was with the metropolitan agency, as a clerk there, and after that he went into the home office. I think it was in the policy department, or somewhere else; I have forgotten.

Q.—What is his salary now? A.—I don't know, Sir.

The next on the list was Dr. Grenville M. White, and Mr. Hughes asked if he was a relative of any of the other officers. The witness said that he didn't think so.

"Is he a nephew of Mr. Grannis?" Mr. Hughes asked.

"I don't think he is," said Mr. McCurdy. "I think his wife is a niece of Mrs. Grannis."

While the laugh was still going around Mr. Beck jumped to his feet and declared with some dramatic emphasis:

"If it is going to be declared a crime for a man to have a brother or cousin or a niece by marriage connected with him in his business it seems to me the President will have to modify his ideas on race suicide."

"It isn't a crime," put in Chairman Armstrong. "It's only ridiculous," and Mr. Beck sat down.

Mr. Hughes started to ask some questions about the foreign business of the Mutual, but after he had brought out that the successor of Robert H. McCurdy as the head of this department received in the neighborhood of $15,000 a year as against his predecessor's $80,000 or $90,000, he ran up against a stumbling block in the fact that the company had prepared a statement of its foreign business for the committee which did not show the details of the contracts with agents. So he asked Mr. McCurdy to tell what he did to earn his present compensation.

Mr. McCurdy's Conferences.

"Well," said the witness, "I confer daily with Mr. Dexter, the Superintendent of Domestic Agencies; he confers with me for upward of an hour or an hour and a half daily. Mr. Duncan, Superintendent of the Foreign Department, confers with me. Dr. White and Mr. Easton, Secretaries of the company, confer with me. The Corresponding Secretary confers with me. I confer with the Actuary and all the other executive officers, principally and almost exclusively on agency matters."

Allowing this matter to stand for the time Mr. Hughes took up the item in the company's annual report for 1904 of $1,134,833.75 for "advertising, printing, stationery, and supplies." He wanted to know who directed the disbursement of this money. The witness said that the Superintendent of the Supply Department, A. C. Fields, who had had the post for many years, handled it, under the Committee on Expenditures, consisting of Messrs. Oliphant, Holden, and Moffitt of the board. Mr. McCurdy couldn't go any further with the subject at the time. Mr. Hughes passed to a matter that had been mentioned by Charles H. Raymond in his testimony regarding the employment of two or three men in the main offices of the Mutual Life Building to write policies for any persons who may apply to the company directly. Mr. McCurdy said that these employes were on salary and had no interest in premiums, but that the applicant nevertheless had to pay the company the full amount of his premium just as if he had taken it through an agent who was on a commission basis. This started a long discussion as to whether the company might not remit to persons who applied to it directly a sum corresponding in some degree with the commission paid to the agent. The witness protested that such a procedure would break up the agency system, and he and Mr. Hughes did not get very much nearer together on this point.

Then Mr. Hughes took up the duties of Mr. McCurdy as a member of the Finance Committee, but the witness told him that about all he did was to attend the meetings of that committee, as his principal duty was to devote his entire time and attention to the agency end of the business.

His Stock Holdings.

Mr. Hughes thereupon questioned Mr. McCurdy on his ownership of stock in companies in which the Mutual was interested, bringing out that the witness held 171 shares in the Morristown Trust Company, 1,000 shares of the National Bank of Commerce, 75 shares in the Astor National Bank, 100 shares in the Commercial Trust Company of New Jersey, 100 shares in the Consolidated Gas Company, 25 shares in the Girard Trust Company, 50 shares in the Lawyers Title Insurance Company, 251 shares in the Guaranty Trust, 100 shares in the Metropolitan Trust, 50 shares in the National Safe Deposit Company, and 326 shares in the United States Mortgage and Trust Company. Mr. McCurdy then declared that he had never had any interest in any syndicate participation in which the Mutual was a part.

At the afternoon session Charles A. Preller, the Auditor of the Mutual Life since 1893, was called to the stand. He said his salary was $10,000 a year and his duties were to see that charges were entered against the proper accounts and see to authorized vouchers for charges. Mr. Hughes promptly took up the item of $1,134,833.76 for printing, advertising, postage, &c., in the 1904 report. He tried to trace the details from the blotter on which its constituent items were originally entered and the ledger into which it was posted, but without much success, for it appeared that the items were summarized in the blotter in bulk once a week, and so posted in the ledger.

Mr. Hughes took up several specific items in the blotter. One, in 1904, was a payment for legal expenses to Charles E. Miller, and another the same year for $5,000 paid to W. A. Frick. Still another was found for $1,000 to W. J. Holden in 1904. He used to represent the Mutual, among other companies, before the Massachusetts Legislature. But the witness could not throw any light upon any of these matters, saying that the legal payments could be explained only by the general solicitor.

Payments to Oliphant.

Then Mr. Hughes came across an entry, 'Jan. 13, 1904, expenses, Robert Oliphant, Chairman, $25,000," and asked what voucher the witness had ever got for this payment.

"I got a voucher," said Mr. Preller, as he rubbed his hands together nervously, "showing that Mr. Oliphant got that amount of money for purposes which I don't know about."

Again there was an outburst of laughter. Mr. Hghes noted another payment of like amount to Mr. Oliphant on Aug. 21, 1901, and still a third twenty-five-thousand-dollar payment to Mr. Oliphant on Nov. 9. But the witness could not throw any light upon this. When Mr. Hughes asked him how the $2,500 was booked which Mr. Thummell had said the day before was paid last year to the Republican Campaign Committee, he was equally in the dark. Mr. Hughes then demanded that the books showing how and where this payment was made and charged and the persons who knew about them be produced by the company. He then took up the question of salaries from a book which the witness offered him. It appeared, however, that the salaries were entered in this book in a lump sum, the amount for 1904 being $1,002,720.10. Mr. Hughes demanded that the pay rolls of the company be produced. Mr. Beck arose and said:

"If you want a statement of the salaries paid by the Mutual to its principal officers, here it is." He unrolled from the inside of a newspaper which he was carrying a sheet of paper giving the salaries of the President, the Vice Presidents, the Treasurer, and the General Manager from 1877 down to date. This Mr. Hughes read upon the records as follows:

In 1905 the salaries to date remain the same with the exception of the other First Vice President, whose salary was raised to $40,000.

With Mr. McCurdy again on the stand, Mr. Hughes called for the lease of the National Safe Deposit Company, which occupies quarters in the basement floor at 32 Liberty Street. Under the original agreement this lease provided that the company should pay in 1894 $8,500; 1895, $9,000; 1896, $10,000; 1897, $12,000; 1898, $14,000; 1899, $16,000; 1900, $18,000; 1901, $18,000; 1902, $19,000, and 1903, $20,000. On Feb. 4, 1897, however, there had been a modification of the lease whereby it was continued for the remainder of the period it had to run at $10,000, and on March, 1904, it was renewed at the rate of $14,500 a year.

George B. Dexter, Superintendent of Agencies of the Mutual, was then put on the stand, and the contract was read between the company and the firm of Chamberlain & Gillett. It provides, as has been noted, for the 5 per cent. overwriting commission in excess of that allowed to other agents except the Raymond firm. Various allowances for expenses had been made at different times in the life of the contract. Although Mr. Preller testified that such allowances in varying amounts had been made to other general agents, Mr. Dexter said that a few years ago, when the Chamberlain & Gillett agency had occasion to borrow some money from the United States Mortgage and Trust Company against its renewal commission, his attention had been called to the fact that the profits for that year were $30,000 or $40,000. He was asked other questions about the organization of the agency department. These brought out the fact that H. H. Rogers, Vice President of the Standard Oil Company, was Chairman of the Agency Committee of the Mutual. With him are President Truesdale of the Lackawanna Railroad, and the Second Vice President, General Manager, and Actuary of the Mutual Life. He was asked if he knew whether any firm of general agents had ever made as large profit out of the company as C. H. Raymond & Co. made, and said that he didn't believe any one ever had.

Thomas C. Bell, an employe of Raymond & Co., was called to the stand and asked about the length of time which the partners were in the habit of spending at the office. He said that in 1904 Mr. Raymond, on account of ill-health, had been there only about half the time, but that Dr. Thébaud, with the exception of a week in the Spring and a week in the Fall, was at the office very regularly and stayed as a rule from 9:30 until 4 o'clock.

Mr. Hughes asked Mr. Bell whether the firm had ever paid any commissions to Directors of the Mutual. Mr. Bell said that he never had learned of anything of this kind, but that the firm had sometimes paid commissions to clerks and other employes of the company who spent their evenings in soliciting insurance.

Just before the close of the session Mr. Hughes recalled Mr. Dexter, and started on a line of inquiry regarding a very interesting chapter of the Mutual's affairs. This had to do with the struggle between the company and Thomas H. Bowles, who was formerly general agent of the Mutual in Milwaukee. In 1902, Mr. Dexter said, it was decided to terminate Mr. Bowles's contract, and the company took possession of his office; thereupon he started a campaign against the company, asking for proxies and organizing a policyholders' committee. An adjustment was eventually reached on the basis of $35,000, according to Mr. Dexter.

What Bowles Got.

This was as far as Mr. Dexter went with the story yesterday, but it was learned from other sources that Mr. Bowles in the campaign following his dismissal at the end of 1902 maintained for a time headquarters in New York at 35 Nassau Street, opposite the Mutual Building, and circulated charges of extravagance in the management of the Mutual. The story goes in Wall Street that the $35,000 to which Mr. Dexter testified yesterday was as a matter of fact a very small part of the money actually paid him in settlement of his claims against the company for renewal commissions on the business he wrote while its general agent. It also appears that his lawyer was Charles E. Miller of Wisconsin. The Wall Street accounts have it that a large part of the payment to Bowles was made through the foreign department of the Mutual Life. The subject is one which will be inquired into later.

Following is a table which has been prepared for the use of the committee, showing the relation of expenses to income and expenses to premiums in the Mutual, the Equitable, and the New York Life for the last ten years:

Yesterday's hearing was the last of this week. The hearings next week will be on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Tuesday's hearing will begin at 10:30 o'clock. It is probable that President McCurdy of the Mutual will be called to the stand early in the week.

In addition to President McCurdy, his son and his son-in-law, the Mutual carries on its pay roll Dr. Elias J. Marsh, President McCurdy's brother-in-law, as Medical Director; P. Stuyvesant Pillot, a cousin of Dr. Thebaud, as Inspector of Risks, and Grenville M. White, a relative of First Vice President Granniss, as Secretary of the company. A brother of Dr. Gillette, the other First Vice President of the Mutual, is a partner in the firm of Chamberlain & Gillette. General Agents for the company in Texas, and the testimony yesterday showed that this firm received from the Mutual a 5 per cent. commission on new premiums in excess of that enjoyed by other General Agents and a special allowance for various expenses.

Howard Lewis, the General Agent for the Mutual in Northern New York, is a cousin of Vice President Granniss, and General Agent Raymond of the Newark office is a brother of Charles H. Raymond, a partner in the firm of Charles H. Raymond & Co., from which Dr. Thebaud received as his share of the profits the sums enumerated above.

ACTION NOW TOO HASTY.

Ohio Policy Holders Protest Against Revocation of Licenses.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—Resolutions were adopted to-day by the Ohio Policyholders' Association, which was recently organized, deprecating adverse action by State officials on the charters of the companies now under investigation. It is declared that any revocation of a license would "tend to make policyholders withhold payments of premiums becoming due, and thus possibly violate their policy contracts without any advantage to themselves, but to their own possible loss and to the injury of the companies." It was resolved:

"That the Association regards any action at this time by the Governor of the State or the Superintendent of Insurance, looking to the revocation of the license of any company except for causes specifically required by law, as hasty, inopportune, and unnecessary, not required by the interest of any policyholders so long as the legal reserve is sufficient to meet the obligations of the company."

Your charge-for-the-label hatman trades on his glory. He counts one or two new models in a season sufficient to sustain it. Not so with Stetson. CANAL WORK TO STAY IN MR. TAFT'S HANDS

Secretary to Spend a Fortnight in Panama Next Month.

WANTS THINGS COMFORTABLE

Believes That Employes Cannot Do Well Without Suitable Homes, Diet, and Amusements.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Secretary Root has declined to take over the management of Panama Canal affairs and they will remain in the hands of Secretary Taft. There will be no changes in the organization or conduct of the work.

Secretary Root, in a discussion after the Cabinet meeting to-day, protested good-naturedly against having the canal turned over to him, pleading that his field was now diplomacy and that the management of the business of engineers and contractors would hardly comport with the dignity of his new office or harmonize with the traditions of the State Department.

Secretary Taft decided to-day, after the question of transferring the canal to the State Department was finally disposed of, that he would go to Panama in November and spend a fortnight on the Isthmus. The object of his journey is to inform himself of conditions on the Isthmus in every respect, so that he will be able when he returns to state positively what the situation is and what course of action is to be taken.

He now believes that the first matter to take up is the proper housing of the officials, clerks, and employes on the Isthmus. He purposes to determine by observation on the ground just what should be done to make everybody at work on the canal comfortable and satisfied. He holds that work in the tropics requires first of all suitable physical conditions; that the man who in Panama or the Philippines does not have a good house, suitable diet, and the ordinary diversions and enjoyments that he would naturally demand in the temperate zones cannot do good work and sooner or later succumbs to the feeling that everything is going to the dogs.

"It is the fellow who is fagged out and used up by tropical conditions," says the Secretary, "who comes home saying that there is no organization, that everything is at sixes and sevens, and that we shall fail to build the canal. We should abandon the idea of temporary shacks for our men down there and put things on a permanent working basis. The comfort, health, courage, and patriotism of the men we send to the Isthmus are the instrumentalities on which we must rely to build the canal."

The Secretary will go to the Isthmus early in November by way of New Orleans. Col. Edwards of the Insular Bureau will accompany him, but it has not yet been decided who else will be of the party.

The finances of the canal are being made the subject of a careful report by the Canal Bureau under the direction of Col. Edwards for the purpose of deciding, at a conference to be held next week between the President and Secretary Taft, what course to take in regard to providing funds for the work of the coming year. No decision has been reached on the matter of issuing bonds or making good the deficiency in the Treasury by paying over from the proceeds of canal bonds the $50,000,000 appropriated by the Spooner act. The matter is, however, under consideration, and the plan seems to be so practical that it is likely to be adopted.

Secretary Taft will make his Ohio speech before going to Panama, and will probably take a month for the Panama trip, including the week's travel going and coming, his return being timed for a few days after the meeting of Congress, or about Dec. 10.

INSPECTING SITES FOR DAMS.

Engineers Have Not Yet Expressed an Opinion on Them.

COLON, Oct. 6.—The members of the Advisory Board of Consulting Engineers of the Panama Canal returned to Colon yesterday evening after having carried out yesterday's programme in its entirety except that they were unable to come down the canal to Colon, being prevented by heavy rains.

At Bohio the party examined the proposed site for the dam there, and by means of boats examined the Chagres River and its deviations at all points in that region.

The party started this morning for Gorgona, going as far as Cascadas. To-day's programme includes a study of the site of the proposed dam at Camboa and other engineering features beyond the district examined yesterday.

No expressions as to the merits or demerits of the dam sites have yet been made by the visitors.

Mr. Taft Comes to New York.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Secretary Taft left here for New York to-night, and to-morrow will inspect the Sandy Hook proving grounds. He expects to meet Mrs. Taft on her return from Europe on Monday.

BOERS ATTACKED WINDHOEK.

Cape Colonists Were Also In the Plot Against the Germans.

AUGSBURG, Oct. 6.—A resident of this city has received a letter from a German farmer at Windhoek, German Southwest Africa, dated Aug. 8, partly confirming the story of a Boer plot to overthrow German rule in Southwest Africa.

The letter says that on the previous day Boers and men from Cape Colony made an attack on Windhoek, intending to pillage the place.

The police, however, had previously learned of the plot and arrested five of the Boer ringleaders and twenty Cape Colonists.

OPERATION ON INVERCLYDE.

His Condition Still Dangerous, but Surgeon Is Hopeful.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Lord Inverclyde, Chairman of the Cunard Steamship Line, who is again critically ill with pleuropneumonia at his residence, Castle Wemyss, Scotland, underwent an operation to-day.

His condition is still dangerous, but Prof. McEwan, King Edward's surgeon, who is attending him, is hopeful.

20-KNOT TURBINE SHIPS.

Allan Line Negotiating for the Construction of Two Vessels.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 6.—It is announced that two new turbine steamers, for the construction of which the Allan Line is negotiating, with the intention of placing them in the Canadian trade, will have a speed of twenty knots an hour.

They will be capable of carrying 3,000 passengers each.

Tarrasch Wins His Sixth Game.

NUREMBERG, Oct. 6.—Tarrasch and Marshall played the fourteenth game of their chess match of eight games up at the local club this morning and afternoon. Tarrasch won after fifty moves. The score now reads: Tarrasch, 6; Marshall, 1; drawn, 7.

ENVOY'S WIFE UNDER KNIFE.

Operation to Cure Baroness von Sternburg's Lameness.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—Baroness Speck von Sternburg, wife of the German Ambassador to the United States, who sustained a permanent injury to her left ankle by a fall from a pony when she was a girl, will be operated upon to-day by Prof. Albert Hoffa of the University of Berlin, who effected the remarkable cure of Mrs. Arthur Paget.

Princess von Radolin, wife of the German Ambassador at Paris, suffered an almost identical injury at the same age as Baroness von Sternburg and Prof. Hoffe entirely corrected her lameness by surgery.

The operation that will be performed is a comparatively light one, but it will require the Baroness to remain quiet for about six weeks. Consequently she will not return to Washington until after that time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—It is reported here that the German Ambassador, who was to sail for America on Oct. 17, will be detained for several weeks, partly because of the operation performed on his wife and partly because of his own illness.

Baroness von Sternburg has for years walked with difficulty, always using a cane. She was a Miss Langham of Kentucky. She and her sisters, all noted for their beauty, are very popular in Washington society.

EUROPE A HAPPY FAMILY.

Result That Would Follow Adoption of Suggestions Now Made.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Following the publication of the Anglo-Japanese treaty has come consderable talk regarding the possibility of an understanding between Great Britain and Russia.

All the newspapers are devoting columns to the discussion of the question, pointing out that if Russia is sincere in her expressions of a desire for peace in Central Asia there is no reason why the two ancient enemies should not come to an agreement that will not only assure peace but clear away the suspicions leading to friction which have existed for years.

That negotiations with this object in view are pending seems possible, though definite official confirmation is lacking. Color is lent to the rumors of negotiations by the recent frequent visits paid to the Foreign Office by the Russian Ambassador since his return from his holidays a fortnight ago, and the fact that Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, who returned from his vacation to publish the text of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, has remained at his office continually since then.

It is thought here that the present is an opportune moment for reaching a better understanding between the two countries, both the British and Russian papers having strongly advocated it for the past week.

The newspaper discussion has given rise to suggestions for agreements which, if carried out and lived up to, would make Europe a family in which there would be no differences. One of the suggestions which most appeals to British officialdom and the London press is that Russia, Germany, and France should subscribe to the terms of the Anglo-Japanese treaty.

MOSCOW AGAIN TURBULENT.

Riots and Strikes—Attempt to Kill Helsingfors Police Chief.

MOSCOW, Oct. 6.—Disorderly demonstrations this evening by striking printers, workmen, and students were repeatedly dispersed by Cossacks and gendarmes. Several policemen were wounded.

It is reported that a gendarme was killed, and that there were other casualties among the crowd. The Stastnol Monastery is guarded by troops.

A general strike is threatened. The street car lines and tobacco factories are already affected.

No newspapers are appearing.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 6.—It is reported in the Russ that an attempt has been made on the life of the Chief of Police of Helsingfors.

It is said on good authority that the Baltic Province of Livonia will soon be constituted a Government General.

JAPANESE TRADE PROJECTS.

Measures Recommended by the Associated Chambers of Commerce.

TOKIO, Oct. 6.—The sessions of the Associated Chambers of Commerce were closed to-day after the delegates had passed a resolution to memorialize the Government on numerous points calculated to advance and develop national trade, industry, and finance. The following are the most prominent features:

The appointment of Government commercial agents.

The establishment of floating exhibitions of samples and museums in foreign ports.

A customs tariff union between Korea and Japan.

The opening of a universal exposition.

The improvement of existing railroads and the rapid construction of new railroads.

Retrenchment in the expense of the administration.

The establishment of a Japanese-Chinese Bank.

The adoption of measures against the expansion of the currency.

RUSSIA'S WAR EXPENSES.

Extraordinary Disbursements for Six Months Were $281,202,000.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 6.—Preliminary returns of the State revenue and expenditure for the first six months of the present financial year show that the ordinary receipts were $474,623,000, an increase of $7,176,000 over the corresponding period of the previous year.

The ordinary expenditure was $460,790,000, a decrease of $13,365,000.

The extraordinary receipts were $231,001,500, an increase of $89,297,000.

The extraordinary expenditure totals $281,202,000, an increase of $200,348,000.

NO ARMISTICE IN KOREA YET.

Envoys Have Met Three Times, But Are Unable to Agree.

SEOUL, Oct. 6.—A Japanese staff officer says that after three meetings of the envoys the terms of an armistice in North Korea are still unarranged, although there has been no further fighting.

The Russians insist that the Japanese give up their present positions, but the Japanese refuse to create a neutral zone by evacuating places they occupied after hard fighting.

JAPAN SEEKS A NEW LOAN.

Expects to Place a Portion of It on the French Market.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Local bankers say that the new Russian loan will probably be at 4 per cent., and that it will be issued at 94.

The completion of the arrangements for this loan has brought out the fact that Japan is also expecting to place a portion of a new loan on the French market, although this will not be done until after the Russian loan is issued.

Lamsdorff Not Going to Paris.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 6.—The Foreign Office to-day issued a denial of the report printed in the Paris Temps yesterday that Foreign Minister Lamsdorff proposed to visit Paris and Berlin for the purpose of conferring with Premier Rouvier and Chancellor von Bülow.

TARIFF REVISION PLANK ADOPTED IN BAY STATE

Massachusetts Republicans Almost Unanimous for Changes.

LODGE UPHOLDS THE DEMAND

Senator Deplores Inequities of Present Protective System—Curtis Guild, Jr., Nominated for Governor.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—With only one voice raised in opposition the Republican State Convention in Tremont Temple to-day declared for a revision of the tariff. The radical wing, under lead of Eugene N. Foss of Boston, did not offer a substitute for the plank relating to the tariff, although, in a speech to the delegates, Mr. Foss declared that the revision lavored in the platform was not of sufficient scope. He and his followers were encouraged, he said, by the concessions made to them, and next year would expect to have the convention accept their proposition in full. The ticket nominated follows:

For Governor—CURTIS GUILD, JR., Boston.

Lieutenant Governor—EBEN S. DRAPER, Hopedale.

Secretary of State—WILLIAM M. OLIN, Boston.

Treasurer and Receiver General—ARTHUR B. CHAPIN, Holyoke.

Auditor—HENRY E. TURNER, Malden.

Attorney General—DANA MALONE, Greenfield.

The platform presented by the Committee on Resolutions was adopted without amendment. It contained an indorsement of the Administration of President Roosevelt, declaring in part:

"We indorse most heartily the President's fearless enforcement of laws enacted to prevent great corporations from oppressing the people by unjust discrimination or by the destruction of lawful competition. In such action he should receive the earnest support of all our citizens. The rights of every citizen must be safeguarded, and we favor such additional legislation as may be necessary to prevent all unjust discriminations in the form of railway rebates or under any device whatever.

"We believe that the policy of protection to American labor and American industry should be maintained. The Republican Party of Massachusetts reaffirms its devotion to the principle of protection and is opposed to tariff changes tending to depress or destroy any of our industries or to lower the wages of American labor. But we recognize the fact as declared by the National Republican Convention at Chicago that rates should be changed when conditions have so changed that the public interest demands the alteration of schedules. The time at which revision of the tariff should be undertaken must be determined by the representatives of the party from all parts of our country. We approve the position taken by our Senators and Representatives at the last session of Congress in favor of present action, and we urge that they should continue to press upon their party associates in Congress from other States the wisdom of a consideration of the tariff for the purpose of revision and readjustment."

As soon as Congressman Lawrence had moved adoption of the report Henry B. Blackwell of Boston asked to be heard on behalf of the Committee of One Hundred on Reciprocal Trade. He caused a stir by urging adoption of the resolutions. This was interpreted by the delegates to mean that the Committee of One Hundred was satisfied with the revision plank.

The next speaker, Gen. William F. Draper of Hopedale, brother of the candidate for Lieutenant Governor, opposed the revision plank, declaring that it was but an entering wedge, and that if revision was followed by National calamity every person in the convention who voted for it would be responsible. The adoption of the resolution, he said, would put the Republican Party out of harmony with the National organization.

Mr. Foss said in reply:

"I would not be true to the principles which I represent nor to the 40,000 whose opinions I hold in my hand, (raising a large package of postal cards.) Republicans all, I have no doubt, (hoots and derisive laughter.) if I should say we are satisfied.

"We have made great progress, however. You will remember that last year, in the Spring, our plank was rejected by the convention. I warned you then, and in the Fall convention the tariff plank was a straddle."

Before the next word was uttered a voice from the gallery was heard: "Who killed Bates?" Simultaneously hisses were heard from all parts of the hall. Mr. Foss exclaimed: "You hiss now, but you will listen later! To-day's platform is a great advance, but we have not gone far enough. We expect that next year our platform will be adopted in toto."

Senator Lodge was warmly applauded.

"This resolution under discussion does not touch the State officers to be nominated here, but those who represent you in the National Congress. Gen. Draper misinterprets my attitude, and I believe I can fairly say that he misinterprets the attitude of all my associates in Congress, when he declares that we are going to enter on a revision of the tariff by uniting with the Democrats at Washington. This revision is to be done by the Republican Party. I am not engaging in any revision where there is to be assistance from the Democrats. We of Massachusetts take it to be the part of wisdom to treat the revision question now.

"You cannot have protection for a part of the country and for a part of the country's industries and free trade for another section of the country."

D'AURIGNAC TO TRY AGAIN.

Mme. Humbert's Brother Has Taken Legal Advice, and Believes He Can Land.

Romaine d'Aurignac, brother of the Paris swindler Therese Humbert, who was deported by the immigration authorities a few weeks ago, will probably make another attempt to land on American soil. He claims that the offense for which he was convicted and sent to prison in France would not be an offense under laws governing corporations in this country, and that therefore his deportation was illegal.

D'Aurignac's New York lawyers are Seymour, Seymour & McGrath of 80 Wall Street. They have notified him of the results of their investigation, and as soon as the letter reaches him it is believed he will sail.

Asked why d'Aurignac was so anxious to get into this country, one of his lawyers said yesterday:

"He is uncomfortable in Paris or in France. He was shut up in prison for two years over there. If he comes here again I think the Ellis Island authorities will be mighty careful how they act."

ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS SERUM.

Prof. Marmorek Reports Successful Results from His Discovery.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Sections of the International Tuberculosis Congress to-day resumed the discussion of papers and received reports of experiments.

A description by Prof. Marmorek of the Pasteur Institute of the successful results obtained by numerous distinguished European savants from the use of his new anti-tuberculosis serum attracted considerable attention.

The delegates are awaiting with great interest the statement to be made to-morrow by Prof. Behring relative to his reported discovery of a cure for tuberculosis.

Asks for Heavy Alimony.

Application for $4,000 alimony and $5,000 counsel fee was made yesterday before Justice Maddox, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, in the action for divorce brought by George E. Lovett, the Brooklyn real estate man, against Grace E. Lovett. The nature of the defense was not disclosed. Decision was reserved.

KAISER'S ACTION A FAILURE.

View of Count Pfeil Regarding the Morocco Negotiations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—In one of the sections of the Colonial Congress to-day Count Pfeil, who is regarded as the foremost German authority on Morocco, spoke in rather a discouraging tone of the results obtained by Emperor William's interference in the affairs of that country.

Count Pfeil said that although Germany had tried to act as an "honest broker," her action had not contributed to promote friendly relations between her and other countries. In fact, the German Government had been placed in an awkward predicament.

The Count did not think that German interests had been promoted, and he went on to say that the entente cordiale with France, while it was desirable for both countries, would, he was afraid, remain a pious dream. He said he hoped that Germany's economic interests in Morocco would not be neglected in favor of her political interests.

MAY COERCE HUNGARIANS.

Government, It Is Said, Will Carry Out Laws by Force.

VIENNA, Oct. 6.—It is reported from Budapest that the Government is determined to meet resistance to recruiting and the paying of taxes by forcible means. It has decided to strengthen the gendarmerie by the addition of detachments from all regiments quartered in Hungary, which are to be under the command of gendarmerie officers, thus showing that the task of the troops will only be to preserve public order.

The Lower House of the Reichsrath today rejected several urgency motions in favor of universal suffrage. An imperial rescript proroguing the House was read, and the sitting closed in an uproar.

OUR METHODS IN ENGLAND.

British Company Formed to Build American Blast Furnaces.

Arrangements have been made for the formation of a company under the British Joint Stock acts to handle the blast furnace and other patents and business in Europe and the British colonies of the Wellman-Seaver-Morgan Company of Cleveland, the largest builder of blast furnaces and rolling mill equipment in the country. S. T. Wellman, President of the Wellman-Seaver-Morgan Company, will be Chairman of the British company.

Julian Kennedy, the Pittsburg blast furnace expert, and Axel Sablin, formerly connected with the management of various steel plants on this side, recently formed a British company under the name of Julian Kennedy, Sablin & Co., Limited, to undertake contracts as engineers for the modeling of British and Continental European blast furnaces on American lines. The British Wellman-Seaver-Morgan Company will, however, be the first organized to take up both the engineering and complete construction work of European steel and other industrial plants on American methods.

SENSELESS IN BOATHOUSE.

Woman Found at Hastings Is In a Serious Condition.

HASTINGS-ON-HUDSON, Oct. 6.—A woman who said that she was Mrs. Lillian Coles, a widow from New York City, was found unconscious in a boathouse here yesterday afternoon. She was covered with bruises. With her was a man known as "Kid" Hanley.

The woman was found by Justice B. F. Tompkins, who was on his way to Dobbs Ferry. He had been told by a young man that a woman had been murdered in the boathouse. He had her taken to the Dobbs Ferry Hospital, where she still is in a serious condition.

The woman, with another, appeared here Wednesday afternoon and went to the International Hotel. They were asked to leave the hotel, and were seen later in the streets with Albert Kunzle and James Stevenson of this place, and Hanley. Then they disappeared.

The police are looking for the injured woman's companions. Her woman friend declared that Mrs. Coles's right name was Rogers, and that her husband is a commission merchant.

DREDGING CONTRACT ERROR.

City Ferry Work Estimated at $12,000 May Cost $90,000.

Controller Grout has made public a report submitted to him by Merritt H. Smith of his engineering staff on the G. B. Spearin contract for dredging for the ferry slips and structures at St. George, S. I., for the municipal ferry service.

Mr. Smith says that the preliminary estimate for the work was prepared by John M. Carrere of Carrere & Hastings, architects, and that the estimate was for 4,000 cubic feet of dredging. The Spearin bid was for $3 per cubic yard. Subsequently the amount of dredging was found to be largely in excess of that estimated, so that the contract may amount to nearly $90,000 instead of the figures originally estimated. Of this Mr. Smith reports:

"The increase in dredging is not due to any change in the plans or specifications, but to an error in making the preliminary estimate which the architects prepared. In making up this estimate the architects misunderstood the data furnished by the Dock Department, which showed the depths to which wash borings had been made and at which depths either boulders or solid rock prevented any further depth to be attained. The architects took this to mean soundings to the top of the mud or river bottom. The result was that nothing was included in this estimate of 4,000 yards lying between the top of the mud and the top of what was presumably boulders or solid rock. The contractor already has removed 12,936 cubic yards of material, of which 826 yards is rock, which has to be drilled and blasted before being removed."

Passenger Thrown Off a Car.

John Jones of 140 East Ninety-sixth Street disputed late yesterday afternoon with Vincent Quinn of 426 East Sixteenth Street, conductor on an eastbound Forty-second Street car, as to whether he had paid his fare. At Fifth Avenue Quinn threw Mr. Jones out. He was picked up unconscious and sent to have his bumps treated. Then Policeman Dwyer arrested Quinn for assault.

FORAKER OUT FOR 1908, OPENS AGAINST WEAVER

Aids Penrose, Hoping for Pennsylvania Delegation in 1908.

WAR ON ROOSEVELT POLICIES

Taft May Enter Ohio Campaign to Offset the Senator—Root Hit in Philadelphia Campaign.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Senator Foraker, having clearly taken issue with the policy of the Roosevelt Administration on two leading issues, is out for votes to capture the Presidential nomination in 1908. His answer accepting the invitation to enter Pennsylvania and speak in Philadelphia in behalf of the Penrose-Durham organization is a first step.

Mr. Foraker has done all that he can to attract to himself the support of all the elements hostile to railroad rate legislation. It is generally believed here that he will have the backing of those interests. He now seeks to perfect alliances with State political leaders, starting with Pennsylvania. That State's great vote in the National Convention is recognized as about the best capital a candidate can have.

Whether or not there is a bargain between Foraker and Penrose cannot be learned. Ohio men, however, say that Mr. Foraker's dash into the breach to help Penrose at this critical time has that purpose and no other.

The object of the Penrose machine is not to have Mr. Foraker speak on local issues, concerning which he knows nothing, but to make it appear that the Philadelphia campaign is a National one and that the party at large is concerned in the result.

The Administration fully recognizes the significance of Foraker's action in thus opposing it at every point, and is taking steps to meet the danger. Mr. Taft will go to Ohio and make speeches defending the railroad rate policy from Foraker's attacks. The Senator is expected to retort, and a strong series of speeches between the two is looked for. The Ohio campaign is expected to be one of the most unusual ever seen in this country, with the senior Senator and a member of the Cabinet, both Presidential candidates, attacking and defending the policy of the President.

Further developments in Foraker's plan of hostility to the Administration are expected. He already has made it clear that if the President comes out for tariff revision he will attack that policy, and at the last session of Congress he took a leading part in foiling the President's attempt to make an arrangement with Santo Domingo.

Although a number of persons of National prominence in the Republican Party had been invited, Foraker seems the only one whom the ring found willing to come out in opposition to Mayor Weaver. Ohio politicians here call attention to the fact that Secretary Root was not only Mayor Weaver's counsel in his fight with the ring, but went beyond the bounds allotted to a paid lawyer and made a blistering arraignment of the organization. It is a matter of talk that while President Roosevelt cannot take sides openly in a Republican quarrel his sympathies are just where those of his Premier are.

Having, as clearly as possible, marked the line of difference between himself and Secretary Taft in Ohio, Mr. Foraker now, according to Ohio men, seeks to draw a similar line between himself and Mr. Root, who also is mentioned as a Presidential candidate. As fast as possible he is placing himself across the Administration's path and across the paths of all its possible candidates.

WEAVER APPEALS TO PEOPLE.

Asks Them to Ratify Loan Bill, Although He Disapproves It.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—Mayor Weaver to-day issued an address to the citizens of Philadelphia suggesting that they ratify the loan bill passed by City Councils yesterday over the Mayor's veto. The bill authorizes an increase in the city's borrowing capacity of $4,000,000 for the removal of grade crossings. In his address to the people, after stating his objections to the Councils' action, the Mayor says:

"Unfortunately, under the law, if the Loan bill should be defeated at the coming election, no Loan bill for this purpose can again be submitted to the people until a year has elapsed. For this reason the people are put in the position that they must either vote for the loan at this election, or be prevented from doing so for over a year.

"This reckless and extravagant action thus makes it imperative for the people to ratify the extravagance now or be deprived for a year of an opportunity to pass upon the question. Regretful as this condition is, and reprehensible as it must appear to every right-thinking citizen, nevertheless I deem it my duty to suggest that I see no other way than for them to ratify the loan at this time."

BOY TELLS OF WOMAN HELD BY KIDNAPPERS

She May Have Been Mrs. Dominick Neigro, Who Is Missing.

SAYS THEY HAD HER TIED

Police Believe That Little Tony Manendino, Who Was Gone for Twelve Days, Is Telling the Truth.

Little Tony Manendino, the six-year-old son of the Brooklyn contractor, who, after being lost twelve days, was found on a car in Manhattan late on Thursday evening, talked a lot more yesterday to the police and reporters about his kidnapping and captivity. The police still believe that Tony was really kidnapped.

The little boy said yesterday that there were two other prisoners in the room in which he was kept captive for twelve days—a woman and a little boy.

The boy showed unusual intelligence for one so young, and told the story of his adventures in a very straightforward manner. In no part of his story was he clearer than when telling of the woman and child.

"There was a rope around her waist," he said, "and another rope to her hands. They were tied to a bedpost. She cried all the time, and the men kept telling her to shut up. When she didn't mind they hit her, and she cried worse than ever and asked for her husband."

"What was her name?" Tony was asked.

"I don't know. The little boy called her 'mamma,' and I called her mamma, too. The boy was lots bigger than me."

While Tony was telling of the woman and her child, Dominick Colruppo, an Italian who lives in Manhattan and works on a stone crusher at Grantwood, N. J., was arrested by the police of Hackeneack, on complaint of Dominick Neigro of Palisades Park, who charged him with having kipnapped Mrs. Neigro and their two children, and holding them for ransom.

Neigro said that his wife and two children, a girl of 7 years and a boy little more than a baby, were spirited away from home about three months ago, while he was at work. Since their disappearance he says he has received a dozen "Black Hand" letters demanding money and threatening harm to his wife and children.

Neigro told Justice Charles Lozier of Ridgefield, to whom he applied for a warrant for Colruppo's arrest, that he had been so terrified by the letters that he was afraid to call in the police. Last Sunday, he said, three men came to him and demanded $100. When he said he didn't have the money they told him to prepare to die. Colruppo was one of the men, he declares. Yesterday he learned where Colruppo was working and the warrant was served. Colruppo refused to talk, beyond saying that he knew nothing of Mrs. Neigro's whereabouts.

Tony Marendino talks English as well as he does Italian. The police of the Fifth Avenue Police Station are inclined to credit his story, saying that he is too young to have invented it.

"I was playing in a vacant lot," he said, "across the street from our house, when a man with a mustache came up and told me if I would go with him he would give me two cents. I said no, and tried to run away, but he caught me and took me around the lot and on to the avenue. Then he walked to Twentieth Street and turned up to Ninth Avenue. Another man was waiting there and they put me on a car and took me across some water. After we got across we took a train up in the air and rode for a while. When we got off they took me to a high house and we walked up three stairs.

"They knocked at a door and carried me into the room where the woman was tied. They gave me something to eat and told me I mustn't cry. I cried once and they slapped me. The man shaved his mustache off.

"After a while they took me down stairs and out to a stable that had a horse in it. They didn't keep me there long, but carried me back to the room where the woman was. There were two men in the room—not the man that caught me—and two other women besides the woman who was tied and her little boy.

"They gave me a mattress to sleep on, and didn't treat me badly unless I cried, and then they made me stop. They gave me plenty to eat. Last night they made me dress, and the same two men who caught me took me to a street car, and when the conductor gave me a red transfer slip they went away. Then the policemen brought me home."

"Who were the men that took you to the house?"

"They were men that used to shovel dirt for my father. I don't know their names."

"Where was the house they took you to?"

"Over in New York; I don't know where."

To Capt. Carson Tony said the house was that of his cousin, but the Captain thinks that he was simply told this by the people who were holding him.

"Do you know Peconi?" Capt. Carson asked the boy.

"Sure," came the reply. "He was arrested."

"How did you know that?"

"His brother told me. His brother came to the house."

"Did Peconi come to see you while you were in New York?"

"No; nobody came to the house that I know."

Salvatore Peconi was arraigned in the Butler Street Court yesterday. The nominal charge of vagrancy made against him at the time of his arrest was withdrawn, and an affidavit charging him with kidnapping was preferred by Detective Vachris. Vachris based the affidavit upon the statement of the elder Manendino that Peconi had offered to return the missing boy for a reward.

Detective Corroi has the last "Black Hand" letter sent to the elder Manendino and a letter written by Peconi to his wife. The handwriting is identical, according to the police.

Peconi was held in $5,000 bail. Manendino offered to sign as surety, but Capt. Harkins of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau protested and so did the Assistant District Attorney. District Attorney Clark has taken hold of the case against both Peconi and Vito Laduca, who is said to have been arrested in Baltimore on a charge of kidnapping a year ago.

"I am satisfied that in Peconi and Laduca we have the men responsible for the kidnapping of young Manendino," said Capt. Harkins. "We would have had a clear case against Peconi if it were not that the Manendino is so frightened. He refused to co-operate with us in trapping Peconi and persists in saying that he and Peconi are friends when he knows he has been paying Peconi $1.50 a day more than the man earned for the sake of protection."

Union Autos for Strike Warfare.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 6.—The American Civic Association, at its session here today, adopted resolutions calling upon the governing powers of the United States and Canada to do something to save Niagara Falls from "commercial vandalism."

WAS LEITER A LAMB?

Counsel Says That's What He Was In International Power Pool.

Cyrus Judson Field was again on the witness stand yesterday in the Supreme Court, where Franklin, Scott & Co. are suing Joseph H. Hoadley and Joseph Leiter for $65,800 which they allege they lost in International Power Company stock while acting as brokers for the Field pool.

Counsel for Leiter declared that Leiter was the lamb in the game, and that he was fleeced out of $130,000, and was in no way connected with the pool at the time the stock broke.

Field, in answer to a question, testified that he had drunk much liquor on the morning of April 30, 1902, the day the break came, explaining that the previous day he had failed to obtain from Hoadley a check for $250,000 to cover the stock.

"Don't you know that Mr. Leiter bought 1,000 shares of the stock on April 29, in response to a bullish telegram sent him to Chicago, and that he paid $180 a share for it, and lost between $130,000 and $140,000?" was asked on cross-examination.

Mr. Mooney, counsel for the plaintiffs, objected, and Mr. Beard explained that he wanted to show that Leiter was the lamb.

The trial will be continued on Monday.

PRINCESS'S HINT TAKEN.

Commercial Use Being Made of Canadian Bluestone.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Oct. 6.—While visiting Canada the Princess of Wales, then the Duchess of York, remarked a specimen of bluestone in the collection of Prof. Willmot of the Geological Survey. She was so pleased with it that the professor gave it to her, telling her it was sodolite.

On her return to England she was watching the decoration of Marlborough House, when she suggested that the bluestone might be used in mosaic work. An astute decorator discovered where the stone came from. He sent a representative to North Hastings, Ontario, and bought the quarry rights.

To-day the quarries are being worked and plants have been established to cut and polish the bluestone.

THREATENS RECEIVER MOORE.

"A Depositor" in Failed Philadelphia Concern Sends Menacing Letter.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—J. Hampton Moore, receiver of the City Trust Safe Deposit and Security Company, to-day called the attention of the postal authorities to a letter received by him signed "A Depositor," and saying:

"After watching your actions for months and being driven to desperation by you I have decided to take the matter into my own hands. I swear I will blow your brains out if I do not get the money I have in the City Trust, the savings of years. I am in actual want, while you, you dishonorable wretch, are living in luxury on poor widows' and children's savings. Before I end my own existence I will try mighty hard to end yours. Don't think this is written by a crank. It is a warning. Take heed."

A statement of the assets and liabilities of the company was made public by Receiver Moore to-day, and showed the liabilities to be almost double the amount of the assets.

DEER JUMPS INTO FACTORY.

Girl Employes In Panic—Animal Is Carted to the Woods.

Special to The New York Times.

DERBY, Conn., Oct. 6.—A deer wandered from the highlands into the city this morning and was chased through the principal business street by a bird dog and a crowd of men. Cornered in the Ansonia yard of the Osborne & Cheesman Company, it sprang through a window into the mill, causing a panic among the girl employes. The deer ran between machines and then leaped out of a window five feet from the floor into an airshaft, where it was captured.

The Connecticut law prohibits killing of deer until 1910, under a penalty of $100. The men who captured the animal accordingly loaded it into a wagon, drove out into the country, and released it. The State, under the law, must pay the damage done by the deer's invasion.

TROUBLE GETTING A NAME.

One-half of a Party's Title Gone and the Other Half Going.

New trouble came up yesterday for the Social Democratic Party, which on Tuesday was enjoined by the New York State Court of Appeals from using the word "Democratic" in its title because the court holds this to be an infringement on the title Democratic Party. Outside of this State the party is known as the Socialist Party, and when the decision was announced the Executive Committee met and decided to adopt the name of "Socialist Party."

The Socialist Labor Party, its bitter enemy, which is composed of the De Leon Socialists, saw a way yesterday to give its rival a rap which may force it to seek a new name. It entered a protest with the Bureau of Elections against the use of the name "Socialist Party" because, it is held, the word "Socialist" infringes on the title Socialist Labor Party. A lawyer has been engaged by the De Leonites to try to uphold the protest.

LEGACY FOR MAN IN JAIL.

Michigan Lumberman Leaves $10,000 to One Who Saved His Life.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, Oct. 6.—To Preston A. Young, in jail at Allentown, Penn., for swindling, has been left a legacy of $10,000 by John Kohler, a retired Michigan lumberman. Ten years ago Young was in a hospital here for several months, after saving Kohler's life in a runaway accident at Pompton Lakes. Young was well rewarded at the time. The bequest is a further reward.

$300 for a Horsewhipping.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Oct. 6.—Lester C. Reimer got a judgment for $300 to-day against Charles R. Zacharias for a horsewhipping Zacharias gave to him last April. Reimer was paying attentions to Zacharias's young daughter, and persisted in doing so after the father had warned him to keep away from the girl. Zacharias bought a horsewhip, inveigled Reimer to a dark street, and laid on the lash until blood flowed from his face, neck, and hands. Reimer sued for $50,000.

There have been no new cases for four days, and all the patients are making satisfactory progress.

SAY RAMSEY ILLEGALLY HELD OFFICE IN WABASH

Qualifying Stock Bought Recently, Railroad Counsel Declare.

GOULDS BITTERLY ATTACKED

Their Systems Accused of Debauching the Public—Argument Heard in Injunction Proceedings.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—Charges that Joseph Ramsey, Jr., for years illegally held the Presidency of the Wabash Railroad and that the Gould railroads have debauched public morals were exchanged in the Circuit Court here to-day. The occasion was a hearing before Judge Taylor on the petition of Mr. Ramsey for an injunction to prevent the voting at the Wabash annual election, in Toledo next Tuesday, of Wabash stock held by the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Railroad Companies.

In its answer the Wabash questions Mr. Ramsey's right to bring the action, saying it has no knowledge that he owns any of its stock or debenture bonds. It has no record to show that either the Missouri Pacific or the Iron Mountain has any of its stock, and denies that it is controlled by them. It holds that the three are continuous and connecting lines, and may legally hold stock of one another, the Wabash and Missouri Pacific routes between Kansas City and St. Louis being through entirely different territories.

It is denied that George J. Gould owns or directs the Missouri Pacific or that he chooses Directors of the Wabash to carry out his wishes. It is denied that there is any plan to stifle competition.

It is declared that the Mercantile Trust Company of New York owns 5,435 debenture bonds of the Wabash, that W. S. Wilson of New York owns four debenture bonds and 31,300 shares of common stock, and H. M. Walker of New York 20,000 shares of common stock. George Gould owns three debenture bonds, 100 shares of common stock, and 19,900 shares of preferred stock.

Distinctive statements in the Missouri Pacific Company's answer are: That the Missouri Pacific owns 20,000 shares of Wabash common stock, delivered Feb. 24 last to the Equitable Trust Company of New York, to cover notes aggregating $6,000,000; that the Equitable Trust Company transferred the stock to H. M. Walker to be held in trust, and that Mr. Ramsey, having failed to obtain sufficient proxies to elect himself President is endeavoring to disfranchise holders of Wabash stock and bonds to accomplish his purpose.

The Iron Mountain's answer was the same except for this statement: That the Iron Mountain owns 65,000 shares of Wabash common stock and 5,435 debenture bonds, the latter held in trust by the Mercantile Trust Company of New York.

T. M. Bradbury, Secretary of the Missouri State Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners, was called by the plaintiff to testify that the latest annual report of the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Roads for the year ended June 30, 1904, showing the financial relations between the Wabash and Missouri Pacific, had not been submitted to the commission yet.

E. R. Pryor, assistant to the President of the Wabash, testified:

Q.—Does George Gould hold stock in the Wabash? A.—He does.

Q.—Do his brothers? A.—No, the estate of Jay Gould does.

Q.—Did Mr. Ramsey hold stock during the active administration as President? A.—No, but he owned some debenture bonds.

Mr. Pryor said that the books of the company were in New York and he was unable to refer to them.

Col. Wells H. Blodgett, General Solicitor for the Wabash and one of the counsel for the defense, was called and asked:

"Do you know how Mr. Ramsey secured 100 shares of stock of Wabash Railway last July?"

"Mr. Ramsey told me that while he was in Europe he decided to buy the stock, to make himself eligible for election as Director," was his reply.

This ended testimony for the plaintiff. Defendants' counsel called for Mr. Ramsey.

"He is not here," said F. W. Lehmann, his counsel. "I did not know that you wanted him."

"We want to ask him how he got the 100 shares of stock," said A. G. Cochran, General Solicitor for the Missouri Pacific.

"You don't seem to have any record here showing that Mr. Ramsey owns any stock," retorted Mr. Lehmann. "Your books and records are all kept in New York, in violation of the laws of Missouri."

"Mr. Ramsey seems to have got his stock after he became President," said Mr. Cochran.

"You made him President for years," returned Mr. Lehmann.

"Yes," said Mr. Cochran, "he was made President when he was not eligible."

"I'll leave that to Col. Blodgett," said Mr. Lehmann.

Further testimony for the defense was waived.

Col. Blodgett, arguing against an injunction, said Mr. Ramsey did not profess to be damaged as a stockholder by the voting of stock owned by other railroads, his only plea being that such voting tended to stifle competition.

"If this were true," said Col. Blodgett, "Mr. Ramsey and other stockholders would be benefited rather than otherwise by the stifling of competition, and only the public would have occasion for complaint. The attorney for the plaintiff seems to be proceeding by degrees. So far no case has been shown."

"It is necessary to proceed by degrees," said Mr. Lehmann, "when we are dealing with the Goulds, who violate the laws of Missouri by keeping their books and records in New York."

He denounced the Gould railroad systems, saying:

"They are among the public service corporations which have debauched public morals in America. They are the playthings of men who have no interest in them as industrial enterprises. They are in control of a clique of financial speculators.

"It was in fighting for the independence of the Wabash that Joseph Ramsey made enemies of these men. His protest against the appointment of A. C. Bird, already traffic manager of the Missouri Pacific, to the same position on the Wabash, was the beginning of his struggle against them."

It was nearly 7 o'clock to-night before the final argument was submitted. Judge Taylor announced that he would render his decision Monday morning.

PROXIES FOR RAMSEY.

Wabash Shareholders Abroad Cable Their Votes to Him.

Both sides in the Ramsey-Gould contest are active in their effort to get proxies for the Toledo election next Tuesday. Among the proxies procured yesterday by Mr. Ramsey were several representing blocks of stock and bonds held abroad. The owners of these securities cabled yesterday to their representatives here to place their proxies in Mr. Ramsey's hands.

In reference to the announcement that application would be made to the courts in Ohio for the appointment of inspectors to serve at the meeting, it was said that such procedure was frequently adopted in the case of meetings at which a contest is expected. This will serve to bring the meeting under the direction of the courts. Mr. Ramsey's friends as well as the Gould adherents expect many points of difference to arise at the annual meeting. In some quarters the opinion is expressed that it is most likely that an adjournment of the meeting will be found necessary.

F. A. Delano, the newly appointed President of the Wabash, left yesterday for Chicago. Mr. Rameey himself probably will go west on Sunday to make final preparations for the annual meeting.

PACKERS FACING TRIAL ON CONSPIRACY COUNT

Enter Demurrers to Nine Other Allegations Made by Grand Jury.

POINT FOR THE GOVERNMENT

Admission, Says Prosecution, That Charge Is Valid—Pleas of Not Guilty Promised for Monday.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Demurrers to nine counts in the indictments returned by the Federal Grand Jury against five packing companies and seventeen of their employes were filed in the United States District Court to-day. Pleas of not guilty under the first count are to be entered next Monday, when the entire matter will be taken up before Judge Humphrey.

After filing demurrers John S. Miller, defendants' attorney, had a conference with United States District Attorney Morrison and Assistant Attorney General Pagin. The meeting lasted more than an hour.

By pleading not guilty to the first count of the indictment the packers virtually will admit, according to Government officials, that at least one of the counts is good in form and substance.

The demurrers are on the ground of ambiguity, vagueness, uncertainty, and indefiniteness in seven of the counts, and on the ground that double charges are contained in two other counts.

The first count, to which the plea of not guilty is to be entered, contains the following allegations:

"The defendants unlawfully did engage in a conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several States of the United States; against the peace and dignity of the United States, and contrary to the form of the statute of the same in such case made and provided."

The indictment then alleges the defendants had control of 60 per cent. of the business, divided as follows:

Armour & Co., 25 per cent.; Swift & Co., 35 per cent.; Fairbank Canning Company, 20 per cent.; Cudahy Packing Company, 15 per cent. Competition was to be defeated, it is alleged, by the defendants preventing their agents from bidding against one another and by the fixing of prices on cattle; curtailing the supply of meat, "tanking" sausage casing and containers to be destroyed so that the price would be maintained; alloting districts for each defendant for the establishment of branch houses; each defendant to pay into a common fund, based upon the hundredweight of beef, in selling beef in greater proportions than allotted.

INSPECTION FOR TRUST RIVALS.

Plan to Provide for Small Dealers by Assessing Cost of Meat Tags.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The small meat packers are to have the Government inspection they have sought so long. Secretary Wilson, at the Cabinet meeting to-day, discussed the matter with Attorney General Moody and the President. It was decided to put the cost of tags on the packers and so save about $50,000 out of the appropriation for the inspection service, which can be applied to the employment of more taggers and microscopists.

The charge that the Administration was favoring the Beef Trust by inspecting meat of the large concerns, who alone exported meats, had to be met decisively and the plan adopted seemed the quickest and best. The independent packers made it easy by offering to pay the cost of inspection rather than be driven out of business.

Under the inhibition placed by Congress in the last Appropriation act all expenditures in the Department of Agriculture must be made precisely as directed by Congress. It seems unlikely, therefore, that the desired inspection of the independent meat plants will go into effect until after Congress has acted.

Some objection to the plan was found in the argument that, on the pretext that the packers must pay for inspection, the price of meats might be advanced to the consumer perhaps ten times that sum.

"It is up to the packers now," said a member of the Cabinet to-night. "If they put up the price of meate Congress will have something to say. If they will assure the country of fair play Congress will approve the plan proposed by Secretary Wilson and all will go well."

CALDWELL, N. J., Oct. 6.—The Royal Arcanum Council of Caldwell has adopted the following resolution in support of the recent increase in rates of insurance:

"Resolved, That the officers and members of this council extend to the Supreme Council an earnest and hearty support in sustaining the new rates, as adopted at the annual meeting in Atlantic City. Many Charges Against the Peoria School Superintendent.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 6.—Thirteen indictments have thus far been returned against Newton C. Dougherty, City Superintendent of Schools and President of the Peoria National Bank. Ten of them are for embezzlement and three for forgery. Forty more are being drawn by the State Attorney's office. It was said at that office to-day that the total would reach more than two hundred.

Erwin J. Scnebly, discount and exchange clerk at the Peoria National Bank, the man who first discovered the alleged irregularities in Mr. Dougherty's methods of handling school funds, said to-day:

"I took charge of the individual books at the bank seven years ago and shortly thereafter I began to notice the queer methods Mr. Dougherty had of handling the funds of the Peoria School Board. He would make checks payable to various local firms and give his personal check for a smaller amount. I called the attention of the bank officials to this state of affairs and was informed that it was none of my business. I was then transferred to the discount and exchange department.

"When I was called before the Grand Jury there were exhibited many changed checks. In one instance a check, charged to the School Fund, had been raised from $24 to $2,450.

"I was discharged from the bank only last Saturday."

DICKINSON ON FAGAN.

Jersey Secretary the Mayor's Administration Is a Failure.

Answering Mayor Fagan's public charge that he is working to defeat the Mayor re-election at the behest of the corporations, Secretary of State Samuel D. Dickinson of Jersey City denied yesterday that he is on the payroll of the Public Service Corporation, as the Mayor has said. He says that the Mayor's manifesto, prepared, he declares, by Corporation Counsel Record, "is a scheme to disrupt the Republican Party and to achieve it in such a way that the only survivor in the wreck shall be George L. Record.

"The people of Jersey City," he adds, "know Record, I believe, as I know him, to be a politician whose boundless ambition is a menace to the community."

The Colonel declares that his opposition to Mayor Fagan's renomination last Spring was because the Mayor's second term was a failure. "It has been," the Colonel explains, "the most expensive administration this city has ever known, exceeding by hundreds of thousands of dollars any administration of the past. The financial management has been bungled, and even the city's credit has been called into question."

PIANOLA RECITAL

Season 1905-1906

At AEOLIAN HALL,
Saturday, Oct. 7th, at 3 P. M.

SOLOIST

Mme. Ruby Cutter Savage, Soprano

(Formerly Prima Donna of the Damrosch and Campanari Concert Tours)

Mr. ERNEST HUNTER at { The Aeolian Pipe Organ / The Pianola

(No cards of admission required)

"Aeolian Hall, the music center of all New York."
—New York Press.

THIS RECITAL will inaugurate the tenth season of these concerts. From small beginnings they have grown to become a really important factor in the musical season of the metropolis. The fact that they are given primarily to make known the artistic possibilities of the Pianola, no admission being charged, has not interfered with their success or appreciation among the discriminating element of the music-loving public.

This series of Recitals does not alone depend for its success upon the distinguished soloists who so frequently appear (such artists as Mme. Gadski, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mme. Nordica, the De Reszkes, etc., having been engaged in former seasons), but to the musicianly character of the programs from beginning to end. The programs are carefully made up from the works of the foremost composers of all times, and often include features of special interest which one would not otherwise have an opportunity of hearing. At this inaugural Recital, for example, Wagner's Meistersinger Vorspiel will be rendered on the Aeolian Pipe Organ, this being the first time it has ever been publicly given in its complete orchestral coloring by other than a full orchestra.

That it is possible to give public Recitals of so high a grade, employing the Pianola for most of the instrumental numbers, is a circumstance worth pondering. We hope to demonstrate to even a larger proportion of the New York public during the coming season that the Pianola is a real necessity in every home where an interest is taken in the higher forms of culture and art.

By demonstrating from the concert platform the musical capabilities of the Pianola, we hope to implant a widespread desire in cultivated minds to become equally as well read in music as they are in literature.

VAUDEVILLE AT THE MONTAUK.

City Leases Brooklyn Theatre and Property Will Net 4 Per Cent.

Through the Controller's office the city has practically leased all the Montauk Theatre property, in Brooklyn, so that it will net 4 per cent. on the city's investment of $500,000. This is the land purchased by the city at private sale last Spring for the approach of the Manhattan Bridge, but the land will not be needed for bridge purposes for two years.

Under the lease, when approved by the Corporation Counsel, William T. Grover of the Amphion Theatre will take charge and run the Montauk as a vaudeville house. Mr. Grover is to pay the city $15,000 a year for the house, until the city wants the property. The Shuberts bid $18,000 for the lease, but at the last minute backed out, and the Controller had to take the second highest bidder. The storeroom on the land already has been leased for $2,000 a year, and there are bidders willing to pay $3,000 a year for the meeting rooms.

GREENE AND GAYNOR COMING.

To Pass Through This State Sunday, When Papers Cannot Be Served.

MONTREAL, Oct. 6.—The last legal step in the Greene-Gaynor case, so far as the courts of Canada are concerned, was taken to-day, and to-morrow the United States Marshals will start with the two prisoners for Savannah, Ga. The papers authorizing Sheriff Thibaudeau to hand the prisonere over to United States Marshals Doyale and White arrived from the Attorney General's office at Quebec to-day.

It is learned from a reliable source that the delay in beginning the journey south with Gaynor and Greene is in order to enable the deputies to pass through the State of New York on Sunday so as to avoid the possibility of the service of papers in proceedings designed to delay the trial of the prisoners at Savannah.

CRUISER WEST VIRGINIA TO CARRY PRESIDENT

Brownson's Swift Flagship Designated for New Orleans Trip.

NEGROES ASK FOR ROOSEVELT

Invitation to Visit Institutions in Black Quarter of the City—Fever List Smaller.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The Navy Department has designated the armored cruiser West Virginia as the vessel to carry the President from New Orleans to Hampton Roads on his return from his Southern trip the latter part of this month. The West Virginia is the flagship of Rear Admiral Brownson's division of armored cruisers.

The President asked for but one vessel, and wanted a swift cruiser, that his return from the South might be as speedy as possible. Admiral Brownson, who is about to assemble his division for a practice cruise, will sail with the West Virginia flying his pennant, and may take the Colorado and Pennsylvania with him as far as Key West on account of the opportunity which would be given for drilling.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 6.—Comparatively little change charaterized the yellow-fever situation here to-day, both the new cases and deaths striking the daily average for the last week. The record for twenty-four hours ended at 6 o'clock to-night follows:

Deaths, 4; new cases, 25; new disease centres, 8; total cases to date, 3,147; total deaths, 407; cases under treatment, 290; cases discharged, 2,540.

A second charge against Dr. Szabary for failing to report a fever case was made to-day. A case for five days under Dr. Szabary's treatment, it is alleged, was unknown to the authorities.

The negro population desires a small portion of the President's time on his visit here. When President McKinley came here, staying two days, he visited one of the negro educational institutions.

To-day the Southern Pacific placed at the disposal of Mayor Behrman the new steamship Comus to be used by the President in making his trip over the harbor.

PENSACOLA, Oct. 6.—The official fever summary to-day follows: Deaths, 2; new cases, 16; total cases to date, 219; total deaths, 37; under treatment, 103.

One of the new cases is the British Vice Consul, Frederick Bonar, who is in a very dangerous condition. One of the deaths was that of a seaman on the Norwegian bark Cosmos. The outlook is anything but bright.

SECRETARY METCALF WINS.

Carries His Point Regarding Orders to Consuls in China.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Differences of opinion in the President's official family over the methods of enforcing the Chinese Exclusion act were settled at to-day's meeting of the Cabinet. Although at the last meeting, when Secretary Metcalf of the Department of Commerce and Labor was absent, it was decided that much of the blame for China's attitude lay with the acts of that department, to-day Mr. Metcalf was upheld.

The question came up on Secretary Root's proposal to relieve American Consuls in China of the duty of absolutely verifying certificates that Chinese intending to visit this country are not of the coolie class. Under the recent circular of the President, Consuls were instructed to pay particular attention to this duty, and were informed that they would be held to strict accountability. The State Department since then has protested that its Consular officers were overburdened by such tasks, and has sought to have the President's order materially modified.

When Mr. Metcalf learned that in his absence the Cabinet had taken the State Department's view he made a strong protest. In consequence the whole matter was taken up by the President and Secretaries Root, Taft, and Metcalf at to-day's meeting. It was determined that the instructions to the Consuls should not be changed.

"BURGLAR" WAS A GIRL.

Employe Locked in a Store Sets Off the Electric Alarm.

The Holmes burglar alarm rang at the station in Broadway at Spring Street late last night, and the indicator showed that the alarm came from S. Steur's store, at 27 East Tenth Street. A watchman was sent there in a hurry. On arriving he found Policeman Ragge trying to get into the building, having heard the alarm.

With a pass key the watchman opened the door and the two entered and searched the store, but found no burglar. They were about to leave when the watchman saw a bundle of furs move.

The watchman drew his revolver and sprang toward it. As he reached it, it fell apart and the terrified face of a young woman appeared. She seemed so frightened that the policemen took her out into the open air. At the Mercer Street Station she seemed unable to tell anything about herself, except that she was a Hungarian. Sergt. Hogan sent for the proprietor of the store. Steur recognized her as one of his employes. She first said she had been locked in the store. Then she said she had heard from Hungary that her mother was dying, and had decided to stay in the store and commit suicide.

Her employer made no charge and she was released.

HIS INVESTORS TOO EAGER.

J. J. Daly, Sent to Jail, Is Sure His Scheme Was Sound.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Oct. 6.—John J. Daly, whom Deputy Sheriff Ritch arrested on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses was committed by the Borough Court to-day to the Bridgeport Jail to await the December term of the Superior Court. He kept his identityt a profound secret, saying his arrest would kill his mother, and when taken to the station by the Sheriff, held a handkerchief to his face and fought to avoid being photographed.

He told his attorney, W. J. Ferris, that he had spent his entire life figuring out the publication investment scheme he was introducing when arrested, and insisted that it would pan out all right, only that people were in too much of a hurry.

Mrs. Peckham Ready to Answer.

According to Maurice Marks, who is examining Mrs. Sarah Peckham of "cotton leak" fame in bankruptcy proceedings, the woman has dropped her defiant air and will answer questions put to her. This will spare Commissioner Olney the necessity of applying to the United States District Court to have her adjuged in contempt. The next hearing was set down for Oct 13.

LAWYER TREMAINE MISSING.

His Friends Connect Him with a Marriage Which Took Place on Aug. 15.

Ambrose Barnes Tremaine, a lawyer of 299 Broadway, and a member of many clubs, is missing. His former home, at 891 Ocean Avenue, has been dismantled and a dispossess notice was pinned on the door of his office in the Barclay Building yesterday. His disappearance from the Hotel Astor, where he is said to have lived from Aug. 15 until a day or two ago, with a young woman recognized at the hotel as his wife, was equally abrupt, for he neglected to notify the office of his departure. The hotel people are still holding the room for him.

The parish records of St. Vincent de Paul's Church, in Twenty-third Street, show that Ambrose B. Tremaine was married to Miss Marie Thibedeaux on Aug. 15, the day that Tremaine took a room at the Hotel Astor. When the wedding notice was shown to Tremaine on the following day by one of his friends he denied that he was the Ambrose B. Tremaine mentioned, and explained that the man referred to in the notice was his nephew. Neither his near relatives nor his intimate friends know any such nephew.

There is another Mrs. Tremaine. She was Miss Hannah Rogers before her marriage to Tremaine some fifteen years ago. Tremaine was then employed in the office of Lawyer Thomas E. Pearsall, in Brooklyn. This Mrs. Tremaine has been living recently at Remsenburg, L. I.

Tremaine was in his office in Barclay Building as late as last Thursday morning. According to Tremaine's office neighbors, the Mrs. Tremaine of Remsenburg had made repeated efforts to see her husband, but had been unable to find him in his office. She called there again on Thursday morning with two men, but before they reached the office a telephone message reached Tremaine and he left the building.

It is said that Tremaine was not divorced from his first wife. After his departure from his office letters were found from his wife urging him to come back to her and begging him for money. There were also some letters by Miss Thibedeaux, evidently written before her marriage. The letters were scattered about as though Tremaine had left in a hurry and did not have time to gather them up.

Besides the domestic trouble Tremaine is in, it was also said about the Barclay Building that he was in financial difficulties. His Flatbush home is said to be heavily mortgaged and several notes are said to be held against him.

At the Barclay Building the impression seemed to be that Tremaine had left for Baltimore. At 251 West Fourteenth Street, however, where he and the former Miss Thibedeaux are said to have lived for a time, it was said that they had gone to Scranton.

Tremaine is a member of the Midwood Club, the University Club, and the Marine and Field Club. He is about 40 years of age. Miss Thibedeaux formerly was a manicurist.

WHY SANFORD WANTS DIVORCE

Affidavits in His Suit Made Public in Court Hearing.

The contents of affidavits submitted by Henry Sanford in his fight for the annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Jessie Grace Sanford were made public yesterday, as the result of argument in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, on a motion on appeal to strike them from the records.

Henry Sanford is the son of Prof. Samuel Sanford of Yale and heir to $2,000,000. He and Mrs. Sanford were married in 1901, after she had secured a divorce from her first husband, William A. Engeman, the President of the Brighton Beach race track. She is the daughter of A. H. Battersby, and was only 17 years old when she married Engeman, in 1891. Her divorce was obtained in Wyoming. It is claimed by counsel for Mr. Sanford, Arthur Livermore and Judge Alton B. Parker, that the Wyoming divorce was not legal. Mrs. Sanford was represented by Nicol, Anable & Lindsay.

In an affidavit sworn to by Sanford he says that his wife was addicted to drinking cocktails in cafés in 1903 and 1904 with different men and women, and that she failed to heed his request when he asked her not to drink in public. In May, 1904, she said she would no longer live with him. He started away on a long fishing trip, and had been in Canada and Maine for six weeks, when her father telegraphed that his wife was very ill. He returned, but there was no reconciliation.

A few days after his return he gave a dinner to his wife, and there he met Charles W. Taintor, who, his wife said, was a friend of a Miss Ethel Gibson. A short time later, at another dinner, he heard Taintor call his wife by her first name and remonstrated. Mrs. Sanford, so her husband swears, frequently had Taintor at her home while he was out of the city. He had her watched by detectives.

PLEA FOR A SMALL OFFENDER.

Policeman and Plaintiff Join in It, and He Goes Free with a Job.

A youngster in his teens, lean of face and body, and not too well covered by his ragged clothes, stepped up to the bar in General Sessions yesterday to be sentenced by Judge Newburger. He looked sleepishly at his feet while crushing his tattered cap between his nervously twisting hands. The captain of the court squad asked the usual questions and sang out the answers for the clerk to note them down:

"Hyman Shiplowitz—15 years—not married—no home—born in New York—parents born in Germany—not punished before."

In the order of things Policeman Michael Londrigan of the Delancey Street Station, who had made the arrest, was called to the witness stand to tell the court in confidence if he knew anything of the character of the prisoner that had not been brought out during the trial.

"Well, your Honor," he said, "I think it might be just as well to go a little easy on the kid. He's not so bad, and he's had awfully tough luck. It's the old story, you know—mother died and father married again. And the stepmother,—hm!—I guess she had a temper of her own. The boy ran away twice, I know, and the father lit out altogether. Now the boy has been sleeping in stables. I've kept an eye on him quite some time, and I never saw him in bad company or doing anything wrong till he took this harness from Wastinsky on Sheriff Street."

Next came Agent Deubert of the Children's Society with a story of just the same kind, and he was followed by the complainant, Samuel Wastinsky, a harness dealer of 13 Sheriff Street, who not only pleaded for leniency, but offered to give the boy steady employment if he was let go.

Judge Newburger suspended sentence on Hyman. Then he turned to Londrigan with a smile and said:

"Officer, you are very different from the usual policeman, who cares for nothing but to secure a conviction. You seem to have some mercy and kindness in your heart, and I find your action very commendable."

"Well, what could I do," said Londrigan when he left the courtroom, trying his hardest not to look pleased. "It was the truth."

THREE MEN SUSPENDED FOR COLUMBIA HAZING

Faculty and Students Angry Over Broken Pledge.

SOPHOMORES WIN FLAG RUSH

Fierce Battle at University—Clothes Torn and Bodies Bruised, but Good-Feeling Follows.

Three members of the Sophomore class in Columbia University, leaders in the recent hazing, were suspended yesterday by the Faculty for a year. The names of the suspended men were not given out by the authorities, and they were not notified of the action of the Faculty until late in the evening, special delivery letters being sent to them.

The men were suspended for breaking the hazing rules which were adopted by the Student Board of Representatives last year. One of the specifications was that there should be no kidnapping by the members of either class, which the suspended men violated. They captured members of the Freshman class for the Sophomore smoker at other times than in the regular rope rush. The men were summoned before the Faculty and confessed they had been parties to the kidnapping.

The participants in the rope rush Wednesday morning escaped with nothing more serious than a reprimand, as the Faculty decided the fight was a clash between two classes and not an attempt at individual hazing. This is not opposed by the Faculty provided the contest takes place at a proper place and under the supervision of upper classmen. The twenty-five men who were reprimanded erred in that they had a rush on 116th Street, whereas it should have taken place on South Field or some other suitable place.

The ruling under which the discipline was administered is as follows:

By the statutes of the university, every student is held to be subject to the disciplinary powers of the university authorities, which extend to any conduct prejudicial to the effective and orderly administration of the university, as well as to offenses against the order and good morals of the community. Discipline will be administered by the Dean of the Faculty in which the offending student is primarily registered.

After a statement to the student of the charges against him, and after the student has been given opportunity to be heard in his own defense, the Dean will announce his decision; and, if he finds the student guilty, will fix the penalty. In case this penalty is permanent separation from the university, it shall be effective only upon the approval of the President.

There is also an honor agreement between the students and the authorities, made by the students, which prohibits hazing of individuals and permits only certain organized class contests at set times in set places.

The students, as a body, are greatly incensed over the action of a few who have violated the college rules, and are particularly angry at the violation of the agreement made by the Board of Student Representatives last year.

The sophomore and freshman classes met in the annual flag rush yesterday, and the fighting was fast and furious. Garbed in clothes that had seen more prosperous days, the men pummeled each other to their hearts' content for two ten-minute halves, the freshmen trying to gain possession of a small Columbia flag set high in a tree which was guarded by lusty sophomores.

All during the morning the men of each class gathered under their respective standards and shouted defiance across the campus to each other. Sharp retorts made both bodies eager for the fray. Singing and shouting the Columbia yell with 1908 or 1909 tacked to it, the two bodies of men, each about 150 strong, marched to South Field.

The freshmen, under the direction of strategic upper classmen, divided into two squads, and when the sophs had gathered about the tree about ten deep, charged with a wild yell and flung themselves on their fellow-collegians. Students who had been through the mill gathered about the fighters and cheered them on.

"Get into it, freshie!" they shouted as some little chap edged his way out of the mêlée to get a breath of air. As the fight progressed arms and legs were an indistinguishable tangle, and the juniors and seniors who were supposed to prevent any prizefighting tactics had difficulty in pulling apart some of the combatants who had apparently tied themselves into knots. The call of time after the first ten minutes of fighting found the freshmen without the coveted bit of flag in their possession.

After a short rest they were at it again with even more determination than before. The freshmen used every conceivable plan to get men in the tree, but all failed. Time and again some little fellow was hurled over on the heads of the sophomores only to be pulled down before he could get into the tree. With the final call of time the second year men were in possession of the flag and had won the rush.

With the proverbial college good-will men who had been fighting in the fiercest manner only a moment before walked to the gymnasium arm in arm at the finish of hostilities.

Opera Singer in the Hospital.

Mrs. Florence Palmer Foster, who says her home is on Bay Seventeenth Street, Bath Beach, and that until a few days ago she was a member of an opera company, was taken to the Flower Hospital last night suffering from a severe case of inflammatory rheumatism. She arrived at the Grand Central Station from Albany at 8:45 P. M. and was very ill. Mrs. Foster said that she had been left in Albany by the opera company and that she had to make her way back to New York as best she could.

IRISH ARTS AND CRAFTS.

Paintings, Pastels, and Industrial Art at the Irish Exposition.

The Irish Exposition at the Madison Square Garden has a little of everything for everybody, and the arts and crafts of Ireland are represented. Though Dublin has not sent any specimens of her potteries, the older kilns at Belleek, on Lough Erne, offer a wide range of the fine, shell-like porcelains, for which they are famous, and the commoner sort of souvenirs for tourists, in bog oak and Kilkenny marble, are, of course, on hand at popular prices. The best exhibits, however, are the textiles.

It is a good many years ago that efforts were made to revive the village industries of Ireland, making use of the talents of some of the old people in whose houses looms were still to be found. More profitable have been the lacemaker societies, which not only gave young women instruction in the making of fine lace, but tried to keep the lacemakers at home, for they opened a market for their wares among the well-to-do in the cities of Ireland and Great Britain. A few years ago Dr. Clancy of Roscommon, Bishop of Elphin, established an industrial school at Loughlynn, the old estate of the Lords Dillon, and settled there a number of Franciscan Sisters from Belgium, who teach young women and girls the arts of carpet weaving, artificial flower making, embroidery, and lacemaking. The exhibit made by the Loughlynn School is one of the most interesting at the exposition. To add to the attractiveness of their display, the sisters in charge have several looms on exhibition, and at stated hours the work is carried on, showing by ocular demonstration how the deep-piled carpets of wool are fabricated.

Old stories which have come down to us in the Irish language prove that the Irish women of the later middle ages were not behind their sisters of the Netherlands in cunning with the needle. Embroidery is one of the arts which have been revived with success in recent years. While the societies organized to encourage the Irish tongue have been working wonders among the young people and giving the old language a new lease of life, the old arts have been pushed to the front. Tapestry weaving existed in Dublin down to the middle of the eighteenth century. In the exhibit of the Dun Emer Industrial School, managed by Miss Elizabeth Yeats, sister of the poet and playwright, William B. Yeats, a largish piece of tapestry has been woven from designs by Miss Ethel Rhind, which repeats the eighteenth century method, one very similar to that still employed at the Gobelins, the Government looms in Paris. "Thoughts" represents an old man leaning on his staff in a landscape suggesting Autumn. Dull reds, browns, and pale yellows predominate and the whole is harmonious.

More in accordance with modern taste which has turned away from realistic figures in tapestry and rugs is the big wine-red rug with large decorative design in different tones of the same general color. This took first prize at the Dublin Horse Show, which had an arts and crafts annex. The large green rug beside it took the second prize. It may be said of almost all the rugs and tapestries here that low tones are the rule.

The famous linens of Ireland are scarcely represented, and other industries which supply the world with their output do not appear at all. The plaids, friezes, and carriage rugs have some excellent representatives, although here, too, it would not do to suppose that this exposition shows what Irish industries really are. There are finely appointed jaunting cars; a showing of cane furniture of no special importance, vast stacks of shillelaghs and blackthorn cudgels, and minor objects in jewelry which have nothing specifically Irish in appearance.

A small gallery of paintings and pastels will be found in the central north balcony, consisting of portraits by John M. Yeats of the Irish Academy; also by "A. E.," whose name is Russell, and by Jack Yeats, the younger brother of the Irish writer. Mr. Russell's pastels are individual and attractive, though often strongly reminiscent of William Blake in their symbolism and composition. Here are many of the West of Ireland characters—the gipsies, squireens, and car drivers which Mr. Jack Yeats knows so well how to delineate in a quick, taking fashion. The collection, though very limited, is well worth seeing, though the braying and tooting of the barkers and the sound of phonographs and merry-makers are not exactly calculated to promote the spirit in which works of art is enjoyed. The Irish Exposition, to say the truth, is a big fair, with art in a decided minority. Near these pictures are valuable loan collections, such as the manuscripts and works on Old Irish art lent by Mr. John D. Crimmins and the large array of engraved portraits of distinguished Irishmen lent by Mr. Sweeny.

Woman Fails as Ticket Speculator.

A woman tried her hand as a ticket speculator yesterday at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, where Lillian Russell is playing a vaudeville engagement. Evidently she was not successful, for after the performance had been under way for some time she offered a passer-by, who happened to be one of the employes of the theatre, her tickets, which numbered something like fifteen, for $1.50.

Archbishop Inspects the Subway.

Archbishop Seton of Rome, who is a guest of John D. Crimmins, took a trip through the Subway yesterday with John B. McDonald. The Archbishop had expressed a desire to inspect the Subway, but said that he distinctly preferred seeing it in company with the man who built the road. Mr. McDonald, being informed of this, extended an invitation to the prelate, and the two inspected the system together.

EIGHT KILLED BY CAVE-IN.

President of the Vermont Slate Company One of the Dead.

FAIRHAVEN, Vt., Oct. 6.—Eight men were killed and several were injured today in a cave-in of the Vermont Slate Company's quarry in the town of Pawlet four miles from Granville. Hundreds of tons of waste, together with great sections of slate, slid with a rumbling noise down upon the gang of men at work in the pit.

John G. Williams, the President of the company owning the quarry, was standing near the edge of the pit, and was carried down with the mass of rock, being one of those killed. The others were Hungarian laborers.

Although a large force of men from neighboring towns hurried to the scene and began the work of rescue, it is believed that none of those buried in the pit will be taken out alive.

$1,666 A FINGER.

Six-Year-Old Girl Gets $5,000 for Thread That a Car Cut Off.

To Della Smith, eight years old, Jersey City, was awarded $5,000 yesterday by a jury in the Supreme Court in a suit she had brought through her guardian against the North Jersey Street Railway Company.

On Nov. 10, 1903, the little girl was crossing the street in front of her home when she saw a trolley car approaching. She became frightened and fell on the track. The fender struck her right hand, crushing three fingers so badly that they had to be amputated. The defense showed that the motorman used every effort to stop the car and contended that the child was guilty of contributory negligence.

ERIE TO TRY STEEL COACHES

The Erie Railroad Company has placed an order with the Barney & Smith Car Company of Dayton, Ohio, for the construction of an experimental steel passenger coach, which will be used in suburban service in the New York district. If successful, it may be adopted as the standard coach for the road.

For several months the management has been testing a new steel postal car and a steel baggage car.

A PARTY IN DISTRESS.

The Republicans of New York have far greater need of Mr. HUGHES than he has of them. They are sinking, drowning, and in despair and terror clutch blindly at his good name and new-born fame to save them. This will not help them; they are lost, for all their other appeals have met with more or less impolite refusal. As for Mr. HUGHES, he has far more important business on hand than the work of rescue to which they invite him.

We do not remember ever before to have seen the Republican minority of New York City, always impotent and often unworthy, reduced to such pitiful state. Mr. ODELL is the architect of this disaster. He has shown himself willing to throw away all principle, to embrace any crazy creed, and to form the most revolting alliances. He has hawked his nomination about for weeks and has had the door slammed in his face wherever he has offered it. The offer to Mr. HUGHES is an act of desperation.

But to persons whose knowledge of recent life insurance history extends somewhat beyond the record of official disclosure the spectacle of BENJAMIN B. ODELL raising the banner of insurance reformation and naming as candidate the inquisitor who may yet find it necessary to put him on the witness stand, is one to provoke mirth and astonishment.

MR. M'CLELLAN'S OWN ISSUE.

If there remains any doubt in the minds of the leaders of the opposition to Tammany as to their folly in trying at the start to make the campaign turn on the issue of municipal ownership and operation it should be dispelled by the extremely effective speech of Mayor MCCLELLAN to the Democratic Convention on Thursday evening. In a way that cannot be mistaken the Mayor announced his position on this issue, and it was as advanced as any sane man could possibly ask. "Government control only in cases where public utilities conducted by private enterprise fail in giving the people adequate service," "franchises granted only for limited periods on terms most advantageous to the public," these points of policy he frankly avowed, and the platform claimed, as the party had the right to claim, that his administration showed fidelity to them. Certainly one ferry within municipal control, another in the course of transfer, special electric plants already established for bridge service, and the project of a general plant for city service under way, these are all the guarantees that sensible men can ask that the reserve rights of the city in the matter of public utilities are not in the way of being abandoned. So far as the Mayor's re-election is to be decided by the views of citizens as to this issue it is plain that he must receive the support of conservative and practical men. Those who insist on this as the main issue in the campaign only strengthen his cause. They drive prudent men to overlook things in his record which otherwise might give occasion to much serious opposition.

That such opposition has some basis Mr. MCCLELLAN plainly feels. He made a gallant and vigorous effort to forestall it in his utterances on Thursday. The following is a remarkable declaration to have been made to a Tammany convention:

> Second—Membership in this administration will not of itself entitle any man to retention in the next administration, should I be re-elected. If I believe that the interests of the city will be better served by a change at the head of any department, that change will be made; and no amount of clamor from either without or within the party will make me follow a different course. If, on the other hand, I believe that the retention of any head of department will best serve the public interest, that official will be retained; and no amount of clamor from either without or within the party will force me to remove him.

And his closing words were not less emphatic and impressive:

> And so, sincerely grateful to you for the honor you have done me, unpledged to any man or group of men, pledged only to the people to do my duty to the best of my ability, I accept your nomination.

It is with entire respect that we suggest that these declarations of Mr. MCCLELLAN cannot be accepted lightly at their full face value as it presents self to the general reader of his words. They must be interpreted in the light of the history of the past twenty months, and that history supplies a meaning for "the interests of the city," "the public interest," that plain men may well question. Unless we assume that to the Mayor the "interests of the city" require the maintenance of the Tammany organization, under the leadership of Mr. MURPHY, through the distribution of executive appointments, in conspicuous instances for reasons not connected with fitness, we cannot explain the appointments actually made. And if we assume such a qualification of the "interests of the city" we cannot confidently expect the correction of such appointments or a radical improvement upon them. The same interpretation necessarily applies to the statement of the Mayor that he is "unpledged to any man or group of men," and is "pledged only to the people to do my [his] duty to the best of my [his] ability," for we can concede that there is no definite pledge and at the same time see the limitations upon the personal and official independence of the Mayor. What it all amounts to is that Mr. MCCLELLAN means to give us the best administration he can without a rupture with the Tammany organization.

It is extremely fortunate for him that this intention, qualified as it is, compares favorably with any prospect that can be held out to the people of the city by any opponent. It is possible also, though we reluctantly admit that it is not very probable, that after his re-election Mr. MCCLELLAN will find himself in a position greatly to reduce influences that in the past have interfered with his best service to the city, and greatly to extend the field of his independent judgment and action. We should have more confidence that this highly creditable outcome were practicable had Mr. MCCLELLAN found it advisable to put a quietus upon the talk, openly indulged in in the convention, as to his nomination for the Governorship. It distinctly belittles the Mayoralty as a place for efficient and courageous service to the city alone if it is to be but the stepping stone to a place of greater political dignity and partisan importance, though of far less intrinsic utility and responsibility. Mr. MCCLELLAN, elected to fill out a service of six years, two of which have been so surprisingly good, must have opportunities that are not open to him if elected to one more year only of service, with a nomination for another post in his mind. And the contrast thus suggested is not rendered less obvious by the nomination as his under-study of a relatively obscure gentleman whose capability and character remain to be tested by the very searching tests of public office under the somewhat ostentatious guidance of Mr. MURPHY.

THEY SHOULD THINK ON THEIR MERCIES.

It is not alone republics that are ungrateful, for blacker ingratitude than the public and the press of Russia and Japan have manifested toward the wise and sensible statesmen who negotiated peace between the two nations has rarely been exhibited under any form of government. The press dispatches from day to day have made us familiar with this strange sentiment, but we read them with a continuing and ever new astonishment.

There has been nothing more remarkable, perhaps, than the grudging comment of the Russian press upon the Czar's bestowal of the trumpery title of Count upon M. WITTE. This mark of distinction seems to have been considered above M. WITTE'S desert. But the unkindest cut of all is the comment of the Slovo, a newspaper which has hitherto been regarded as the organ of M. WITTE. The honors bestowed upon him, it says, "were in no wise called for by the intrinsic merits of his achievement." The St. Petersburg Town Council refuses to give its assent to a banquet in honor of Count WITTE and to the conferring of the freedom of the city upon him, and declares that his services at Portsmouth "were only a redeeming sacrifice for the political mistakes in which he has acquiesced and which were responsible for the war." The hardihood of this public declaration fixing the responsibility for the war upon the shoulders of M. WITTE, who continually and consistently opposed the policies which made war inevitable, is equaled only by the perfect shamelessness with which the falsehood is proclaimed to the world in an official declaration.

It is plain to be seen that it is not public opinion, not the honest view of the newspaper press that is revealed in these detractions. Evidently Count WITTE'S enemies are at work. They must have turned his newspaper organ against him and the instigation of the stupid resolution of the Town Council should be sought in quarters politically hostile to him. For certainly every intelligent and honest-minded Russian must see that Count WITTE'S service to his country in negotiating peace was of a nature so lofty and priceless that no reward in the power of the Czar to bestow would do him too much honor.

In Japan they have gone to work in the right way to cure the people of their foolish dislike of the treaty. The ratification of the treaty at the session of the Privy Council held on Wednesday has caused new murmurings. Ex-Minister OKUMA'S speech before the Associated Chambers of Commerce ought to supply the needed corrective wherever it is read and understood. Mr. OKUMA is the leader of the Progressive Party, and his discourse is likely to command attention. He told the members of the Chambers of Commerce that by the time the withdrawal of the troops from Manchuria shall have been completed Japan will have a public debt amounting to $1,250,000,000. The interest on this great debt will amount to $75,000,000 a year, or twice the revenue of Japan ten years ago. The rate of taxation per capita which before the war was $2 is now $6, and the debt burden per capita, $6 before the war, is now $25. These are matters that any Jap may ponder, if not with pleasure, certainly with profit.

It may be remembered that early in the peace negotiations THE TIMES put before its readers an exposition of the financial situation of Japan in order to enforce the argument that the Japanese Government must consent to immediate peace because it could not afford to carry on the war. It was on Aug. 12 that THE TIMES presented a comparative study of the resources and obligations of Japan and of the United States. The public debt of Japan was then less than a billion, and while her credit was good, THE TIMES pointed out that she could not continue the war indefinitely and borrow money at 4½ per cent. "She would need 500 millions more money to continue the war, where and on what terms could she borrow?" For these reasons THE TIMES expressed its belief that the representatives of Japan, who were acquainted with the almost desperate condition of the National Treasury, had come to Portsmouth prepared to make peace on any reasonable terms. The facts THE TIMES then set forth were evidently not known to the people of Japan. If known, their import was not understood, even after the treaty was signed. Evidently there is still need of more light, and public men like ex-Minister OKUMA are very wisely trying to supply it. They are still making some fuss over the surrender of half of Sakhalin Island. Well-informed Japanese statesmen undoubtedly perceive that peace was secured cheaply enough by that sacrifice for a continuance of the war would have involved losses, embarrassments, and disasters compared to which the loss of half or the whole of Sakhalin would be insignificant. Both Russia and Japan are well out of the war. They should think on their mercies.

THE EVIL AND THE CURE.

The Armstrong inquiry has made it plain that "mutualization" is not the panacea for insurance ills. When it was a question solely of the Equitable disclosures all the volunteer doctors and moralists were prescribing "mutualization." It is the one-man power, it is stock control that has got the Equitable into this frightful fix; buy the stock at par, wipe it out, destroy the one-man power, and let Trustees be elected by the unhampered exercise of the policy holders' will—that was the almost universal suggestion of a remedy.

But now the two great mutual companies have been shown to be honeycombed with forbidden practices, and we hear a great deal less about "mutualization." The policy holders control those companies, of course. Don't they send in their proxies, and so cast their votes at every election? If there is any sufficient virtue in the mutual plan of life insurance then the Mutual Life Insurance Company and the New York Life Insurance Company ought to have been models of prudent and conservative administration. But Mr. HUGHES'S questioning has disclosed syndicate operations, mysterious separate funds maintained as the source of payments not appearing upon the books of account, great campaign contributions to political parties, and other improprieties, for all the world indistinguishable from those proved against the wicked share capital company. And of mere fatness of opportunity to build up private fortunes, an opportunity superbly availed of, nothing so far found out about the company controlled by capital stock is to be compared with the disclosures made in the testimony on Thursday concerning the Mutual.

Remedies must be found for these shocking abuses of trust. But we presume the Armstrong Committee will not advise the Legislature that "mutualization" will suffice as a safeguard of policy holders' money. It is evident that the Legislature has a serious work before it. The Armstrong Committee has yet to inquire into methods of insurance; it has been so fully occupied with the uncovering of evil that it has had no time for corrective work. It will of course try to inform itself as to the respective merits of the many kinds of policies written by life insurance companies, in order that in its report it may answer the question what kinds of policies are best from the point of view of the investor in life insurance. The subject is technical, intricate, and difficult. But it must be studied by the committee and taken up by the Legislature. The amendment of the insurance law will evidently be the chief work of that body during the coming session.

COMSTOCKERY VS. MACFADDENISM.

The "pulling" by Mr. ANTHONY COMSTOCK of certain posters purporting to advertise a "physical culture" exhibition and by report consisting of human figures of one or both sexes, clad only in knit underclothing, raises a number of interesting questions. Mr. COMSTOCK, who, as befits his specialty, is of a rather sweeping and indiscriminate temper toward all that invades it, charges the possessors of these posters bluntly with "having in their possession obscene pictures," that being the only ground on which he can statutorily prevent such an exhibition of the pictures as would enable an impartial world to judge of their moral tendency.

On the other hand, there is Mr. MACFADDEN, who seems to be the promoter of the proposed exhibition. He seems to be well named, as being a faddist and the son of a faddist. In view of some of his performances, it may well appear that the name of Mr. COMSTOCK ought also to be MACFADDEN. We are credibly informed that Mr. MACFADDEN is as honest a specialist in his kind as Mr. COMSTOCK is in his, that he is really a fanatic of physical culture. He maintains with much plausibility that the physical culture of a human body cannot be judged when it is wrapped in a horse blanket or overlaid with an ulster, and also that his proposed exhibition is of great interest to his fellow-physical culturists.

We may look forward with pleased anticipation to the meeting in court of the rival specialists. As SHAKESPEARE says:

> 'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes
> Between the pass and fell incensed points
> Of mighty opposites.

But, as at present advised, we are bound to say that Mr. COMSTOCK appears to have the better of it. Let Mr. MACFADDEN, he may well say, show his culling of the results of physical culture in private and to a select assemblage of specialists in his own kind. But let him not project a money-making show of them, for the express attraction of the "baser nature," which will be its effect, if not his purpose. Mr. COMSTOCK can present to the guileless MACFADDEN the following neat dilemma: "Either you mean to give an indecent exhibition, or else you mean to obtain money under false pretenses." And, apparently, it will be difficult for Mr. MACFADDEN to avoid impaling himself upon one of these two promonotories which equally project from the surface of the Penal Code.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

McCurdy the Martyr.

It illustrates, perhaps, the truth of what Mr. JEROME says about the present state of public sentiment, that, while so many people are talking and writing indignantly of the ease with which assorted officials, big and little, in the insurance companies received, took, or otherwise acquired large sums of more or less easy money, there was at least one official, and a big one, who was obliged for years to struggle desperately to keep his salary and commissions within the limit that a sensitive conscience told him was reasonable and right. Mr. ROBERT H. MCCURDY rehearsed on Thursday the tragic tale of his long martyrdom, beginning in 1888, when he first realized that the contracts he had made through his father with the company were altogether too profitable to himself. Then began such a fight, we thoroughly believe, as ever man made before. In it nobody seems to have given him any help, or even any sympathy. Again and again and again did young Mr. MCCURDY call the attention of his superiors to the fact that they had allotted to him a larger fraction of the proceeds of foreign business than it was right for him to receive. He was, indeed, spared the culminating pain of learning that, as he had agreed to take a certain percentage of the premiums, he could only escape taking the full amount by suicide or flight. Each request for a reduction was granted—not gracefully, alas! or ungrudgingly, but it was granted, and then things went better for a time. In a year or two, however, the flow of gold into his reluctant pockets would again threaten to drag his coats and trousers all out of shape, and once more he would have to plead and beg for another reduction of his remuneration. To at least one observer of the insurance epopes this seems really to be its most heartrending feature. Man was not made to ask for decreases in his pay; the human brain has no convolutions set apart for the performance of any such function; it cannot even be attempted without cruel straining and distortion of cortical areas organized for wholly different purposes, and what its performance under the compulsion of an implacable conscience and an iron will is likely to do to the bunch of gray matter that has been developing for unnumbered centuries for the one end of striking for more pay at every good chance and not a few poor ones—that we will not attempt to describe. The younger MCCURDY, we assert and are prepared to maintain, had been subjected to cruel and inhuman treatment—treatment from which anybody working for his own father should be perfectly safe, and would be if the old tales about paternal affection were more than half true. As for the policy holders—but there! there doesn't seem to be any room for the policy holders in this paragraph. Mr. MCCURDY and his martyrdom shall have it all.

Now It Is the Auto Chest.

A man went into a tailor's shop this week, intending only to get measured for a suit of clothes, but fate was kind to him and he acquired, besides the assurance—which we all enjoy so much—that the suit would be delivered at an impossibly early day—a piece of information both surprising and interesting to all who use automobiles and to all who don't, and that seems to include everybody. While the measuring was in progress the tailor said: "Been taking a lot of exercise, Mr. ——?" "Why, no," replied the customer; "what makes you think so?" "Because your chest is fully two inches bigger round than it was a year ago," said the tailor, and again he asked if the customer had not in some way changed his habits. Again the reply was in the negative, but to the question, "Haven't you been automobiling a good deal this Summer?" the customer said, "Yes, I have, but there is no exercise in that, and particularly nothing to expand the chest." Then the tailor spoke his little piece—announced the discovery up to which he had been leading. "Automobiling," he declared, "is exercise, and its effects are particularly noticeable in increasing chest measurements. I've seen it in dozens and dozens of my customers who indulge in nothing in the way of athletics, as commonly understood, but who daily take long trips in their automobiles. And it isn't the steering, either, for the increase of chest comes whether they act as their own chauffeurs or sit on the back seat and do nothing. Apparently it's the effort required to breathe rapidly moving air, and the purity of the air may have something to do with their gain." Now, so far as we have noticed, not even the automobile agents have heard of this reason for buying and using their machines; at any rate they are not advertising it as among the advantages pertaining to the new mode of locomotion. Perhaps they refrain because no one make could claim a monopoly of it, and their object is less to advertise automobiles than to advertise an automobile. The doctors, however, should look into the matter at once, and, if the tailor is right, they will for once be able to give advice that is both pleasant and good. And they cannot do that as often as they would like.

Those "Good Old Times" Again.

Mr. J. ENWARN SIMMONS told with energy a lot of plain truths in his address before the Maryland bankers, and the reports of what he said will, or should, make profitable as well as extremely painful reading for certain eminent men who are just learning, for the first time, apparently, that there is a difference between reputation and character—at least after a legislative investigation. But why did Mr. SIMMONS, who belongs to this generation, have to revive the old myth that in other days there was another and better and higher conception of honesty than now prevails? There were thieves then as well as now, and if we now call some of them "grafters," it is only to be explicit, and not at all for the sake of saving thieves of a particular sort from the condemnation they deserve—and are very adequately getting. Mr. SIMMONS would "restore the old rigid standards of honesty and uprightness in all business dealings," and so ward off the dangers that threaten from the abuses of power and opportunity. History mentions no time when all financiers or other people were any better than they are to-day; it mentions many when most of them were worse—when their methods were more barharous and the consequences of their acts infinitely more disastrous. This is no time for discouragement. The future is bright, and, as rarely happened in "the good old days," we are going to get reform without basing it upon the ruin of thousands. It is not necessary that Mr. SIMMONS or anybody else should be an optimist, but he and everybody should be meliorists.

SERVANT PROBLEM SOLUTION.

An Argument for the Admission of Chinese and Japanese Labor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorials of to-day on "The Competition of Japan" and on "The Servant-Girl Problem" answer each other. So long aa the demand for any article is greater than the supply the price will be exorbitant. Hence the high wages of unskilled servants. It la well known that the service of the Japanese and Chinese laborers is the best in the world, and whils we are refusing to permit their immigration to this country we must suffer for it.

There is no need of admitting the criminal and opium-eating classes, but it would surely be for the benefit of all employes and of every household to admit all others. Then houaeholders could have skilled service for reasonable wages, both in country and city, all over the land. Farmers would have plenty of laborers in garden and field. The mill owners plenty of hands who would work instead of striking.

There is no labor so skilled both indoors and out of doors, so teachable as that of these Eastern nations, and yet we willingly deprive ourselves of it, yielding to the outcry of our ignorant European laborers, who are jealous of its admission to the United States because it would cut down the extortion of their own wages. A FRIEND OF ALL CLASSES.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 5, 1905.

Judicial Renominations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice that Henry E. Howland now says that sitting Judges should be re-elected, as he has been appointed a member of the Bar association Committee to urge the renominations of Judges Ingraham and Gildersleeve by all organizations. In 1884 the terms of Judge Joseph F. Daly and Richard L. Larremore (Democrats) expired, and at the election of that year this same Henry E. Howland accepted a nomination on the Republican ticket and ran against the sitting Judges. In 1894 John W. Goff and Henry R. Beekman accepted nominations and ran against the sitting Judges Smyth and Truax, (Democrats.) In 1900 Judge A. Blanchard accepted a nomination on the Republican ticket and ran against sitting Judge Dugro, (Democrat.) In the Fourth Judicial District of the Supreme Court the Republicans have not this year renominated Judge Spover of Amsterdam, who sits in the Appellate Division.

GOOD MEMORY.

New York, Oct. 5, 1905.

No Need for the Comma.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an old reader of your paper I beg to inquire what is the proper way to punctuate the phrase "Faith, hope, and charity." I always put a comma after the last noun, (or verb, or adjective, or adverb, &c.,) in a series, but have been criticised for doing so in the above phrase, as it is claimed that this is an old phrase in the English language which from time immemorial has been punctuated without a comma after the "hope." It seems to me that consistency requires a comma after the "hope" as much as after, say, "women" in such a phrase as "men, women, and children," and I writs to you to settle my doubts and misgivings. Draining Volcanoes Stops Earthquakes

Apropos of the recent earthquake shocks in Calabria and the simultaneous eruption of Vesuvius and Stromboli, The London Globe says that a remarkable example of the close connection of volcanoes and earthquakes was observed by the early Spanish settlers in San Salvador. When the water in the crater of Ilopango rose above a certain level earthquake shocks always followed. So they drained a channel to allow of the escape of the water and prevent it rising in the crater. And a hundred years there was no earthquake in the district. Then the precaution was neglected, the water rose in the crater, and presently a violent earthquake shook the country. At the same time, the lake was blown out by a volcanic eruption.

When to Reform the Upper Class.

At a meeting of the Society for Promoting the Religious Education of Upper Class Children, held the other day in London, a speaker—a woman teacher—declared: "The child who is the daughter of entirely worldly parents must have her fling in the social world before she is open to reformation. The only way which I would choose for bringing all possible influence to bear would be twenty-one years, or even a year or so later. Then ply you with books, advice, warnings, and every possible influence."

Dangers of Globe Trotting.

From The London Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—A telegram from Vichy announces the death of Robert Lamperriere, who, with another Frenchman, Geroiun, undertook to tramp round the world. Lamperriere, it is said, lost his reason owing to the privations endured by him while trotting, and he flung himself over a precipice in British Columbia.

Made It, Anyhow.

From The Washington Star.

"You are, I take it," said the interviewer, "a self-made man. Your fortune is the result of your handicraft."

"Pardon me," said Senator Sorghum, his hand behind his ear, "did you say 'graft' or 'handy graft?'"

Among Friends.

From The Boston Herald.

If the President shall call back Mr. Loeb from private life and confer on him some honorable position in the Government service, no protest will come from any responsible quarter.—Chicago Tribune.

LIFE INSURANCE REFORMS.

Need for Reduced Salaries and Commissions and Restricted Activities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The examination of the three great life insurance companies of New York has clearly demonstrated that their premium rates are considerably higher than they need to be for safety, and that the surplus thus arising has been the main source of the corruption developed. It is these surplus trust funds that have lured the weak and unscrupulous into breaches of trust and corruption in the management of them. Why, then, continue to collect unneeded premiums as a nucleus of corruption and temptation to betray the policy holders, to which every dollar of it belongs in all mutual companies?

The Equitable, it is true, was organized as a stock company, but till these examinations began did any officer or agent ever claim that its vast surplus did not belong to the policy holders? Did they not, in fact, all of them point to their great surplus as an alluring bribe to join their organizations? How many applicants would have signed their applications had the agent intimated that the $80,000,000 in the Equitable would not be returned to them sooner or later as dividends?

It seems now that the mutualization of that company, so adroitly held out to applicants, was a fraud on the part of the officers, and a delusion on the part of its agents. We shall hear but little more about the stock feature of the Equitable, or, in Equitable, as its history has demonstrated.

One point that has been developed is the excessive salaries and commissions that have been allowed the officers and agents. I say allowed, since no policy holder outside of those classes would have voted his money in such extravagance. I respectfully submit that $100,000 for any mutual life insurance President is out of all reason and proportion to his merits and responsibilities.

President Paul Morton might have reduced his salary to $50,000 without any detriment to the company and emphasized his effort at reform thereby.

Another point that has been demonstrated is that some restraining legislation should be enacted at the next session prohibiting life insurance investments to be made in any but well-recognized first-class securities, and also prohibiting the companies from engaging directly or indirectly in any other business. The frailities of humanity in the management of life insurance companies are quite enough for the policy holders to hazard without assuming the risks of ordinary business affairs.

JOHN S. WOODS.

Insurance Advice in Verse.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If every life insurance President, every manager of a financial syndicate, in short, every person who handles trust funds, could be induced to pasts the following in his hat, if it could not be hammered into his conscience, it might do some little good:

In vain we call old notions—Fudge!
And bend our conscience to our dealing;
The Ten Commandments will not budge,
And stealing will continue stealing.

Who Got the Money?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that Mr. Hughes in his proddings has unearthed such a mess of putrefaction, is it not possible to find out into whose hands this corruption money was eventually paid? The public, I imagine, would be slightly interested in the result. O. W. M.

Murphy's Attack on the Judiciary.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Rumor says that Mr. Murphy, confident of a Tammany victory this year, is about to further his own ends by putting on the Supreme Court Bench two of his friends in place of Justices Gildersleeve and Ingraham, though the general sentiment of the bar of New York demands the re-election of these two Judges. Surely an energetic protest should be made in behalf of the valuable principle of renomination by all parties of Judges who have served their terms faithfully and efficiently as these two gentlemen have done. Such re-election has been customary of late years, and has helped most effectually to secure the independence and non-partisanship of the judiciary. Public opinion should not permit Tammany to violate this custom at this election by rejecting two such capable and impartial Judges as Justices Gildersleeve and Ingraham, who are both able and willing to serve the State efficiently for some years to come. Wants a Rockefeller Page.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a regular reader of THE NEW YORK TIMES, I have noticed with increasing pleasure the strict impartiality with which you give publicity to both kicks and praise. I am therefore emboldened to address you on a little matter which comes within one of those descriptions, I hardly know which. Why not a Rockefeller page in THE NEW YORK TIMES? A Rockefeller Section, or a Rockefeller Department—anything save a Rockefeller Column, which would be altogether too insignificant for a subject, which THE TIMES evidently regards as so urgently important. The taste for reading of Rockefeller daily constantly increases, and your daily doles seem to grow woefully insufficient. The fever for it is upon us—give us more Rockefeller, and let us intoxicate ourselves with the quantity you will furnish. Give us a page of him every day. ARTHUR A. PENN.

Judge Russell's Nine Blue Ginghams.

From The Baltimore Sun.

The Hon. John Temple Graves of Atlanta, who is a candidate for the United States Senate, in a recent speech referred, it is said, with some pride to the size of his family, which is unusual in this age of race suicide. Judge Russell, a candidate for Governor, was present when Col. Graves made his modest boast and followed with a statement of his own claims:

"Something has been said by Col. Graves about his thirteen children. I have had nine, but then I have not made any point of them in my campaign. But when I am elected Governor and take my little procession out on Peachtree Street in their blue ginghams they will put to shame some of those Peachtree Street swells whose wives have nothing but pug dogs to fondle."

Georgia has much to be proud of in having two such eminent citizens. It is not every State that can show two politicians so numerously blessed. Even nine "blue ginghams" under one flag may well put the average family to the blush.

They've Deep Mines In Australia.

From The London Chronicle.

Gold raised from a depth of a mile! They are gradually approaching the realization of this feat in Australia. A beautiful piece of gold-bearing quartz is on view at the Mining Department in Melbourne. It was found at a depth of 4,200 feet in the New Chum Mine, Bendigo, the greatest depth on record at which gold has been obtained. The geological experts say that this discovery is very interesting as establishing the fact that the conditions of gold deposition are as favorable at this immense depth as they are near the surface.

THE SEX OF ANGELS.

Language of the Church Makes Them Masculine—Scriptural Testimony.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A headline on Page 6 of your to-day's issue tells the public, "We're Wrong About Angels." Indeed you are—you, THE NEW YORK TIMES, one of the three best-informed newspapers on this continent. "In the fifteenth century," says the article under this veracious headline, "Fra Angelico depicted women angels." Shades of Vallombrosa! The blessed friar surely never suspected what he was doing. Moreover, saith your scribe, "For hundreds of years all over the world art had been depicting angels as female, and in no place in the Bible could it be ascertained that angels were other than male."

It would be interesting to know of one period or one picture where art has "depicted women angels." As for Fra Angelico da Fiesole, he was a follower of Church tradition and of scholastic philosophy; the former of these invariably represents angels as appearing in the likeness of young men, while the latter teaches that angels are really incorporeal and sexless. Christian art, conventionally obliged to choose a sex for its angels, followed the hint given by the language of the Church, which invariably makes the names of angels masculine—"Sancte Michael, Sancte Gabriel, Sancte Raphael," never "Sancta."

But the truly painful thing is your scribe's treatment of the Episcopalian clergy. The Rev. Dr. John P. Peters of St. Michael's is made to say, "When I realized it"—viz., that art had "been depicting angels as female," contrary to the Bible—"I shouted!" It is impossible to believe that the Rev. Dr. Peters shouted at this; he must have been shouting about something else. As Secretary of the Building Committee of the new Episcopalian Cathedral of New York he knows more about art than such a shout would imply.

Neither is it credible that "ecclesiastics in this city were recovering yesterday from the shock," of the sudden discovery which is alleged to have made the Rev. Dr. Peters shout. X. S. J.

New York, Oct. 5, 1905.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As to the sex of angels, this interesting question may be determined, I think, by St. Matthew, xxii., 30: A woman married successively seven men; they all died and left the widow. Our Lord was asked: "Whose wife shall she be of the seven?" He replied: "In the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage." There the necessity for marriage does not exist. Here it is essential to preserve the race from extinction. The words, "They are the angels of God," negatives the idea of sex. The characteristics of both sexes are combined in angels. They are masculine in strength and endurance and feminine in beauty and tenderness. They are the ideal of human perfection, our blessed Lord only excepted.

President's Rate Bill Approved.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It costs just about as much to bring a barrel of flour over the railroad from New York to thie place (forty miles) as it costs to transport the same from Chicago to New York. At Denver flour retails for $4 per barrel.

Therefore we believe that the President's rate bill would be a blessing to the State of Connecticut. SAUGATUCK.

Official Costumer Dead.

From The London Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—One of the principal persons in Paris connected with the theatrical costumery trade, Mme. Jules Millet, has died. Helped by her husband, who will still continue to carry on the business, she supplied costumes to the Opera, the Opera Comique, the Comedie Francaise, and the Odeon, all subsidized theatres. Mme. Millet and her workpeople prepared the costumes from the design of artists, such as M. Cheneux, specially retained by the Comedie Francaise. Each of the other theatres mentioned employs several efficient designers, the best known among whom was the late M. Bianchini of the Opera Comique. The artists, or designers of costumes for the stage, receive preliminary instruction from authors and managers, who arrange for the number, the quality, and the special sort of dresses required. The designer also looks through the manuscript of the new play, and then drawe and colors the costumes in accordance with the drama or comedy about to be presented. One of the most memorable plays in which costumery was striking and predominant was Sardou's "Theodora," produced at the Porte Saint-Martin in 1885. The designer was M. Thomas, a master in his art, and 350 costumes of various sorts were used for the play. The cost of the dresses alone was £8,000, and it is no wonder that "Theodora" takes rank as the most magnificently staged of all plays.

Bulldogs for America.

From The London Express.

Another fine specimen of our national dog has just been acquired by an American fancier, the magnificent bulldog Drayton Monarch having been sold by Mr. George Stephens to Mrs. Norker of St. Louis for £300.

Drayton Monarch is only one of many of our finest bulldogs which have been sold into the United States during recent years.

Royal Stone, a grandson of the famous champion Rodney Stone, was sold last March for £800—a record price for a dog which had never been exhibited.

Although British bulldogs are in greatest demand in America, the taste for others of our most popular breeds is also growing.

A few months ago Mr. Untermyer, a New York lawyer, gave £700 for a collie pup, Southport Sculptor, belonging to Mr. W. E. Mason of Freshfield.

A Woman's Glory.

DU BOIS WAS A POET IN HIS YOUNGER DAYS

His Widow Weeps as His Verses Are Read in Court.

THEY WERE WRITTEN TO HER

Tender Sentiment to the Girl of "Sweet Seventeen" Whom He Afterward Deserted.

There were only ten men in the jury box when Justice Kellogg went on the bench in the Supreme Court yesterday to continue the trial of the suit of Mrs. Ivy Blanche McKee to set aside the will of her father, Alpheus D. Du Bois, the school Principal, who was known as "Dandy Pop" Du Bois. The other two jurors had been excused by consent of counsel.

More witnesses were called yesterday to tell of Du Bois's miserly treatment of the woman he married and who was forced to leave him forty-five years ago because he said it was too expensive to support a wife and child.

Henry Hermann, a son of the woman from whom Du Bois rented a furnished room, testified that Du Bois was in the habit of saving bits of meat in a tin box, declaring that he couldn't afford to buy fresh meat every day. Du Bois also washed his own linen and hung it on lines in his room to dry. He did not visit a barber shop in twenty years and cut his own hair, Hermann said, explaining that he could not afford to pay a barber. The witness added that the old school Principal had false teeth that became loose, but instead of seeing a dentist about it he tucked bits of paper in the roof of his mouth that his teeth wouldn't drop out.

A number of pieces of paper bearing sentences in handwriting of Du Bois were introduced in evidence, the lawyers saying they would be explained later. Then one of the old-time friends of Du Bois explained to the newspaper men that the writings were the "crux of the whole case and were of an occult nature."

Here are some of the sentences:

"7. One T. on anything with 7 is good for all time and ever afterward.

"One touch a curtain with 7 will be infallible for a time.

"Night before the 1st and 7th and multiple of 7—a first principle must be.

"Any time No. 7 to be used when locking—one 7 on keyhole to be infallible.

"This all seems to be very much alike," remarked Justice Kellogg upon reading the slips of paper.

"It is very important—all this writing," replied the plaintiff's counsel."

Counsel then offered in evidence many other papers containing writings by Du Bois. One was an original poem, dated Christmas, 1855, and dedicated "to my beloved wife, Julia, from Alpheus."

Mrs. Du Bois cried while the lawyer was reading it. She had treasured it for fifty years, although for forty-five years of that time she had not seen her husband. Here is a sample verse:

It is not Beauty's witching spell
That binds me to thee now;
'Tis not the brightness of thine eyes,
The fairness of thy brow;
My wearied spirit fain would seek
A dearer, holier shrine,
Where dwells the purest loveliness
Within that breast of thine.

The world's fictitious joys and dreams
With charms alluring fraught,
Contrasted with thy smiles appear
Too worthless to be sought;
Thus hand in hand we'll gently tread
The rosiest paths through life,
And thou shalt bless the hour that changed
The maiden to the wife.

The other poem was written by Du Bois on the seventeenth birthday of his wife, and was dated Wednesday, July 14, 1852. In it Du Bois recalled the fact that she was "a child full of innocence, sweetness, and mirth" when he first met her as one of the pupils in his school. Then he added:

Thy seventeenth birthday, and it's not a vision
Which painteth thee now as a woman in years;
Can't be that thy childhood's bright hours
Flyeten
Have gone with their sunshine, their joys, and their tears?

Is the picture before me deceptive or truthful?
Can outlines so fanciful be what they seem?
Can sweet buds of childhood so fragrant and youthful
So soon have expanded to sweet seventeen?

Ah, yes, 'tis reality. Now I remember
A child full of innocence, sweetness, and mirth,
With a spirit as gentle as Heaven could send her
To shield with its influence her pathway on earth.

And now while I muse o'er those features and number
The years that have floated down Time's rapid stream,
Sad memory pauses and ceases to wonder
That now thou art verging on sweet seventeen.

How many frail barks have gone down 'neath life's billow
Without one lone sunbeam their progress to gild;
How many young hearts have been laid 'neath the willow,
Their bright dreams of happiness all unfulfilled!
The pathway thus far hath been pleasant and thornless,
'Midst naught but sweet valleys and skies all serene;
May thy future career be as peaceful and stormless
As that which thou'rt treading at sweet seventeen.

How many look back to that epoch refining
O'er pleasures which promised endurance for years,
And find that youth's rainbow, so brilliantly shining,
Bereft of youth's sunshine, leaves nothing but tears!
Ah! May a heart that is wayworn and weary
Benumbed with the blasts of adversity keen,
Would rejoice could it turn its pilgrimage dreary
And trace back its footsteps to sweet seventeen!

Not thus may fate destine thee. Thine be the treasure
To dream of the past with emotions of joy,
To muse o'er its friendship with feelings of pleasure,
Without one remembrance its bliss to alloy.
And when thou art far on life's ocean regretless
The days of thy childhood, though years intervene,
And midst its wild waves and commotion forgetless
The heart that once loved thee at sweet seventeen.

As the lawyer went on with the reading Mrs. Du Bois buried her face in her hands and sobbed almost hysterically.

The further hearing of the case was continued to next Monday.

COGHLAN DELIVERS FLAGS.

Makes Color Presentation at Herkimer for Col. Vrooman.

Special to The New York Times.

UTICA, Oct. 6.—Rear Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan, Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, went to Herkimer this evening to present to Vrooman Camp, Spanish-American War Veterans, a stand of colors, the gift of Col. John W. Vrooman of New York. Previous to the presentation there was a parade in which camps from Ilion and Utica participated with the local military company.

The presentation was attended by a large gathering in the Opera House. Admiral Coghlan, in his address, emphasized the lesson of patriotism and manly statesmanship which, he declared, President Roosevelt was setting the men of this country. The Admiral and Mrs. Coghlan will remain in Herkimer over Sunday, the guests of Col. and Mrs. Vrooman.

LIVES SAVED AT $1 A HEAD.

Easy Money and a Bath for Battery Park Bench Warmers.

For half an hour yesterday afternoon seventy of Battery Park's regular boarders cavorted in the waters of the bay, to the great delight of two or three thousand persons who had assembled on the Battery wall. It wasn't the opening of the bathing season, but a test of the Carley life float. The bench warmers got $1 a head for their work, and it was worth it, for the water was cold.

The performance was scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock. Volunteers were called for at a dollar a head, and soon there was a line of them that stretched from the Dock Department building almost to the Aquarium around the corner.

Two young men selected the victims. A middle-aged man with a forty-five inch girth, known along South Street as "Col. Bill, the Amazon River snake charmer," was the first one picked out. Then came "Little Sam," the "Angel Fish," "Bedloe's Island Henry," "Immigrant Pete," "Fireboat Smith," "Aquarium Mike," and the others.

The spokesman gave the command "Overboard," and all hands took the plunge. There were shown some startling fashions in bathing suits. There were suits of red, green, blue, and yellow, solid and variegated effects. The crowd yelled its approval while the actors in the test shivered in the cold water. A raft was towed out into the water and the men ordered to climb aboard. It held forty of them, and the promoters said the test was a success. Gen. George Uhler, the Supervising Inspector General of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service, was among the spectators.

Another life-saving device known as the Englehardt collapsible lifeboat was tested yesterday off the Statue of Liberty. South Street furnished the "testers" for this performance. The rate was the same, $1 a head.

TO CARE FOR THE BABIES.

Women Start a Society Which Receives Warm Praise from Physicians.

Several philanthropic women are organizing a society to be known as the Infants' League of New York, and controlled entirely by women. The object of the league will to be to look after the welfare and comfort of the thousands of helpless infants born yearly in this city whose mothers are too poor to do so themselves. Women leaving the Maternity and other hospitals will be furnished free with a sanitary crib, linens, bed clothing, nursing bottles, and a supply of milk for their infants' use.

The league will not confine its charitable work to the hospital patients. When a physician visits a home where a child is born and the mother is unable to get the necessary articles, it should have the doctor notify the society, and after investigation the sanitary outfit will be at once furnished. In order not to hurt the feelings of the parents the articles will be sent in such a manner that neighbors will not know that the goods have not come direct from a store.

Physicians who have been consulted in the matter say that it is one of the finest philanthropic schemes, and is sorely needed in this city. It is hoped that this useful aid will induce many mothers to keep their babies with them, whereas without these necessary conveniences they would place them in asylums or abandon them to the mercy of strangers.

The organizers of the league hope that by this means thousands of frail little babies will live and be kept comfortable and free from the diseases which hover round them during the first few months of their existence. It is not intended to furnish medicines, as that and doctors can be procured at the various dispensaries but in special cases even these will be supplied.

The Infants' League of New York will be controlled by a board of fifteen women Directors, and is expected to be ready to commence its good work before the end of this month.

HE FANCIED A RAID.

But Montague Stopford of London Didn't Excite Our Police Much.

A blond six-footer, who wore evening clothes a little too small for him and said he was Montague Stopford of London, now staying at the Waldorf-Astoria, swung up to the Sergeant's desk in the Tenderloin Station early yesterday morning.

"Is this the famous Tenderloin station?" he asked incredulously.

"It is," said Sergt. Robinson.

"And is this district around here the famous Tenderloin of New York?"

"I must acknowledge it," answered the Sergeant.

"Well, tell me, where is your life? I have driven all through the place in my hansom all night, and no life do I see—not a raid, not a fight; only bobbies swinging their truncheons and looking at the people crawl by. I expected to see something here, some action."

"It's too bad you are disappointed."

"Come, come," put in Montague Stopford, rapping the railing energetically with his stick. "Let's have some action, some fun. Bless me, I could show you a raid any time in London. I know at least one house in West Fortieth Street that should be pulled. Come, brace up, in the interest of morality, if not for the sake of hospitality; let's just us go up there and raid it. We're enough. You and this bobby here [pointing to Lenie Cuneirons] and these journalists and myself, we could pull any house. Come; it will be jolly good sport."

Sergt. Robinson was grieved that the Fortieth Street house wasn't in his precinct, but he assured Montague Stopford that the police of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station were waiting at all times, particularly at 3 A. M., like leashed hounds, for word to descend upon a suspected place. Mr. Stopford wrote down the address of the station and dashed for his cab.

"Thanks, old toff," he called back to Sergt. Robinson. "I'll see some fun at last."

Louis Mann Suing Dillingham.

An action was begun yesterday in the Supreme Court by Louis Mann, the actor, against Charles B. Dillingham to recover $11,500, which the comedian asserts he would have earned had Mr. Dillingham carried out a contract by which Mann was to receive $350 a week and 40 per cent. of the profits of a season of thirty weeks. The defense was that Mann refused to appear in one of Jerome K. Jerome's plays.

"The American Lord" Applauded.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 6.—For the first time on any stage William H. Crane produced a comedy, "The American Lord," written for him by Charles T. Dazey and George H. Broadhurst, in this city to-night. A large audience received the production with pronounced approval, expressed in many curtain calls. Mr. Crane made a speech. The joint authors of the play were present.

ANTHONY OECHS LEAVES A FORTUNE TO CHARITY

Many Catholic Institutions Benefit by His Munificence.

GAVE LARGELY IN HIS LIFE

Wine Merchant Set Aside 60 Per Cent. of His Income Every Year for "God's Poor," as He Called Them.

The will of Anthony Oechs, the Warren Street wine merchant, which was filed for probate in the Surrogates' office yesterday, disposes of an estate estimated at $1,000,000. A great part of it will go to charity. Mr. Oechs was one of the best-known German-Americans in New York and was a member of all of the leading German organizations here. He came to New York a poor boy and accumulated a fortune in importing German wines.

While he was not widely known as a philanthropist, his intimate acquaintances knew that he contributed $50,000 a year to charity in a quiet way. This he accumulated by setting aside every year 60 per cent. of the profits from his business. This amount he distributed to such institutions in and about New York as he believed worthy.

One of his sayings was that his object in life was "to get enough money together to help God's poor." He died on Friday last.

In his will he directs his executors to pay to the Roman Catholic Archbishop of the New York Diocese $10,000, the interest or proceeds to be paid, one half annually to the pastor of the Church of St. Augustine, at 170th Street and Franklin Avenue, for an anniversary mass for the repose of his soul, and the other half to the priest of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, at 150th Street, near Third Avenue. He also bequeathed $1,000 to the priest in charge of the Church of the Immaculate Conception for weekly masses.

To his coachman, Martin Smith, he leaves all his clothing, $2,500 in cash, and the use of his home and grounds, at 101th Street and Morris Avenue, for two years. The home and furnishings are then to be sold and the proceeds devoted to charity.

To Frederick W. Bahrenburg, an employe, he leaves $5,000, and $20,000 to his friend Carl Rathemacher, who is named as executor with his attorney, Edgar Logan. All of the testator's family belongings and pictures are to go to Mr. Rathemacher.

Among the charitable bequests is one to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of $10,000. To the parish priest longest domiciled in the City of Geisenheim, Germany, where Mr. Oechs was born, $10,000 is bequeathed, to be distributed among the old poor people of the city.

The famous dogs owned by Mr. Oechs, whose kennels were among the finest in America, are bequeathed to his coachman, upon the express condition that he treats them kindly and does not part with them.

All of the testator's jewelry, including a number of gold watches, gold canes, and scarfpins, are bequeathed to his cousin, François Simoiler, who is also made the residuary legatee. Then come these charitable bequests:

To the Corpus Christi Monastery of the Sisters of St. Dominic, $5,000; Convent of Mount St. Ursula, $5,000; St. Joseph's Home for Consumptives, $5,000; Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, $5,000; St. Joseph's Asylum, $5,000; Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, $20,000; House of the Holy Family for Befriending Young Girls, $5,000; Roman Catholic Protectory at Westchester, $20,000; St. Joseph's Home for Children at Peekskill, $5,000; St. Alphonsus's Church, $10,000; Sisters of Christian Charity, Mollinckrodt Convent, Wilkesbarre, Penn., $5,000; Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, $10,000; St. Mary's College Preparatory Seminary of Redemptorist Fathers at North East, Penn., $5,000; Church of St. Angela Merici, $10,000; St. Mary's Novitiate House, Annapolis, Md., $5,000; St. Clemens College, Howard County, Md., $5,000.

The petition accompanying the will states that the property left by the testator was more than $500,000.

REVIVE MINISTERS, SAYS ONE.

They Need It More Than the Public—Scores a U. S. Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Oct. 6.—Thirty parsons who met in the First Presbyterian Church yesterday morning to prepare for the great State revival in which 125 exhorters are to participate were astonished by an address made by the Rev. E. A. Wasson of St. Stephen's P. E. Church.

They had suspended business while a committee prepared a report; and the Rev. Lyman Whitney Allen, who presided, had asked those present for an expression of their views concerning the revival.

"I am against this movement," said Rector Wasson. "I can take no part in it. I believe with you that we all need a revival; but the fact is that we ministers need it as much as the people.

"Now, while we are reviving the public, who is going to revive us? I tell you there is as much need of reform today in the Church as there was when Luther began his work.

"Protestantism is doing an active and growing business in the getting of indulgences with money, with the ministers as brokers. There has arisen a pastoral defense of the wicked rich. The wicked rich are occupying our best pews. They are practically the sole support.

"In my own denomination there is a man who admits that he bought his seat in the United States Senate—and he is the pillar of his church. He ought to be in the penitentiary; instead he is an officer of the Church of God.

"Much has been said about Rockefeller and his tainted money. Now, I want to tell you, there is a would-be Rockefeller in every church in this city."

The Rev. Mr. McDonald rose to say that while the conferrees would be glad to hear the rest of the Rev. Mr. Wasson's address, time was short, and it would be better, perhaps, to hear the report of the committee.

The Rev. Mr. Wasson sat down, and the Revival Committees were named.

MAJOR HAWES DEAD.

He Was One of the Best-Known Men in the Brooklyn Police Department.

Major John J. Hawes, one of the most popular men in the Police Department in Brooklyn, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 26 McDonough Street. Major Hawes had been in poor health since he was injured several years ago in an elevator accident, but was able to attend to his duties in the department until recently.

Major Hawes was born in Louisville, Ky., sixty-eight years ago. He was educated at Asbury University, Green Castle, Ind. He was a delegate to the convention which named Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency in 1860. When he returned to Louisville he found his Democratic neighbors very bitter against him. He fought for the Union and organized the Seventh Indiana Battery, which he commanded.

After the war he joined the regular army and was made Captain of the First Artillery, which was for a long time stationed at Bedlow's Island and Fort Hamilton. He was for some years Deputy Chief Clerk of the old Brooklyn Police Department, and since consolidation he had been record clerk of the department in Brooklyn. A widow, son, and two daughters survive him.

DEATH OF EDHEM PASHA.

Was Commander in Chief of the Army Which Defeated the Greeks.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—A dispatch from Constantinople to-day announces the death of Field Marshal Edhem Pasha, who was Commander in Chief of the victorious Turkish Army in the war with Greece, and who also distinguished himself during the defense of Plevna against the Russians.

Edhem Pasha's first reputation was made in the Russo-Turkish war, when he commanded the Grivitza redoubt at Plevna and held it with a bravery and tenacity which won enthusiastic admiration from friend and foe alike. After the war his promotion was rapid, and he was a Field Marshal when he was only 45 years old.

Soon after the war with Greece began he was ordered to take command of the Turkish Army. He succeeded Osman Pasha, who had been able to do little against the Greeks. The campaign which followed lasted only a few weeks, and resulted in complete victory for the Turkish arms. The powers intervened after the Turks had occupied the whole of Thessaly.

Edhem Pasha was by no means a typical Turk. In appearance he was a Caucasian, and his manners were more Occidental than Oriental. He was a stern disciplinarian, but enjoyed the affection of his men.

CITY IN GRAVE DANGER SAYS FIRE ALARM EXPERT

System in Manhattan Roundly Condemned in Report.

MUST BE REPLACED AT ONCE

Entirely New Equipment Urged at a Cost of $1,625,000 and on Entirely New Lines.

The New York Board of Fire Underwriters, at a meeting held at 32 Nassau Street yesterday morning, decided to adopt the report of the Committee on Fire Alams, which has been employing an expert to investigate the fire alarm system of Greater New York.

The report, which is of a sweeping character, describes the fire alarm system in Manhattan Borough as being "fundamentally wrong in design, in bad physical condition, and in an advanced stage of decay." The expert recommends the installation of a new fire alarm system, separate and distinct from the old one, which must be abandoned, as it is liable at any time to such failures as to render it wholly useless to the fire fighting department in the time of greatest need.

A copy of the report was sent to Commissioner Hayes by the underwriters, and it was voted at the meeting to recommit the report to the committee, with instructions to confer with the auhorities, in the endeavor to have immediate action taken to remedy the existing evils. This committee was formed in accordance with a resolution adopted by the New York Board of Fire Underwriters on Dec. 21, 1904, and was authorized to spend $10,000 in completing the investigation.

The committee appointed Kempter B. Miller, consulting engineer and specialist in electric signaling, as its expert for the investigation. Prior to his appointment the committee had an interview with Commissioner Hayes, and informed him of its plans. The Commissioner said he was willing to assist the investigation in every way.

The Borough of Manhattan is the only territory examined by Mr. Miller, and the committee is awaiting further instructions from the board regarding the remainder of the territory.

In the course of his report to the Fire Alarms System Committee Expert Miller says:

"The fire alarm system is not constructed in accordance with any proper engineering plans and is so bad that it must be characterized as being in an advanced stage of decay. Faulty in original design and construction, the plant has deteriorated and has been patched and repaired in its various parts as they became unworkable. The system long ago reached the stage when it cannot be transformed into permanent proper working order by any further patching, or even by radical repairs.

"The only remedy is to establish a new fire alarm system, and when it has been installed and is in working order the old one should be abandoned and dismantled. For an area presenting a fire hazard of such enormous magnitude as that which obtains in the Borough of Manhattan it is essential that the fire alarm central office building and its underground cable approaches should be constructed with extreme care. It should be located in an open space of such extent that would safeguard it in the event of a serious fire in the neighborhood. The present fire alarm headquarters in East Sixty-seventh Street fail in every essential particular to comply with the proper requirements for such a building.

"In the event of a serious fire in the block the fire-alarm beadquarters might be destroyed or damaged, and the entire island of Manhattan would then be left without fire-alarm protection for an indefinite period.

"Not only does the danger of interruption exist in the central office building itself and in its approaches, hut such danger exists throughout the fire-alarm and cable system of Manhattan.

"As the circuits are now arranged, an interruption of one wire may throw out of service forty-nine boxes. A broken wire at Sixty-eighth Street and Lexington Avenue would put out the boxes extending up to 125th Street and disable the boxes on Ward's and Randall's Islands. A broken wire in another circuit would put thirty-six fire-alarm boxes between West Eighty-eighth and Bleecker Streets out of action.

"Electrical tests made upon every circuit entering the central office have shown that the insulation and general electrical condition of the circuits are such that they are at all times on the verge of complete breakdown, and that at no time are they safe, judged even by the most elementary rules of engineering practice. All the circuits are at all times in trouble.

"There are in the Borough of Manhattan over one thousand terminal boxes. The design, construction, and present physical condition of these boxes are faulty in the extreme. The doors do not make waterproof joints, so as to prevent moisture and water from entering and injuring the cables and wires.

"The fire alarm boxes are in most cases attached to lamp posts supplied with gas. Cases have been reported of gas escaping from the pipes and taking fire in the posts, completely destroying the alarm box and the wires within the terminal box.

"Twelve miles of fire alarm wires have been carried in the subways, where they are liable to interrupt the cable circuits through accidental crosses with the high-tension light and power wires of the subway. In the event of a cross there is danger that the high-tension wires would follow along the wires in the cables and destroy not only the apparatus in the fire alarm boxes, but also that located in the various fire houses.

"Nearly all the alarm boxes must be placed in the same category as the terminal boxes. A large percentage of these boxes are of the type used in 1869, and were abandoned, owing to their defective working, in practically all large cities in this country except New York.

"Leaving out the cost of obtaining the necessary real estate, but including the cost of the central office building, the new fire alarm system could be constructed and placed in operation for about $1,400,000. This estimate only provides for a system having the present number of stations. To add 500 boxes and bring the total number in Manhattan up to 1,500 boxes would cost an additional $225,000, making a total of $1,625,000."

When shown Mr. Miller's report Commissioner Hayes called attention to the fact that he realized the condition of the system and had incorporated his views in his annual report of the department, submitted to the Mayor on July 28 last.

MARVELOUS AUTO SPEE BY HEMERY AND HEA

Former Averages 80 Miles Hour on Vanderbilt Course.

28 MILES IN 21 MINU S

Frenchman Likely to Rule as St Favorite for Big Race—Foxha Keene Dislikes Number 13.

All automobile road racing records long distances in America were br early yesterday morning, when Hem driving his eighty-horse power Da car, went over the twenty-eight-
Vanderbilt cup course on Long Islan 21 minutes. As though this were sufficiently phenomenal time for one
George Heath, the Vanderbilt cup ho driving his 120-horse power Pan made the circuit soon after Hemer 23 minutes. Hemery's time gives a erage of 45 seconds per mile, or e miles an hour, while Heath's time s about seventy-five miles an hour. T is nothing official about these times, they were caught by careful watchers are vouched for as accurate.

Among automobilists who were let the secret during the day in the vic of Garden City and Mineola, the op was freely expressed that Hemery w undoubtedly rank as a strong fav for the big race next week Saturda he continues to show such consi work. Hemery's name was picked a as readily to win at the rooms of the tomobile Club of America last Mo night when the draw took place as Lancia's. The latter has ruled sli in the lead, owing to his well-known as a driver and the excellent showin made in the Gordon Bennett race.
cia holds the world's long distance record, made in the Brescia race year, when he covered 260 miles a average of 72½ miles per hour.

Hemery has been very successful i big foreign events this year, his mos table victory being in the Ardennes cuit, which he won at an average of sixty-two miles an hour for the tota tance of 373 miles. The car that He used yesterday is the same that he in the Ardennes contest.

A new drawing will be held this ing at the Garden City Hotel for the man team. Foxhall Keene objects to the number 13, and with the recent withdrawal of Clarence Grey Dinsmore's car, Chairman Morrell has consented to allow the German representatives to make another draw for positions. This will simply affect the German drivers, and will not alter the team positions.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL GAMES.

Yale and Princeton Expect Hard Tussles in To-day's Contests.

All the big college football teams will be engaged on the gridiron this afternoon. Yale and Princeton will be called upon to face the strongest teams. The former is scheduled with Syracuse and the Tigers will line up against Georgetown. The other important games scheduled are: Columbia vs. Wesleyan, at New York; Harvard vs. University of Maine, at Cambridge, Mass.; Pennsylvania vs. Swarthmore, at Philadelphia; Cornell vs. Bucknell, at Ithaca; Carlisle Indians vs. Penn State, at Harrisburg; West Point vs. Colgate, at West Point; Naval Cadets vs. Virginia Military, at Annapolis; Williams vs. Union, at Schenectady; Trinity vs. Rutgers, at Hartford, Conn.; New York University vs. Lehigh, at New York; Lafayette vs. Ursinus, at Easton, Penn.; Amherst vs. Storrs Aggies, at Amherst; Brown vs. Worcester Polytechnic, at Providence, and Holy Cross vs. Dartmouth, at Hanover, N. H.

Columbia is not in the best physical condition to meet Wesleyan this afternoon. The latter eleven is one of the best in recent years and a close game is expected. Wesleyan's line is nearly as heavy as Columbia's, while the back field has shown up well this season. Fred Duden has received a cable instructing him to stay out of football for the remainder of the season. Yesterday's practice was confined to light work. The 'Varsity eleven was drilled in new plays, and no attempt was made by the coahes to give the players scrimmage practice.

Before yesterday's practice at Princeton the students assembled in Murray Hall and practiced the cheers and songs which will be used this season. The Tigers took only light practice in preparation for Georgetown. The work of the men was encouraging except for one thing, and that was the fumbling, which special coaching failed to eliminate. Frye took Tooker's place at right end, and it is probable that he will supplant the veteran if his playing continues to improve as fast as it has done in the last few days. H. Dillon and ... are on the hospital list. Phillips, who replaced Herring, is now a fixture at the training table. McCormack is back in the game at full back, and will probably start to-day's game. ... Riggs, '92, and Robert Galley, '97, joined the coaching squad yesterday.

Capt. Costello will not be able to play the Cornell team against Bucknell to-day. has been suffering from a cold for some time, hich has recently taken a bad turn. Shelder will play right tackle in place of Costello. The Ithacans look for a hard game with Bucknell. Last year Cornell won by the score of 24 to 12, and the Pennsylvanians have shown themselves to be a dangerous team this season.

The Naval Cadets will open the season to-day with the Virginia Military Institute. The midshipmen have had unusual opportuni... for practice owing to the suspension of ... studies on account of dyphtheria among the lower classes. The navy team will ... up to its full strength, as the men who ... not in the best of physical condition will not ... in the line-up. It is not expected that ... Doherty, Smith, McConnell, or Woodw... will play.

The scrub scored a touch-down on the New York University regulars yesterday. Larry Mowen made the score on a twenty-f... yard run around the end. Before this the 'Varsity crossed the scrub goal line twice. Pier... Hulsart, left tackle, dislocated his shoulder yesterday in an attempt to tackle a scrub runner. His absence in to-day's game with Lehigh will handicap the team, as it will necessitate several changes in the line-up.

Manager W. G. Thompson of the Carlisle Indians is having trouble in selecting officials for the games with Harvard, University of Virginia, and West Point. The only game for which the officials are agreed upon is Pennsylvania. The Indians this year will travel more than three times as far as any other football team in the country.

Pennsylvania will be materially strengthened in to-day's game. With Capt. Reynold ... Half Back Greene, and Quarter Back Stevenson eligible, the Quakers will put in a strong team against Swarthmore. The men were not subjected to very hard work yesterday, and are reported to be in good condition. Gaston will probably play at left end to-day in place of Weede, whose leg was broken on Wednesday. Pennsylvania does not expect a very hard game with Swarthmore.

Yale is ready for Syracuse. Hoyt, Tripp, and Levine are suffering from injuries, and the members of the team went through hard facings yesterday. Hoyt and Levine may get in the game next week, but Tripp is suffering from a wrenched ankle, and may not play for several weeks. Syracuse scored nine points against Yale last year, and expects to keep down to-day's score. The team arrived at New Haven yesterday morning, and took light practice on Trinity Field in the afternoon.

The football team of the De Witt Clinton High School will play its first regular game this afternoon, meeting the Mount Vernon High School team on Olympic Field. De Witt Clinton will have a light eleven this season, but many of the players have bad considerable experience.

ATHLETES IN A FERMENT.

Registration Committee's Action Brings "New Organization" Cry.

The disturbed condition of athletic affairs in this district was increased last night at the meeting of the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. Several of the athletes boldly asserted that it was only a question of a few months when the movement toward a new governing body would be made. The meeting last night was held at St. Bartholomew's Athletic Club, East Forty-second Street, near Third Avenue, and the entire committee was present, Chairman John P. Boyle of the Pastime Athletic Club presiding, and John Steil and Michael J. Flynn passing upon the cases submitted.

Although the committee had expected to accomplish something in the cases of Frank R. Castleman and John J. Joyce of the Irish-American Athletic Club, whose suspension was interfered with by the mandatory injunction of the Supreme Court, nothing could be done. This was because the injunction had not been vacated, as had been talked of. Chairman Boyle said that apparently the Irish-Americans had received other advice after their talk with him. Steil reported that he had talked with their counsel during the day and that they declared that they had decided to let the matter go before Judge Leonard A. Geigerich next week. The Registration Committee was of the opinion that the Irish-Americans had something up their sleeves and that something in the way of a sensational surprise was to be sprung. This appeared to be all the more evident as circulars were freely banded around which announced that the Irish-Americans would hold an athletic meet at Celtic Park Sunday, Oct. 15, and that entry for competitors in the various events would be free. Such an arrangement is in direct violation of the Amateur Athletic Union rules.

It was said that one of the organizations antagonistic to the recent decisions of the Amateur Athletic Union contemplated holding games open only to the suspended athletes. As matters stand at present it was said that such games would bring together nearly all of the stars in the Metropolitan District. Among the verdicts rendered last night was the suspension of Frank Hanlon and Andrew Mo-Keehnie of the Mohawk Athletic Club for six and four months respectively for competing in unsanctioned games. The case of Fred Lors of the same club was transferred to the National Committee, as this committee dealt with his case at the time of his winning the Marathon championship at St. Louis. Charles F. Drew, St. Ann's Club, was suspended for three months for competing under an assumed name, and no action will be taken in the Bonhag case until he returns the prizes he has won. Several other cases of minor importance were settled.

DOCTOR AND GIRL POISONED.

Ten-Year-Old Dies—His Father Calls Him Slave to Drug.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Dr. Oliver B. Hart and Irene Klokow, 10 years old, sister of his adopted daughter, were found at the doctor's home, in Rogers Park, last night, unconscious, as a result of poison. The girl died shortly after the doctor's wife, who is only 16 years old, returned home from a shopping tour. The house was in charge of neighbors, to whom Hart telephoned before he lost consciousness.

Dr. Hart had little practice here. Irene Klokow's sister was adopted by the doctor and his wife a year ago from the Illinois Industrial School. Irene was to have gone shopping yesterday, but complained of a slight headacbe and remained at home.

Hart's wife was Vera Kriegesman, a fourteen-year-old pupil in the John Marshall School, St. Louis, when he married her in St. Paul at the end of a river excursion on Aug. 28, 1904. The parents protested that she was too young to marry, but finally consented, and the mother accompanied the couple on the excursion. Mr. Kriegesman is a clerk in the registry division of the St. Louis Post Office.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—Dr. Oliver B. Hart was the son of A. B. Hart of this city, and was 35 years old. He lived in St. Louis until a year ago, but decided to move to Chicago. He was well known in social circles here and had established a reputation as a physician.

Hart's father said to-day that the son was a victim of morphine, and that no member of his family would go to Chicago, but that the son should be provided with ample means.

ROSEBEN ROMPS IN FOR A NEW WORLD'S RECORD

Great Sprinter, with 147 Pounds, Does Six Furlongs in 1:11 3-5.

WINNER FIRST ALL THE WAY

Four Post Favorites Successful in Fast Time on the Belmont Park Race Course.

First in an absolute romp, Roseben finished three-quarters of a mile at Belmont Park yesterday in 1:11 3-5, time that chopped a fifth of a second from the world's best record for the distance on a circular course, but in a performance that left no chance for comparison against the previous best time, 1:11 4-5, made by the three-year-old Dick Welles, with 109 pounds, at Washington Park, Chicago, in 1903, and duplicated last season by the then two-year-old Ivan the Terrible, with 92 pounds, at the Worth track, Chicago.

Roseben, a four-year-old gelding, had up the crushing weight of 147 pounds, seventeen pounds more than the scale, and, though all through the year he has been the weight-carrying hero of the season, the ease with which he won yesterday proved the biggest surprise of the day to turfmen, and when be galloped in winner in the easiest sort of style, some of the skeptical among the witnesses wondered anew whether the distances on the new track had been surveyed properly, a few doubters having declared early in the meeting that when the finish line was changed the managers of the track had neglected to move back the starting posts.

That there can be any such excuse for the fast time made at Belmont Park is denied vehemently by the track Superintendent and his assistants, as all the starting posts were changed in accordance with the shortening of the stretch when the finish line was moved up before the grand stand. The real explanation of the fast time is that the resurfacing of the course has made it the fastest track in this country, and, so far as can be estimated, the fastest in the world. Of Roseben's performance there could be no questioning its merit, though one other fast race during the afternoon, a mile in 1:38 2-5 by the selling class filly New Mown Hay, the time just equaling the track record made by Grapple a few days before, startled horsemen.

Roseben ran in the Manhattan Handicap, for which five of the eight horses named on the card went to the post, Roseben having the top weight, 147 pounds, the highest that ever has been carried successfully in the history of the stakes. Simply because of his extravagant weight there was a fair price against him at all stages of the betting, the horse starting at 3 to 5 on, after having been even money through a portion of the early betting, while Aeronaut, with a big pull in the weights, was backed to beat the favorite on the strength of a recent fast trial.

It went to show just how much the best horse Roseben was that the top weight went to the post in regular order and stood there waiting with his 147 pounds up until the favored Aeronaut, who by special permission of the Stewards was led to the post, the groom in charge of the horse taking his own time about the leading, and getting to the post after Roseben had stood there for something like five minutes. When Aeronaut did get to the post there was no further delay, for the horses lined up and broke at the first call. Roseben giving one more proof of his perfect disposition by moving up with his field and simply because of his own good temper getting the best of the start, for he broke first, and even while horsemen wondered at the tactics of his jockey, O'Neil, went on in the lead and made the pace with his top weight.

The race was run around the turn of the main track, and Aeronaut shot out of the bunch and went after the favorite as the far turn was begun, the two racing head and head to the turn into the stretch for the run home, where Roseben shook off his challenger and from that point on to the winning post galloped out in the lead, by himself, winning, pulled up, in his record-breaking feat. The fractions of the race were: First furlong, 0:12; quarter, 0:23 3-5; three furlongs, 0:34 3-5; half mile, 0:46 2-5; five furlongs, 0:58 2-5.

Roseben is the horse that a year ago at Morris Park, running coupled with Rudabek, won a maiden race for the J. A. Drake stable. He later was sold to D. C. Johnson, his present owner, and, though he has changed trainers several times, he has been the main stay of the Johnson establishment. His winnings have kept his owner in the ranks of active turfmen, as Roseben always has been able to win a race and a big bet for Johnson at moments preceding the quarterly retirement from the turf which distinguished Johnson until he became owner of Roseben.

New Mown Hay's fast mile was run in the last race of the day, a selling affair, for which New Mown Hay, heavily backed by the Gates-Drake party, started favorite in a field of thirteen horses. Ninnasquaw led for three-quarters of a mile, New Mown Hay then going to the front and galloping in an easy winner in 1:38 2-5. Four post favorites were successful during the afternoon, the only non-favorites to win being St. Roma, who, at 6 to 1, captured the first race in a smart finish against the favorite, Maid of Timbuctoo, and Water Tank, who won the fifth race at odds of 5 to 1 by a sharp sprint in the last furlong, after Birmingham, the favorite, seemingly had the race won. The Dixiana, for three-year-olds, was won in easy style by Dreamer, who started as an even money favorite. Summary:

MISS HOOLEY RIDES ASTRIDE.

Morristown Society Enjoys Novelty at Its Horse Show.

Miss Mattie B. Hooley introduced a decided novelty yesterday for the fashionable colony of the Morristown, N. J., district when she appeared at the Morristown Horse Show in a divided skirt, astride her bay mare Babe, in the combination class for horses suitable for harness and saddle purposes. Miss Hooley looked quite becoming in her dark riding costume and presented a graceful appearance as she rode around the oval, showing her entry to advantage. Her mother and other members of the family looked on approvingly and she was vigorously applauded by a large crowd of spectators.

The 5 o'clock tea parties, introduced on Thursday, found several recruits yesterday. Mrs. Alexander Harvey Tiers and Mrs. A. Q. Garrettson, wife of Supreme Court Justice Garrettson, presided over a double party, the vacant places being filled as rapidly as they became empty. Mrs. H. McK. Twombly and Miss Ruth Twombly were included in the party. Among the other society matrons who dispensed the honors at the box tea tables were Mrs. C. Ledyard Blair, Mrs. Robert Dumont Foote, and Mrs. Robert H. McCurdy.

The annual Horse Show dinner was a big success. A monster horseshoe with 500 vari-colored electric lights, formed the centrepiece of the table. The floral decorations, bread, butter, salads, vegetables, and pastry were of a horseshoe design. The dinner was attended by the officials and judges of the club.

Ben Nicoll, the polo player, had a narrow escape while riding Charles Pfizer's York in the Corinthian class. When carrying his horse over the jumps the latter made a poor take-off and struck the two top bars with his fore feet. The horse lost his balance and threw Mr. Nicoll heavily to the ground, the rider's head barely missing the side posts of the jump. He was badly shaken up.

Honors in the show ring went to Mrs. John Gerken, Otto H. Kahn, and Charles Pfizer, who shared eleven of the first prizes between them. Mr. Kahn was principal winner, capturing five of the coveted blue ribbons. Iron Duke and Wauban each took two firsts, and Mr. Kahn's four-in-hand team won over those of H. McK. Twombly and C. Ledyard Blair. Mrs. John Gerken's Newsboy and Shopgirl won three prizes during the afternoon, and Charles Pfizer's Yourfellow and York received an equal number. Alfred B. Maclay's Auditor B. again defeated Bird S. Coler's Commander Baker in the roadster class. Summaries:

Penn Takes Tennis Championship.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—The University of Pennsylvania to-day won the intercollegiate tennis championship in doubles. E. B. Dewhurst and H. B. Register of Pennsylvania defeated H. G. Wells and S. Fields of Yale in straight sets. Score: 6—0, 6—2, 8—6.

British Football Team Won Again.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 6.—The English Association football team, under the leadership of Sir Charles Kirkpatrick, defeated a picked team of Philadelphians to-day by the score of 4 goals to 1 on the grounds of the Merion Cricket Club at Haverford. The home team was composed of cricket players selected from the several clubs in this city and two former college football men. The Philadelphians played a superior game in the first half of forty-five minutes and scored one goal, while the visitors failed to tally. In the second period of twenty minutes the Englishmen won because of the lack of physical condition of the home players.

Loose Fielding Costs New York Another Defeat by Quakers.

Although the champions outbatted the Philadelphians by nearly two to one in safe hits yesterday, their wretched fielding cost them the game by a score of 5 to 4 in eight innings. Two of the most important positions on the New York nine, left field and shortstop, were filled by substitutes, Pitcher Wiltse taking the place of Mertes at left, while Strang took Dahlen's place at short. In the case of the latter he did all that was required of him in the field in an able manner, while at the bat he hit safely twice out of three chances, one of his hits being a home run to extreme centre field. The same cannot be said of Wiltse, however, for he made two bad blunders, one being a dropped fly ball. The unfortunate part of the mistakes was that they were costly.

Darkness was fast settling over the scene of the conflict when the New Yorks came up to the bat for what proved to be the last time in the eighth inning. Devlin and Gilbert were easily retired, and then Bowerman appeared in place of Ames. He hit a sharp ball to Bransfield, who made a good stop, but was unable to beat out the runner. Bresnahan followed with a hit to left, and Bowerman reached third. It now devolved on Browne to at least tie the score, and the right fielder made a good effort. He shot a hot grounder to Bransfield, who fielded it finely, and by a fast and accurate throw caught Bowerman at the plate.

The Quakers started their run getting in the first inning. Thomas was lucky in reaching second on a hit that bounded badly just as Wiltse was in the act of stopping the ball. On Gleason's sacrifice he went to third and scored on Courtney's hit to Gilbert, who made a bad throw to the plate. Ames hit Magee in the fourth, and on Bresnahan's wild throw to catch him stealing, the runner landed on third. He scored on Bransfield's out. Singles by Dooin and Thomas, a wild throw by Devlin, and Wiltse's fumble cost the local men two more runs in the fifth. The visitors' only earned run was scored in the sixth on Magee's single, a steal of second, Titus's sacrifice, and Bransfield's out.

With two out in the first Donlin hit to centre field for a home run. McGann and Wiltse followed with singles, but McGann was caught trying to make third by a splendid throw of Thomas to Courtney. Donlin's single, a steal, and McGann's triple earned a run in the third, and Strang's hit in the fourth earned for him a circuit of the bases. Browne tallied the New Yorks' last run on his single, Donlin's double, and Wiltse's out on a fly at centre field. In the sixth inning McGann and Magee collided at first, and McGann left the game.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Boston Scores Two Runs in Eighth Inning and Defeats New York.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—By a lucky bunching of hits, a couple of battery errors, and Keeler's fumble at right field, the Bostons were enabled to score two runs and defeat the Greater New Yorks to-day, the score being 3 to 1. The weather was extremely cold for the time of year, and this may have had something to do with the rather indifferent work in the field of both teams. Clarkson did well up to the last inning, when, after Rising had gone out on a fly to Dougherty, he gave Burkett a base on balls. The latter took second on a passed ball and reached third on Grimshaw's safe infield hit. Selbach sent the ball safely to right field, scoring Burkett, but on Keeler's fumble Grimshaw reached third. Godwin fouled out to Connor, and Selbach started for second. While he was being run down Grimshaw scored. Selbach was finally put out by Laporte.

The New Yorks' run was scored by Laporte, who hit safely to centre field and reached second on Chase's out. Oldring made his first safe hit by placing the ball in left field, and Laporte crossed the plate.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Washington defeated Philadelphia in a loosely played game to-day, 10 to 4. Coakley was batted out of the box and Waddell, who succeeded him, was wild, giving five bases on balls and making two costly wild pitches. Wolfe, who relieved Falkenberg, pitched brilliantly. Score:

ST. LOUIS, 6; CHICAGO, 2.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—Almost as remarkable as the burst of speed displayed by Chicago on its last Eastern trip was the reversal of form of the St. Louis team to-day, when the locals drove Dr. White, Chicago's premier pitcher, from the box in the third inning and snowed the visiting team under an avalanche of hits and runs, practically clinching the game, which they finally won by a score of 6 to 2. Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Reticent, officially a starter in the last race at Belmont Park yesterday, never got to the starting post, as in the parade past the stand just before the horses started to the post, he suddenly bolted, and, rising at the fence at the entrance to the paddock, tried to jump it. He tangled his feet with the rail and got a hard fall, in which his rider, O'Mahoney, escaped better than the horse, which was badly shaken up. Reticent then was excused and did not start.

Alwin, owned by A. L. Aste and entered for the Dixiana Stakes, the fourth race on the card yesterday, was brought over to Belmont Park, the intention of his stable being to add him as a starter for the stakes. On the way from Sheepshead Bay the colt was attacked by colic and landed at the race course a very sick horse. His owner was compelled to change his plans and send Alwin back without running him.

New Mown Hay, entered to sell for $1,000 in the last race, was bid up to $4,000 by J. J. McCafferty and then retained by her owner, C. E. Durnell, for $4,005. The bidding up cost the owner three times the value of the purse, but as New Mown Hay was sent out for a good thing and J. A. Drake and J. W. Gates both backed her heavily, Durnell had a margin of profit in spite of the bidding up.

HUNTERS THROW RIDERS AT PIPING ROCK SHOW

Collier Alone Stays in Saddle, Winning for Meadow Brook.

MRS. HITCHCOCK'S SWEEP

Great Gathering of Fashionable Society Sees Her Take Four Ribbons and Cup in One Class.

Falling horses throwing their riders and crashing through the fences gave a spectacular turn to the special class for hunters at the North Shore Horse Show at Piping Rock, Long Island, yesterday afternoon. Some of the riders of the mettlesome hunters, trained right up to the minute so that they would nervously exhibit spirit and top the high timbers in thrilling form, were badly bruised and cut by the flying splinters of the rails as the horses plunged through them. Through all the mêlée that followed the performances of the hunters Peter Fenelon Collier, the Master of the Hounds of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club, sat his horse like a Centaur. He had a beautifully muscled, clean limbed timber topper, imported from Ireland, and the brave Irish mare skimmed the tall barriers like a swallow.

The ructions caused by the hunters had its effect upon the large gallery that was perched upon the tops of coaches and drags parked about the show ring, a natural amphitheatre set among wooded hills, midway between Locust Valley and Oyster Bay, L. I. The more timid of the women left their seats while this class was judged, and even among the men there was the expectancy of some one being seriously injured before the award of the judges was announced. Two sets of three qualified hunters of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club and one set each of the Smithtown Hunt, R. Lawrence Smith master, and Tippah Farm Hunt, Paul Rainey, master, held the big ring. All of the men were in scarlet or bottle green of the hunt uniforms, with silken "top pers" or velvet caps.

They made a brave showing with the restive horses tugging at the bits. But the "tally-ho" bugling of the bar proved more than their strained nerves could stand, and when they came to topping the tall jumps there was not a horse that failed to balk. Every rider with the exception of Master P. F. Collier was thrown, not once, but several times, and the horses demolished the barriers by crashing through them. The first entry of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club won the big silver cup offered by the North Shore Horse Show Association, and when it was handed to Master Collier in the ring he spurred his Irish mare at the fence leaving the ring at a jump instead of going out by the gate, to the cheers and applause of the enthusiastic gallery.

The most remarkable feat in the way of prize winning was accomplished during the afternoon by Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., a member of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club, Hempstead, L. I. Mrs. Hitchcock took every one of the ribbons and an added prize, together with the cup in the class for saddle horses, over 15 hands, exhibited and ridden by women. Coronet, a fine chestnut gelding, rather easily won the blue, while Tamor, another chestnut, the red, while Kingsman captured the yellow. The special award went to Jouac King. All of this remarkable four were dark chestnuts and appeared to be perfectly matched. The clean sweep of Mrs. Hitchcock's entries proved a popular one, and she was applauded liberally.

Harry Payne Whitney offered cups for each of the children's pony classes. His own entry, General, took the first cup for the class before traps, and in the saddle class E. D. Morgan's Johnny Green won the first cup.

There was much enthusiasm shown over all of the classes. The entries throughout proved far superior to the usual showing at country shows, as all of the fashionable Long Island colony had placed the very best of their stables in the ring. The summary:

LOCAL WOMEN GOLFERS BEAT QUAKER TEAM

New Yorkers Win First Inter-City Match by Three Points.

WILL MEET BOSTON TO-DAY

Miss Bishop, National Champion, Beaten by Mrs. Barlow—Close Matches on Morris County Links.

Thirty of the best golf women from the Metropolitan and Philadelphia Golf Associations met yesterday on the links of the Morris County Golf Club at Morristown, N. J., in the annual inter-city team competition, and after a number of closely played matches the New York women won by a score of 16 points to 11. The winners will play the Boston women to-day.

The rival teams yesterday had fifteen players on a side. Miss Georgiana A. Bishop, the present national champion, headed the New York delegation, and opposed to her was Mrs. R. H. Barlow. It was a case of poor putting for the champion, as her long game was quite satisfactory. Mrs. Barlow had little difficulty in winning by 2 up and 1 to play. Miss Bishop improved on the homeward holes, and as the scoring was done on the Nassau point system she managed to keep Mrs. Barlow from gaining more than one point for her team. Each played the 18-hole course in 93 strokes, scores that were not beaten during the day. The cards were:

Miss Bishop, out.5 5 5 6 6 6 5 6 4—48
Mrs. Barlow, out.5 4 4 5 7 6 4 5 6—46
Miss Bishop, in..5 5 4 5 6 6 6 5 3—45—93
Mrs. Barlow, in..5 6 5 5 6 6 5 5 4—47—93

Mrs. Charles T. Stout, who held the women's National championship twice, received a cordial welcome on her return to the championship tournament ranks, and in her preparatory practice for the big event next week played in excellent form. Mrs. Stout had the Philadelphia veteran Mrs. C. F. Fox against her, and won by 4 up and 2 to play, gaining the maximum three points for the local team. Mrs. Stout did an approximate 93, to 95 for Mrs. Fox.

Mrs. T. W. Reath of Philadelphia equaled the low score of 93 strokes and surprised some of the critics by defeating Miss Louise Vanderhoef by 2 up and 1 to play. The game was one of the best of the day. On the ninth green Mrs. Reath was 2 up. Miss Vanderhoef made a game finish, and captured the last two holes by grand putting.

An interesting feature of the game which shows how well matched were the rival teams is seen from the fact that each side won six matches, while three were halved. Mrs. Marie Bryce, the Morris County ex-champion, lost a seemingly victory over Mrs. Fitzgerald on the last three holes. The Morris County girl was dormie three when the Philadelphian played the final three in men's bogey figures and tied the game.

Miss Frances C. Griscom, an ex-National champion, gave 3 points to Philadelphia by defeating Miss Elsa Hurlbut with unexpected ease. Miss Marion Oliver's defeat by Miss F. Ayres was another surprise for the local contingent. The players and scores are:

Empire City Track's Last Matinee.

Some of the best trotting and pacing of the season is promised for the last matinee of the New York Driving Club at the Empire City track to-day. The six handsome cups offered by the club are tied for in various classes, and a great effort will be made to break these ties. In the pacing class four horses are tied for the heat cup—Star Pugh, Bessie Thompson, Black Belle, and Susie G. In the trotting class Belfry Chimes leads with fourteen heats won. Princess Pique has thirteen heats, and Invader twelve. A straight heat victory in this class may change the result all around. There will be a concert by the Old Guard Band, and the races, which begin at 1:30 o'clock, will be free to the public, with the privileges of the grand stand. Upon the decision of the judges President Charles C. Lloyd will present the trophies to the victors.

GET OUT, SAYS POOL TO ANTHONY COMSTOCK

Magistrate Surprises Vice Society's Superintendent.

WON'T ENTERTAIN COMPLAINT

Court Can't See Obscenity Where Censor Says It Exists—"I'll Have That Man Impeached," Cries Comstock.

Magistrate Pool had dealings yesterday in the Tombs Court with Anthony Comstock, who recently asked: "Who's Bernard Shaw?"

Magistrate Pool not only ordered Comstock out of court, but when the wrathful Superintendent of the Society for the Suppression of Vice referred to the organization he represents, the Magistrate shook his fist and cried:

"I know all about your organization—just show me some of the pictures you keep in your office and I'll issue a warrant for you."

Mr. Comstock's face took on a more roseate hue and his whiskers bristled.

It came about because Mr. Comstock caused the arrest yesterday morning of John Storm, a wholesale dealer, with offices at 9 Ann Street, whom h[illegible] ccused of selling obscene pictures. He [illegible] a sample of the picture in court.

The Magistrate was busy just then and did not give the picture much attention. But when Mr. Comstock returned in the afternoon an[d] had drawn up the complaint for the arraignment of the prisoner Magistrate Pool interrupted him.

"I have looked carefully at that picture," he said, "and I have shown it to a number of friends, and nobody is able to see where the obscenity comes in."

"That's not for you to say," Mr. Comstock retorted curtly. "The Court of Special Sessions has already ruled on that point."

"I don't care," was the rejoinder of the Magistrate as he waved away the documents in the case. "I won't entertain any complaint."

"But—" protested Comstock.

"But me no buts," said Magistrate Pool. "I know what you are going to do—cite an opinion of the Supreme Court. Don't I know all about it? I don't want to hear it. Get out of this court."

The Superintendent of the Society for the Suppression of Vice placed himself squarely in front of the Magistrate and remarked with emphasis:

"I represent an organization—"

"See that this person steps down at once and leaves the courtroom," Magistrate Pool called out to the Roundsman in charge of the court squad.

Mr. Comstock's face grew still redder. He seemed too overcome to speak. Noticing the Roundsman close at his elbow he walked down from the bridge and out of the court. As he reached the lobby he burst out:

"I'll have that man impeached yet!"

The case against Bernarr Macfadden, which was to have had a hearing before Magistrate Wyatt in Special Sessions yesterday afternoon, was adjourned after a long legal wrangle between Mr. Comstock and Lawyer Abraham Levy, who appeared for the defendant.

NO PICKETING LAWFUL.

Chicago Judge Compares It to "Peaceful Mobbing" in Typothetae Cases.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—"There is no such thing as peaceful, polite, and gentlemanly picketing, any more than there can be peaceful mobbing or lawful lynching," declared Judge F. A. Smith of the Appellate Court to-day in deciding against Franklin Union of Press Feeders and three members who had been fined $100 each and sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment for violation of an injunction secured by the Chicago Typothetae.

The cases of Fred Kitchel, Charles Smith, and John Mucher were taken to the Appellate Court by Franklin Union, against which, as an organization, a decree imposing a fine of $1,000 had been entered. This decree is affirmed by the Appellate Court.

CLUNG TO HOOD OF AUTO.

Man Run Down in Wagon Saved His Life—Motorists Unidentified.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 6.—Stephen Novak, a Norwalk business man, formerly of this city, had a wild ride clinging to the hood of a big touring automobile on the Boston Post Road east of here last night. The auto had crashed into his horse and wagon. Novak was carried, sometimes in the air, sometimes dragging on the road, 100 feet or more before the car came to a standstill, when he dropped into the road exhausted.

There were four men in the touring car, which was on the wrong side of the road when the collision occurred. Novak came to Stamford to report the matter, and the police are trying to find the motorists, who got away without giving their names.

LOOK TO HERMANN SCHIFFER.

Creditors of Bank of Alamosa Say He Is Responsible.

Special to The New York Times.

ALAMOSA, Col., Oct. 6.—Developments in the failure of the Bank of Alamosa, conducted by the Schiffer Brothers, are said to indicate that Hermann Schiffer of New York was interested in the bank and can be held for its debts.

District Attorney Pilcher declares that the failure is one of the worst in the history of Southern Colorado, and is doubtful if the creditors will realize more than 20 per cent.

On the checks and stationery of the bank, under the words "Bank of Alamosa, Col.," appears in brackets, "H. Schiffer & Bro.," which is said to indicate that Hermann Schiffer's name was used with his knowledge.

POLICEMEN SET BROKEN NECK

Carelessness in Handling Patient on Stretcher May Save His Life.

ELMIRA, Oct. 6.—William Volker fell down a long flight of stairs this morning. Doctors who examined him as he lay unconscious at the foot of the stairs declared that his neck had been broken.

Two policemen lifted Volker into an ambulance stretcher and in doing so failed to support his head, which dropped into such a position that the injury to the man's spine was corrected. He is now all right except for a few bruises.

Many Typhoid Cases at Paterson.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 6.—Mary Beaton, 26 years old, and James Beaton, 18 years old died to-day of typhoid fever, which is epidemic at North Paterson. Frederick Beaton, 14 years old, died of the disease two days ago. Mr. and Mrs. Beaton and another son are seriously ill. The latter's death is expected any moment. There are four other cases. The local physicians, aided by the State Board of Health, are doing all they can to stamp out the disease.

TO HEAR CUSTOMS CASES.

Federal Courts to Give More Time to Importers' Complaints.

The United States courts in this city have completed arrangements to expedite customs cases at the forthcoming sessions. There has been considerable complaint by importers regarding the slowness of tariff litigation, and the tribunals have determined to remedy the situation by devoting more time this Fall and Winter to considering classification problems.

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals will hold two sessions of four weeks each instead of a session of three weeks, as heretofore. The Appellate Court will open on Tuesday. The Circuit Court will hold two sessions this Fall, one beginning Oct. 23 and the other Dec. 11. Both of these sessions will be given up to the consideration of customs disputes.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

JOSEPH SIMON.—Joseph Simon, a clerk, residing at 252 West Eighty-fifth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $12,681 and assets of $10, consisting of the surrender value of a life insurance policy, on which he has borrowed $690. J. S. Barnet & Brother are creditors for more than $10,000 on an account between 1891 and 1895 for leather.

DAVIDSON-SHELDON BARYTES COMPANY.—Deputy Sheriff Rinn has received an execution for $3,432 against the Davidson-Sheldon Barytes Company of 239 Front Street in favor of Frank H. Wright, but found nothing there to levy on; even the chairs and desks were claimed by others. The company was incorporated on June 28, 1904, with a capital stock of $10,000, leased a plant at Long Island City, and put in new machinery. A chattel mortgage for $6,000 was afterward given on the machinery. This was foreclosed three months ago. James H. Davidson was President of the company. A creditors' petition in bankruptcy was filed against him individually on March 7, 1905, and he obtained a discharge on Sept. 27.

Attachment Vacated.

Deputy Sheriff Plunkett has received notice that the attachment obtained on Aug. 22 against Alfred Feitner, who does business as the Mundus Trading House, dealer in lithographic stones, at 167 Chambers Street, by W. Laub, doing business as F. Huhn & Son, for $4,500, has been countermanded and withdrawn. It was vacated by consent.

St. Helena's Bad Times.

Time was when St. Helena, the lonely Atlantic rock on which Napoleon lingered out his last years, was a regular calling place for ships from England to the Cape of Good Hope, India, Australia, and the East. The little island, in fact, lived and flourished on the money spent by these callers. But the construction of the Suez Canal diverted this trade and aimed a fatal blow at St. Helena's prosperity. A pathetic reminder of the good old times and the present bad ones is the announcement in the latest issue of the St. Helena Guardian that the local Sailors' Home is to be sold!—London Chronicle.

CITY CHILDREN TAUGHT TO KNOW WILD BIRDS

Nature Study in the Public Schools Under Better Auspices.

MANY SPECIMENS PROVIDED

American Museum of Natural History Lending Valuable Aid in Broadening the Scope of Childish Research.

"I wish all the birds wasn't brown and dirty," wrote a little city-bound schoolboy not so very many years ago in a composition on "Wishes."

Ten years of monotonous familiarity with the rags and rowdyism of the English sparrow and utterly unrelieved by a glimpse of anything brighter or gayer in the world of winged creatures had given birth to the sentiment.

Such a narrow experience, even among the children of the east side schools, however, is unknown to-day. The Board of Education now maintains a carefully devised course of nature study in all the public schools of the city, and additional aid is to be offered in the coming year by the American Museum of Natural History, in the form of collections of nature specimens for use in the public schools.

Two or three years ago, when public school teachers first began the systematic teaching of simple lessons from flowers and birds, the Museum was continually receiving requests from Principals and teachers for gifts of specimens, particularly mounted birds.

It happened that Dr. Bumpus, Director of the museum, who had himself been a teacher, had already in mind a scheme of specimens to be circulated by the Museum for educational aid. It was Dr. Bumpus's view, however, that a loan system would prove far more effective than outright gifts.

As the Doctor put it, "If you want a man to read a book, don't give it to him, but lend it to him."

The slight feeling of constraint, of being limited in time, of having in one's possession a valuable thing that does not actually belong to one, has a stimulating effect upon mental effort.

Working quietly, the Doctor about a year and a half ago caused to be prepared in the Museum workshops some twenty sets of mounted birds—two study-groups, with ten duplicate boxes in each—which were sent to those schools which had asked for them. The plan was not advertised. The first efforts were purely tentative.

Immediately, however, it was found necessary to increase both the number of groups and of sets, and presently the Museum found itself maintaining a regular system of circulation, constantly including more schools and embracing an increasing variety of materials.

So rapid was the growth of the plan that last year the Museum issued a circular announcing that to meet the numerous requests received from teachers to supply them with nature study material it had prepared several small collections of natural history specimens which would be loaned for short periods to the public schools of Greater New York. Last year the collections were used by 200 schools and studied by over 375,000 school children.

These collections include four sets of native birds, adapted for different grades of study, including an owl set, a bluejay set, a robin set, a bluebird set—of which each set has forty duplicate cases. Besides these bird specimens there are sets of insects, mollusks, crabs, starfishes, and worms, sponges and corals, minerals and rocks, and native woods.

The bird sets, which are far and away the most popular, are packed in neat dark boxes about the size of a dress suit case. The mounted birds, each perched on a characteristic twig, stand on little shelves, with an attached card describing their character and habits. These specimens may be readily removed and studied at close range. All the other groups are similarly packed in boxes divided into compartments bearing descriptive cards. All specimens, save those of insects, which are mounted under glass, may be freely handled.

During the past Summer the Museum staff, under the direction of George H. Sherwood, Assistant Curator of Vertebrate Zoology, has been hard at work turning out new duplicate specimens. Six hundred bird skins have been prepared for use this Fall. Mr. Sherwood tells many interesting stories of the way the sets have been received. Last year the school children often wrote letters to Dr. Bumpus, thanking him for the use of the collections and telling him what they had most enjoyed.

One little girl wrote: "I shall always like the bluejay best because he has the prettiest colors." Another said: "I have never seen an owl. I certainly was glad to see one." A little east side girl wrote: "It was good of Dr. Bumpus to send us the birds. I like the sparrow best because it is the only one I have ever seen." A South Brooklyn teacher tells how, one restless afternoon, wishing to keep the children quiet while she was busy with some work, she took the birds, one by one, out of the case and arranged them in a brilliant row on the edge of the desk. Out of the corner of her eye she could see dozens of heads peering and craning, with wide eyes and excited whisperings, while one little waif in a back seat stole softly down the aisle to get a better look.

While the children are allowed to handle the birds as much as they like, the privilege never has been seriously abused. Once a little boy in a Kings County school began gravely to dissect a magnificent oriole, but his intentions were purely scientific. The bluejay set, judging by signs of wear and tear, seems to have been the favorite.

Teachers report that they have been able to use the sets not only for nature study, but also as subjects for dictation exercises, original composition and reading, and as models for drawing. The sets themselves are carefully prepared with a view of supplying the material required in the Syllabus of Nature Study issued by the Board of Education.

Mr. Sherwood has devised a simple and ingenious system of keeping track of the various requests for and movements of the many cases. Blank forms are furnished teachers upon which they may register their request for the cases and also the sequence in which they wish them delivered. A card accompanies each case upon which the teacher records the date received, the length of time retained, (which is not expected to exceed three weeks,) the number of pupils by whom the collection has been studied, the number of the school, and the teacher's signature. A perfectly sure system of statistics can thus be maintained.

On the wall of Mr. Sherwood's office hangs a large map of Greater New York, splashed with little red dots and bristling pins. Each red dot means a school. Each pin in a red dot means a request for specimens from that school, and little colored riders on the pins show what collections, if any, have been delivered to that particular school. It is interesting to note little colonies of pins away down in the South Brooklyn districts and in City Island, many miles from the City Hall. It should be added that the entire expense of the collections and of the messenger service required for their delivery is borne by the Museum.

Besides providing an increased number of the old sets, the Museum has just added to circulation two new sets of special interest. A new tanager set of native birds containing the scarlet tanager, red-eyed vireo, goldfinch, humming bird, and pigeon are likely to make it highly popular.

Most interesting is a new specimen insect group, showing the cecropia moth, the development of the monarch butterfly, the life and work of the honey bee, and household insects. This case contains four distinct glass-topped boxes, each about 8 by 12 inches, readily removed and handled.

Along with this case goes a descriptive sheet from which the teacher may impress upon her pupils how to recognize, destroy, and guard against household pests.

CITY RUNS EVERYTHING.

Freiburg Owns All Public Utilities and Even a Restaurant.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—In a report to the Department of Commerce Consul Liefeld of Freiburg, Germany, gives an interesting account of the revenues of the city from the ownership of public utilities.

From electric light and power the receipts in the past year were $85,000. The city's electric railroad earned $135,000. The city's gas plant brought in $302,000. The city owns the main cemetery and took in $33,000 from it. No funeral processions are allowed in the city, but they begin and end in the cemetery grounds.

The city runs an invalid insurance business. It applies chiefly to people of the servant class. If they are sick city physicians attend them. The premiums received during the year were $14,000. The city sold its garbage and got $12,700 for it.

Freiburg runs a city pawn shop, from which was derived as receipts, including interest on capital, $30,500. In the course of the year 21,801 articles were pawned, on which the city loaned $45,121.

The city manages a municipal orchestra and charges admission for concerts. The orchestra plays four or five times each week for seven months of the year. At the Opera House the regular price of admission varies from 40 pfennigs (9½ cents) to 3.50 marks (83 cents) for each performance. The orchestra in the Winter season gives a series of six symphonic concerts. The receipts in this department amounted to $23,766.

The city uses its sewage by conducting it to irrigated fields outside, and from this source derived last year $65,000. Freiburg has a municipal theatre. It is not self-supporting, but is considered an essential element for educating the people, and the city would as soon think of managing its schools at a profit as to manage a theatre at a profit. The total receipts of the theatre amounted to $89,837, Freiburg making good a deficit of $32,600.

The city also has a city savings bank with 23,800 depositors and $6,300,000 deposits. Freiburg has a city kitchen or cheap restaurant, which took in last year $27,800. The hungry citizen can get a bowl of soup for 1½ cents, a cup of coffee for 1 7-10 cents, a whole supper for 6 cents, and a dinner for 7½ cents.

Even building lots, forests, and vineyards and a daily newspaper are controlled by the city and are not necessarily managed for profit, but for the benefit of the inhabitants.

VISIBLE SUPPLY OF COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 6.—Secretary Hester's statement of the world's visible supply of cotton, issued to-day, shows the total visible to be 8,090,704, against 2,938,474 last week and 2,142,432 last year.

Of this the total of American cotton is 2,851,704, against 2,142,474 last week and 1,627,432 last year, and of all other kinds, including Egypt, Brazil, India, &c., 739,000, against 796,000 last week and 517,000 last year.

Of the world's visible supply of cotton there is now afloat and held in Great Britain and Continental Europe 1,512,000, against 1,132,000 last year; in Egypt, 44,000, against 61,000 last year; in India, 454,000, against 240,000 last year, and in the United States, 1,081,000, against 790,000 last year.

WHERE LAWYERS ARE LIABLE.

Must Pay Damages in Germany If They Give Misleading Advice.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Consul General Guenther says the German lawyers are liable in damages to their clients for evil results consequent upon misleading advice. He writes that the Supreme Court of Germany has recently rendered a decision that an attorney at law is liable to his client to the full extent for carelessly giving incorrect advice.

The court holds that the attorne[illegible] who, for pay, gives his client advice as [illegible] certain conduct and procedure is lia[illegible]e for the legal consequences suffered [illegible] the client in acting thereon, provid[illegible] that such advice is not only faulty, [illegible] has been proved to have been give[illegible] carelessly.

Through the expressly stated [illegible] tacit offer of remuneration for informat[illegible] and advice concerning a question, an a[illegible]orney tacitly assumes the position of de[illegible] or of the client, which obliges him to be [illegible]reful in giving advice, and he is therefor[illegible] liable for its consequences if he has failed through carelessness.

Steamship Ashore; Passengers Safe.

EUREKA, Cal., Oct. 6.—Fast [illegible] the rocks one and one-half miles s[illegible]h of Point Gorda and beside the boiler[illegible]f the old steamship Humboldt, the Sa[illegible] Francisco and Portland Company's ve[illegible]el St. Paul lies a total wreck. Its 93 pa[illegible]ngers and a crew of 65 men are safe [illegible] Capt. Randall says the disaster was du[illegible] fog. Third Officer Holmes was on the [illegible]idge. The first warning he had of dan[illegible] was the roar of the surf, when he [illegible]mediately changed the ship's course. [illegible] moment later it struck bow first. [illegible] lies with its stern toward land, 20[illegible]yards from the beach, with two lines fast [illegible] bore.

LEGAL NOTICES.

GOVERNMENT OF THE (Coat of Arms) ORANGE RIVER COLONY.
Notice under Article 6, Chapter 112, of the Law Book.

Application for a patent for "Improvements in Cigarette Cutting and Compressing Mechanism."

Be it hereby made known for general information that The British American Tobacco Company, of Cecil Chambers, 86 Strand, London, England, by occupation manufacturers, on the 10th day of August, 1905, deposited at my office an application for a Patent right for the above-mentioned invention, with accompanying description.

Whereas, now the said British American Tobacco Company, through their Attorney, John George Fraser, of Bloemfontein, has given me written notice that he desires to proceed with his application, I have decided that this application and all objections thereto, will be dealt with at my office on the 12th day of December, 1905, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

I therefore call upon all persons who are interested in opposing the issuing of Letters Patent for the above-mentioned invention to file at my office, before the day of hearing the same, a document explaining their objections, as they will otherwise be excluded from bringing them forward.

Given under my hand at Bloemfontein, this 12th day of August, 1905.
(Sd.) H. F. BLAINE, Attorney General.

A Boy That Failed to make progress at a noted New England academy entered the Groff School recently with several having had similar experiences at other large schools. They were all out into Yale and other large colleges the following September without a condition, one year ahead of their former classmates, and their present standing at college is very high. Mr. Groff's experience with these boys is typical of the success he has had for ten years.

THE GROFF SCHOOL,
228 West 72d St., New York, occupying the most handsome school quarters in New York, is ideal and exceptional as a boarding and day school.

No young and inexperienced teachers to experiment with students.

Absolutely individual attention, the number being strictly limited. No very young boys admitted in the main school. Separate department, with special advantages, for boys, 10-14 years old. Handsome study parlors, billiard room, electric elevator, and full and free use of skating rink, bowling alleys, fencing hall, gymnasium, swimming pool, athletic field, etc.

Proper and judicious supervision of the daily life of all students of the school, but all foolish school discipline, military drill, and consequent loss of time eliminated.

Reopens Sept. 28th.

Chinese Minister Talks of Details of the Canton-Hankow Transfer.

Sir Shen-tung Liang-Cheng, the Chinese Minister to the United States, accompanied by Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, visited the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday afternoon to settle details of the transfer of the Canton-Hankow Railroad to the Chinese Government. The operation is being attended to by that firm, which had a large interest in the road. The company's property and concessions were sold to China for about $7,000,000 and the first payment has been made.

The Minister reached Mr. Morgan's office just before the disturbance in Wall Street attained its height. He took pains to inquire what it was all about.

CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

Discussing the week's movement of currency, The Wall Street Journal says in its issue of to-day:

The reported movements of currency this week indicate a loss in cash held by the banks of $7,321,500. They received from the interior $2,835,299, and sent to the interior $10,564,700, of which there was transferred through the Sub-Treasury $500,000 to New Orleans, $300,000 to Cincinnati, $75,000 to St. Louis, and $1,533,000 National banknotes were sent to Washington for redemption. The loss to the interior was $6,729,500.

Receipts of new gold were $3,645,400, namely, $2,462,800 by importation, $928,000 on New York Assay Office checks, $16,300 on San Francisco Mint checks, $238,000 on Seattle Assay Office checks.

Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $19,320,600. Payments by banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption fund, &c., were $23,558,000. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $4,237,400. The total loss to the interior and Sub-Treasury was $10,966,900. Deducting the gain of new gold of $3,645,400 the net loss was $7,321,500.

Receipts from the interior were smaller than in any week since Sept. 8, and there was no indication in the reports by the banks of the millions that were said to have been sent here from Cleveland and Chicago on account of the Rockefeller $10,000,000 checks.

Shipments to the interior were the largest since the week ending Aug. 18, and a larger proportion of them went to the South than at any time since the beginning of the movement. The total shipments to the South were about $5,000,000, or nearly half the entire amount. The remainder was about equally divided between the West and nearby cities.

The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper is only about half as much as in the preceding week, showing a decrease in the transfers of internal revenue collections and payments into the 5 per cent. fund. There was also a falling off in customs collections, which were $3,955,900, comparing with $4,340,500 in the preceding week. Pension payments were light as usual at the beginning of the month, being $440,000 comparing with $976,000 in the preceding week.

The Sub-Treasury received from banks and sent to Washington for redemption $2,178,000 mutilated currency.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Rates, 3@7½ Per Cent.

Price Movement Largely Regulated by Money—Cotton Breaks Sharply.

Trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday was again governed by money conditions. Rates ruled firm between 6½ and 7½ per cent. during the greater part of the day, and the price movement as heretofore, was irregular, substantial declines preceding recoveries throughout the list, which still left the general level at the close below the position on Thursday. The most marked effect of the higher rates was again found in the contraction of business. Some sentim... tal effect was produced by the report o... an engagement of gold in Paris and b... the lending of small amounts of money ... 3 per cent. late in the day, after the ...ulk of the demand had been met at the h...ier rates. A loan of $100,000 at 1 per cent. was reported, but this was not ...taken very seriously, inasmuch as any ...ust company would probably be willin... to pay more than that interest for th... use of the money. An explanation of ... 3 per cent. rate lies in the willingne... of brokerage houses to put out unused ...portions of the money held by them on ...me loans and not needed to carry stock on light days. It was also understood ...that interior institutions were making ...m-porary use of funds here, attracte... by the high rates, but the insecure ch...ac-ter of such aid is evident.

There was little feature to the ...y's trading. Standard issues were dull ...nd lower generally, although New York ...en-tral gained a point on light trading, ...hile the extreme declines and advances ...ere largely confined to specialties. On ...all transactions Federal Mining and S...elt-ing dropped 5⅞ points, or about as ...ich as it netted in a recent abrupt u...rn, while Pullman Palace Car lost 4¾ p...ts, American Express 3 points, and Co...nsoli-dated Gas 2⅞ points. American Loc...omo-tive, in which there is an active spe...cula-tion, gained 2 points, and Chicag... and Northwestern 4 points.

Although gold arrivals have added ...er-haps $3,000,000 to the banks' holdin... in that time, the associated instit...ons have apparently lost cash heavily d...ing the week. Preliminary estimates o... this loss range from $5,000,000 to $7,0...00. Against the trifling loss of $99,000 ... the interior last week, the drain in the ...es-ent week is reckoned at not less ...an $4,000,000. Receipts from the In...ior were the highest of any week since ...pt. 8, and there were no indications o... the large amounts reported to have bee... ...or-warded to meet the $10,000,000 gi... for educational purposes. An inter... ...ing phase of the movement to the in...ior was the heavy outflow of funds t... the South, this amounting to half the ...tal shipments. This movement bids fa... to enlarge from this time on. Demand st...ing broke sharply during the day, refl...ing the high money rates, the break in c...on prices, and preparations undoubtedl... for further importations of gold from E...pe. The report on Thursday that the $...0,-000 gold taken from the Bank of F...nce was for the London market was y...er-day turned into a rumor that the ...tal was intended for this city, but this was not confirmed in London, Paris, or ...ew York. Further consideration of the ...ov-ernment report might well have b... a factor in the 30-point break in c...on. The present level of prices make... in-teresting the 11-cent minimum reso...ion of the Southern Association. Re...rk-able August earnings reports were ...ade by the Union Pacific and Southern Pa-cific, the Union Pacific returning a... in-crease of $946,000 in gross and of $4...000 in net earnings, and the Southern P...fic gains of $812,000 in gross and $386,... in net.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

In a tight money market Friday is usually the worst day of the week for borrowers of call funds, theoretically because loans arranged on Friday stand until the following Monday. The troublesome possibilities of yesterday's situation were somewhat increased by reason of the fact that several large Jewish banking houses will observe this coming Monday as a religious holiday. One of the largest Jewish houses in the Street served notice on its money market clients that it would transact no business on Monday, wherefore loans already standing must either be renewed elsewhere or carried over until next Tuesday. This particular house has recently been a large lender of money in the open market. Fear of a money flurry, therefore, was a restraint upon bullish activity in the stock market in the forenoon, and for want of professional support, more perhaps than for any other reason, prices declined moderately. Then the unexpected happened. Call money, which had ruled around 7 per cent., instead of becoming less accessible in the afternoon, became more plentiful, and as the money rate declined, prices recovered all around. Most of the day's loans were made at an average of about 7 per cent., but late in the afternoon, the demand for accommodations being then only nominal, money was offered down abruptly, and at 3 o'clock it was reported from the floor that one small loan had been made at the rate of 1 per cent.

There is certainly much room for the suspicion that manipulation has been practiced this week in the call money market. An incident was related in this column yesterday which could hardly bear any other interpretation than that the house concerned sought to establish a quotation for money on the strength of which it could demand to have some of its own loans marked down. Large Stock Exchange firms are frequently lenders of call money in the open market. It sometimes happens that they can find no other employment for a surplus of time money. An aggressive speculative house—one, for example, that is committed to a bullish position on the stock market—might wait until the day's demand had been practically satisfied and then lend small amounts of call money at an actual loss to break the rate and produce a sentimental market effect. It might even execute a "wash" loan purely for the purpose of establishing a quotation. In that case, of course, the quotation would be fictitious. Anybody may lend money. After a 7 per cent. rate or better for money nearly all day, a quotation of 1 per cent. in the last few minutes of yesterday's Stock Exchange session seemed ridiculous.

Opinions about money hitherto have differed, but they begin now to differ extremely. It is bewildering, for instance, to find both bulls and bears alleging that the call money market has been grossly manipulated this week—the bulls calling for an investigation to determine what unnatural influences have caused money to lend as high as 8 per cent., and the bears asserting that the last four or five weekly bank statements have been "doctored," and that certain powerful financial interests have been employing their resources desperately to keep money rates down. This conveys no exaggerated notion of the extremes of opinion.

The bull crowd in the stock market believes that the money pinch is over, and that funds will be more accessible to speculative borrowers next week.

If those who assert that the rates obtained for call money this week have been unnecessarily high are right in believing that money ought to be cheaper, what if money should become cheaper here than it is abroad? Would not the possibility of gold exports arise?

A writer in The Wall Street Journal has probably discovered that his English played him a curious trick when he wrote: "The Director or Trustee who in any way is false to his trust is no better than a common thief. We thank Mr. Simmons for speaking so plainly. As a common thief, he should be dealt with like the burglar or the pickpocket and sent to prison." The pronoun "he" refers, of course, to the Director or Trustee who in any way is false to his trust.

The mysterious solicitation for proxies on Colorado Fuel has attracted more attention, perhaps, than it really deserves. There is nothing like a contest for control. Although nobody will disclose the identity of the person in whose behalf the proxies are wanted, it is admitted that his interest in the property is of long standing. It is intimated, in fact, that he was formerly an active factor in its affairs. The proxies which people are being asked to sign for him are submitted in blank, so that even those whose support is requested do not know for sure who the person is. But it is really neither an anti-Gould movement nor an attempt to disturb the present control of the property. The stock has been very strong of late. The principal buying is said to have come from the office of Flower & Co. As a speculation, Colorado Fuel is extremely unpopular. It has a bad record. Nearly everybody who has gone into it extensively has lost money.

It is believed in some banking quarters that the companies have lent up to about their limit.

United States Rubber common, which was bulled recently to above 58 on plausible rumors that the stock would be placed immediately on a 4 per cent. dividend basis, broke sharply yesterday and sold at 52¾ because the Directors, at their meeting on Thursday, failed to give it a dividend. It is now admitted that the conservatives on the board were opposed all along to beginning dividends on the common stock at this time. It is also stated that the inside interests had nothing to do with the recent bull movement in the stock, which began around 47 and ran for more than 10 points. Perhaps there are persons who will be unable to understand how the stock could be bulled for more than 10 points by outsiders on rumors of a dividend if the insiders knew there would be no dividend and were opposed to the manipulation.

Undoubtedly the most prominent characteristic of the stock market's technical condition continues to be the absence of selling pressure on small price recessions. The selling that is done when the market turns weak comes almost entirely from bearish professionals, as they invariably discover to their own disgust and loss when they try to buy back what they have sold. No break of 1 or 2 per cent. appears to increase the floating supply of stocks. Traders sold the market cautiously yesterday morning, expecting to be able to buy on a break when call money should touch 10 per cent., or some such figure, and it was on their covering that prices rallied in the afternoon when the money rate began to break. As illustrating the scarcity of stocks, three transactions in Union Pacific may be cited. The stock had been heavy all day, perhaps a little heavier than other stocks, owing to the preference bear traders felt for selling it short. Then in the afternoon, when shorts were being covered, it was quoted in three successive transactions, thus: 400 shares at 132⅛, 500 shares at 132⅝, and 100 shares at 132¾. It sold a little later at 133 and closed at 132⅞. Other stocks rallied just as easily as Union Pacific did, notably Amalgamated Copper.

For several weeks Union Pacific has been fluctuating narrowly between 132 and 134. A great deal of stock has been traded in within this two-point range. It took a lot of buying to establish it above 132, more still to put it fairly above 133, and it was only by a very aggressive effort on the part of the bull crowd that it was put above 134. It has bulled very hard at these prices, and the question which cannot now be determined is whether the buying has been stronger than the selling. The bear element generally believes that stock has been distributed between 132 and 134 from original sources. Popular sentiment on Union Pacific is very bullish. This is due partly to the wonderful earnings that are being reported. If after all this trading between 132 and 134 the stock should break through the lower figures, say, to 131, the trader's inference would be that the selling of the last few weeks had been stronger than the buying.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The rates for money in the market here have thus far apparently been little affected by the release of Government dividends, and indications of reinvestments were absent.

The reports yesterday that the $4,500,000 in gold withdrawn from the Bank of France was destined for London are not confirmed, though there is much curiosity as to its destination, the Bank of England refusing information. The other London banks confess that they are unable to discover where the gold is going. There is nothing to indicate that it has left France, and it is believed that the bulk went into general circulation. Perhaps a small amount went to Berlin.

In the meanwhile, the situation in London is still strained, but it is believed that it would be relieved if the Bank of France's plethora were drawn on to supply the American and other demands.

In connection with the low ebb of the Bank of England's reserve there is much talk of an early advance in the Bank's rate of discount. It is said that this will only be delayed until the present rate is effective, which is now accomplished with a discount of 4 per cent. It is anticipated that the Bank's rate will be raised to 5 per cent. on Thursday next.

Trading on the Stock Exchange to-day was dull, the market being dominated by the monetary situation. The prospects that a new Russian loan will soon be advertised was a factor, and the approach of the settlement also checked operations. Consols and home rails were depressed.

Americans opened steady at about parity, rallied somewhat, and closed dull and irregular, in sympathy with the general tendency.

Foreigners were inactive. Japanese weakened, on the reported cost of the war.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1905 were quoted at 102¼.

Bullion amounting to £5,000 was taken into the Bank of England on balance today.

Bar silver steady at 28 7-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 27.62; Lisbon, 5.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Mob Gathered by a Newspaper Upsets the Curb.

Copper Stocks Rose—Chicago Subway Inactive—Bethlehem Steel and Interborough Stationary.

The curb brokers were considerably interfered with yesterday by the mob attracted by a newspaper's advertised search for a man who was to be in that neighborhood. For a while business was totally suspended, and the ropes around the brokers' pen were torn down by the crowds. The volume of sales was small, and there was almost no movement. Chicago Subway, of which 4,100 shares were sold, fell off ½ from Thursday's close. Two hundred shares of Northern Securities were sold between 188¾ and 189½, closing at the low figure. Bethlehem Steel sticks to the 30 mark, and Interborough seems unable to get far away from 213. Mercantile Marine preferred closed at 33⅝. Trading in the copper stocks was fairly heavy, and they all showed slight gains.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6.—The local money market did not reflect the fluctuations in New York, and a fair amount was available at 4½ per cent. Seaboard stocks were the most prominent issues in a rather slow market. The new common gained ¼ of a point, and the second preferred advanced ¼. Seaboard 4s were fairly active and steady. Outside of this group there was little trading. Prices, as a rule, advanced fractionally.

After the noon recess prices were steadier. Alabama Coal and Iron 5s sold 3 points higher. Maryland Trust, for control of which New York bankers and Baltimore bankers are contending, sold on the curb at $35 a share. In the conflicting interest there was considerable bidding for the stock.

The market closed dull, with a strong undertone. Shares, 2,425; bonds, $116,000.

REPUBLIC STEEL ELECTION.

Friction Denied, but the Retention of President Thompson in Doubt.

Harry Rubens, one of the members of the Republic Iron and Steel proxy committee, whose name was left off of the second proxy sent out by the majority of the committee, denied yesterday that there was friction in the company. He asserted that the two proxies would be used for identical purposes, and that it was a matter of indifference which proxy was signed by the stockholders.

"The coming election," he said, "will, I feel sure, be absolutely unanimous. There is no contest and no friction."

Asked why, under these conditions, two sets of proxies had been sent out, he said he did not know. Whether the election of Directors would result in retaining Alexis W. Thompson as President, Mr. Rubens also said he did not know. The election for Directors, he repeated, would be unanimous, but it was for the board to decide who should be President.

CALL MONEY DROPS TO 2.

Report in Wall Street of Large Shipments of Gold from France.

In the last hour of business yesterday, call money, which early in the day had loaned as high as 7¾ per cent., declined to 2¾. At the very close it was offered as low as 2 per cent. The generally accepted explanation of this sudden ease was the loaning of brokers' balances after the needs of the day had been supplied. One banker expressed the situation thus:

"Money was very cheap this afternoon, when no one wanted it. Offer money at 2¾ per cent. on Monday next and see how fast it is taken."

Fearing an even higher rate than 8 per cent., which was reached on Thursday, most borrowers attended to their requirements early in the day. By 2 o'clock practically every one who needed money had got it. In some cases more was borrowed than was actually required, and part of this surplus was loaned in the afternoon at whatever rate could be had. The decline, of course, was not free from the suspicion that it was brought about for effect. This view was the more readily accepted because the estimates of the currency movements of the week again indicated a heavy loss of cash by the banks.

Several dispatches from London and other cities in Europe, telling of the taking of large amounts of gold for New York, were published in Wall Street yesterday. It was said that from $4,400,000 to $5,000,000 had been procured from the Bank of France for shipment to New York. Houses in close relation with the Paris market denied all knowledge of any such transaction. Other houses supplemented this by the further statement that it was not possible, except at a loss, to bring gold from Paris at yesterday's rates of exchange. Demand sterling eased off yesterday about 10 points to 4.8515.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—Local transactions did not represent more than the movements of the professional element, which was bearishly inclined. Prices were heavy, but without any important declines. The arbitrage stocks followed New York's lead, which was downward. Sentiment was bearish, owing to the intimation that local call loan rates would be advanced to 5 per cent. next Monday.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 6.—The local money market is firm and there has been some marking up of call loans. The usual table follows:

Call loans, 5@5½ per cent.; time loans on collateral, 4½@5 per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 4¾@5 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 4 per cent.; New York funds, 10c discount; clearings, $30,158,706; balances, $1,129,136; Sub-Treasury debit, $80,144.

After a rather quiet opening the local market soon gained in strength and activity. The low-priced issues were especially in demand, Rhode Island advancing to 8⅞. Franklin advanced 2 points on confirmation of discovery of Kearsarge lode. Boston Consolidated was active and strong, over 3,000 shares changing hands at 9½ in the first hour. Arcadian advanced to 5¼. North Butte was well bought, gaining a good part of the loss recorded yesterday. Closing firm. Complete list of transactions follows:

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Further progress was made with advancing tendencies yesterday, and after a strong session wheat closed ⅝ to ¾c net higher and about top for the day. The market started out about half a cent above the previous night, influenced by an advance of ⅜d to ½d at Liverpool and continued advancing slowly throughout the day, showing few and unimportant reactions. There was some complaint from bulls about Northwest receipts which were not up to the recent average, although bears predicted that Minneapolis would yet have the heaviest movement on the crop while Duluth claimed receipts would be 35 per cent. larger if cars were obtainable. The Southwest movement was light and wire houses had reports of too much dry weather in Winter wheat States. Some increase of commission house buying was noted, giving the market a broader look than it has had in some time. While bull support was in evidence off and on during the day, it was understood that on the hard spots they supplied the crowd with a little wheat in order to put themselves in a better position for supporting it again on any weak turn. The Paris market closed unchanged to five points lower, Berlin was ¼ mark higher, and Budapest eight points higher. The interior movement proved to be slightly ahead of last year. There was no export business in American wheat reported, but Winnipeg noted a sale of 400,000 bushels to be shipped via Montreal. Broomhall reported that rain was still needed in several districts in India, and that Russian shipments would probably continue large for the next two or three weeks. The cash market at New York was firm, with options, closing as follows: No. 2 red, 88⅝c elevator and 89⅝c free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 90⅞c., and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, 91⅝c free on board afloat.

CORN.—Getting a start of ¼c to ⅜c at the opening, corn maintained its position all day with a fair trade at the West and a moderate one here, closing ⅜c to ⅝c net higher. The weather continued perfect, but interior receipts were not excessive, cables closed ¼d to ⅜d net higher, and there was further bull support of May corn at the West. Cash demand for domestic account continued liberal, but there was not much inquiry for export, sales only amounting to a couple of loads. No. 2 corn closed 59c elevator and 60c free on board; No. 2 white, 61c, and No. 2 yellow 61c., free on board afloat.

OATS.—The market for oats was also stronger, getting help from export sales of 250,000 bushels, besides sharing advances in other markets. Cash oats locally were steady, with mixed 26 to 32 lb, 32@33c; natural white, 30 to 32 lb, 32½@33½c, and clipped white, 36 to 40 lb, 35@36c.

COTTON.—The cotton market was active and weak under heavy liquidation and bear pressure. The close was a little up from the lowest, but was barely steady in tone at a net decline of 25@30 points, and New Orleans continued very weak after the close of the local market. Sales for the day here were estimated at fully 650,000 bales. The opening was weak at a decline of 9@12 points under a renewal of liquidation and bear pressure, which was inspired not only by lower cables and good weather over the South, but by fears that Southern holders would weaken. A Southwestern authority, who was prominently identified with the successful holding movement of last Winter, is reported to the effect that the crop was from 25 to 33 per cent. over recent estimates, and advising his friends to sell as rapidly as possible, and while it is understood that this gentleman is no longer an officer of the association, it was felt among local operators that his utterances indicated a lack of unanimity among growers, which might become a source of weakness later on. There were rumors of liquidation by important Wall Street longs, and with barely a reaction, the market continued to decline until in the early afternoon prices were about 29@33 points net lower, October being particularly weak under talk of notices and reports of additions to the local stock, which is now working up toward the 200,000-bale mark. Toward the close covering by shorts for over the week end helped the market slightly, but there was no material improvement and sentiment remained bearish. Southern spot markets were generally 1/16@¼c lower. The President of the Southern Cotton Association was quoted to the effect that farmers would not sell at present prices, and that they were well entrenched for a fight.

COFFEE.—The coffee market was more active and generally firmer, a better demand being inspired by bullish estimates of the current crop and unfavorable report concerning the prospects for the next yield, which was said to be showing the need of rain. The opening was without special feature, unchanged to 5 points higher on one position, but demand became more active later in the session as the bullish news from Brazil was distributed, and the market closed firm at a net advance of from 5 to 15 points. Sales were reported of about 57,000 bags. There were cables in from both Rio and Santos. The former stated that the crop of Brazilian would scarcely reach previous low estimates, which was taken to mean a crop of under 10,000,000 bags, and the news from Santos not only estimated a moderate crop, placing the Santos yield at 6,500,000 bags, but stated that owing to drought the outlook for the coming crop was not so promising. The European markets were steady, without being particularly firm. Havre was ¼ to ½ franc higher, and Hamburg was a partial ¼ pfennig higher. The rate of Brazilian exchange was advanced 1-32 and the Rio market was 100 reis lower, with Santos unchanged. Receipts were moderately full as compared with last year. The two ports had 64,000 bags, against 51,000 last year. Sao Paulo receipts for the day were 44,000 bags, against 40,900 last year.

The market for spot coffee was steady, with quotations on the basis of 8¾c for Rio No. 7.

ADVERTISING RIOTS TIE UP WALL STREET

Sub-Treasury Shuts Its Doors to Bar a "Raffles" Mob.

MANY BEATEN BY HOODLUMS

Bullion Carriers Kept In — Police Jeered At—Arrest The American's Employe, McAdoo Orders.

All business in Wall Street and its vicinity was suspended for two hours yesterday on account of riots resulting from the alleged appearance there of "Raffles," the man for whose recognition The New York American offered a reward.

For an hour before and after noon Broad, Wall, and Nassau Streets were packed with a crowd estimated at from 10,000 to 15,000 persons. Everybody was inclined to be riotous, and many persons were injured before the arrival of police from five precincts and a mounted squad from Broadway. In the crush Curtis Moffatt of Dick Brothers, 30 Broad Street, was robbed of a gold watch valued at $200.

Between the noon hour and 1 o'clock Acting Assistant United States Treasurer Mallory found it necessary to suspend business in the Sub-Treasury and close the doors, owing to the rushes which were made from time to time up the steps in pursuit of persons mistaken for "Raffles."

At the same time brokers and bankers found it impossible to trust messengers carrying checks, bullion, and securities on the streets, owing to the roughness of the crowd. Many protests were sent to Police Headquarters by telephone. The chief complaint was that the mass of people and the confusion in the financial district presented great opportunities for robbery.

The trouble began early in the day. It was announced yesterday morning by the newspaper employing the man known as "Raffles" that he would give brokers a chance to make easy money by circling around the "curb market" between 12 and 1 o'clock, the first to recognize him from his published portraits to receive a sum of money. Before 10 o'clock, however, every office boy in the financial district, besides a lot of park loafers who have made a practice of following the movements of this "Raffles" every day, were gathered in knots along the curb.

By 11:30 Broad Street was black with the crowd which, centring in front of the Sub-Treasury and J. Pierpont Morgan's offices, extended up and down Wall Street and along Nassau, completely blocking traffic. The police of Old Slip Station were quite unable to handle the mob, and the reserves were called out. They came with Capt. Farrell.

Meanwhile the crowd had become malicious. No one was particularly sure what "Raffles" was like, except in so far as certain salient features of him had been printed in his employer's newspaper. As a result many persons bearing a fancied resemblance to "Raffles" were seized and questioned as to their identity. Several who denied the impeachment were struck.

Just before the reserves arrived from Old Slip a gang of hoodlums sprang up from somewhere and appeared in different parts of Broad and Wall Streets. These men had neither the appearance nor accent of any gang south of Chatham Square. They kept the turbulence going by sighting a "Raffles" at every turn. Every once in a while, when there was a lull, one of the troublemakers rushed up to some young man and, knocking him down, shouted:

"Here he is, boys!"

The rest of the hoodlums then closed in and mauled the victim. The crowd swooped down to catch a glimpse of the supposed "Raffles." Then there was fighting, cursing, and yelling for a share of the reward promised to the man who identified "Raffles." By and by the victim, probably some clerk returning from his luncheon, emerged from the centre of the mob without his hat, with his face cut and bleeding, and his clothes in tatters.

Into this disturbance went Capt. Farrell and his men. The regular men on post were standing in doorways, helplessly swinging their sticks. The arrival of the reserves with the Captain made not the slightest difference to the mob. The police were jeered at. The crowd in some cases even went so far as to ask a uniformed man if he was "Raffles," then jostled him about and shouted:

"Come on to The American office."

At about 12:20 P. M. the situation got beyond the police. A young man had been struck down in front of the offices of Henry Clews & Co., in Broad Street. The east side gang was on top of him, and the vast crowd was bearing down upon the new "Raffles," when Manager Starr rushed out of the Clews office and cried to a policeman, who was helplessly standing by:

"Why don't you telephone Police Headquarters for more men? This is terrible."

"You got as much right to do it as I have," was the reply.

Capt. Farrell, however, seeing the young man who had been struck down escape through the crowd with blood streaming from his face and his clothes hanging from his back, notified Headquarters that a riot was on.

Commissioner McAdoo ordered out the reserves of all the stations below Fourteenth Street and a squad of fifteen mounted policemen from Broadway. The horsemen began to charge into the crowd in a few minutes, and soon patrol wagons rattled into the financial district from all directions.

For half an hour the reserves and mounted police had their hands full. It was, perhaps, only the arrival of the hour when "Raffles" was supposed to leave the district that brought the rioting to an end.

Between 12:30 and 1 o'clock, however, the brokers and their clerks, at the upper windows of the buildings, poured water upon the crowd below in vain efforts to scatter the mob. Office boys in the upper stories of the Broad Exchange Building filled their paper lunch bags with water, tied them, and dropped them to the street, where they burst.

In front of Mr. Morgan's offices the crowd insulted old men and women with impunity, crying: "Hullo, Mrs. Raffles! Tell us where your hubby is." Or, in the case of old men: "Here's old man Raffles. I wonder will he do?" One man who wore a frock coat and silk hat was thrown into the gutter and beaten.

Then a man was sighted ascending the steps to the Sub-Treasury. Being pursued, he ran inside. Thousands tried to follow. Cashier George W. Marlor, who is acting assistant in the absence of Assistant United States Treasurer Hamilton Fish, immediately ordered the great doors to be closed. While this was being done two other rushes were made, and it was only with great difficulty that the mob was kept out. When the rioting had been suppressed at 1:15, and only the crowds remained, business was resumed, but only one door of the Sub-Treasury was kept open.

The doors of the Morgan firm's offices were also closed for some time. After 1 o'clock, however, it was considered that all danger was past. Then the wheels of finance began to move again, but warily. Few messengers appeared on the streets before 4 o'clock. The police remained until closing time.

Similar turbulence, although not so severe, occurred in Times Square a few days ago in connection with The American's "Raffles" scheme. Dozens were set upon and badly handled by the crowd that sought "Raffles." Several "Raffles" disturbances have also occurred elsewhere.

Commissioner McAdoo issued orders yesterday that the person known as "Raffles" be arrested, if found.

STAY IN MATHEWS CASE.

Counsel Springs a Surprise by Asking for a Change of Venue.

The trial of Armitage Mathews on a charge of conspiring to rob the Welsell estate, about to begin before Justice Davy in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, was unexpectedly interrupted yesterday morning by an order for a stay granted by Justice Maddox in Brooklyn to Terence McManus, one of the counsel for the defendant. The District Attorney and his chief assistant, Mr. Rand, knew nothing of this move until the notice of the order was served on them.

As originally issued by Justice Maddox, the order provided for a stay until Oct. 16, the District Attorney being cited to appear on that day in Special Term, Part 1., of the Supreme Court, to show cause why a change of venue should not be granted to Mathews on the ground that prejudice had been created against him in this county by the publication of newspaper articles and by the fact that he was prominently connected with a political organization. Mathews is the Secretary of the Republican County Committee. Mr. Jerome and Mr. Rand appeared before Justice Maddox yesterday afternoon and got the argument on the change of venue set for next Tuesday in spite of the efforts of Mathews's counsel to postpone it beyond that date.

The trial of Mathews was to have begun on Thursday. Lawyer McManus got a day's adjournment on the excuse that the principal counsel, W. M. K. Olcott, was busy with another trial. Yesterday, when the case was called, Mr. Rand said:

"Apparently counsel for the other side made excellent use of the adjournment granted yesterday. In getting the stay, I am sure he did not tell Justice Maddox that your Honor's reason for granting the adjournment was only that counsel was too busy to appear yesterday."

Mr. McManus said the defendant had been fully within his rights in applying for the change of venue. Justice Davy asked him to consent to an adjournment to Monday. Mr. McManus replied that he could not go beyond the order of Justice Maddox.

"Oh, we will not show any disrespect for Justice Maddox in this court," rejoined Justice Davy, "but we'll adjourn this case till Monday just the same."

CITY BUYS BRIDGE WIRES.

Will Operate Its Own Lighting Plant on the Williamsburg Structure.

Chief Engineer Nichols of the Bridge Department announced yesterday that arrangements had been made with the lighting companies to purchase the wires and paraphernalia of the companies on the Williamsburg Bridge, so that they would not be removed when the city starts to operate its own lighting plant under the bridge. This plant, which will have a capacity of 400-horse power, will be ready for use soon. It will cost the city $100,000.

The wires now strung will cost the city $4,666, and it would cost much more to wire the bridge again. The lighting plant under the bridge will be run by the burning of refuse contributed by the Street Cleaning Department.

INDICTED FOR BOND THEFT.

Forgery the Charge Against Leonard, Who Took $360,000.

An indictment for forgery in the second degree was found by the Grand Jury yesterday against Henry A. Leonard, the bank messenger who provided an object lesson to banking institutions by stealing $360,000 worth of securities from the City National Bank by means of a forged check. Leonard may also be indicted for grand larceny.

Leonard is still in the Tombs, having failed to get bail, although the amount demanded by the court had been reduced from $25,000 to $10,000. He probably will be arraigned before Judge Newburger in the General Sessions to-day.

TOLD DETECTIVE'S FORTUNE.

You'll Take a Dark Haired Woman to Court, She Said, and He Did.

Police Captain Becker of the Hamburg Avenue Station, Williamsburg, has started on a crusade against fortune tellers. He had Mrs. Sarah Kleinstein of 50 Bremen Street in the Manhattan Avenue Court yesterday on a warrant charging her with obtaining money under false pretenses from Policeman Buckheit. Buckheit, in plain clothes, went to the home of Mrs. Kleinstein on Thursday morning to get evidence against her. He told her that his wife had left him and that he desired information about her.

Mrs. Kleinstein told him that his wife would come back, but he was advised when she did, not to be so kind to her as he had been.

Buckheit got out a warrant for the woman, and Detective Gassman was sent to arrest her. He also asked to have his fortune told. Mrs. Kleinstein began by telling him he was going to take a dark-haired woman to court.

"You are quite right," said the detective, "and you are the woman."

Mrs. Kleinstein almost fainted.

SUES ROUSS'S ESTATE.

Woman He Ran Away with Wants $39,000 on a Contract.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cowen, the last woman to appear with a claim against the estate of Charles Broadway Rouss, was in the Supreme Court yesterday at the opening of the trial of her suit against the estate of the eccentric merchant. Mrs. Cowen alleges that in 1892 Rouss made an agreement to pay her $50 a week until he had paid her $50,000. She says he owed her $39,250 at the time of his death.

According to her complaint she was but sixteen years old when she met Rouss. Then, she alleges, she ran away with him to Niagara Falls, and there was a bogus marriage. Later she learned that he was already married.

FOOTPRINTS LEAD TO THIEF.

So Many Police Photographs of Hyer That More Were Needless.

Louis Hyer, who has a Sing Sing record of eighteen years, is again in custody, charged with burglary. Hyer was arrested yesterday, and money taken from the apartments of Henry Schwenn, a grocer at Jackson Avenue and Skillman Street, Long Island City, was found on him.

The burglar entered the Schwenn apartments by breaking through the rear window on Thursday night. Something alarmed the burglar before he completed his work, and in his haste to escape he left his hat. The hat and the prints of feet in the soft ground under the window were the clues which led to his arrest.

Hyer was held for examination and taken to Brooklyn to be photographed. So many photographs of him were found that a new sitting was considered unnecessary.

MUNICIPAL FERRY OCT. 25.

Appropriate Ceremonies to Mark the Opening of Staten Island Service.

The municipality owned and operated Staten Island ferry service will be begun on Oct. 25, with appropriate ceremonies.

On that day the five boats of the ferry fleet will be put into commission. Each of the five is named after one of the city boroughs. The Manhattan will start the service, leaving the Whitehall Street slip in the afternoon, with Mayor McClellan and other city officials on board. The other boats of the ferry fleet will act as escort to the Manhattan on the first trip to Staten Island. Ceremonies will be held on the island, with speeches by Mayor McClellan, Borough President Cromwell, and Dock Commissioner Featherson.

RAID WITNESSES DODGE MR. M'ADOO'S HEARING

Chief Complainant Flam Denies He Was Paid to Stay Away.

SAYS HE WASN'T INVITED

And, of Course, the Bon Ton Members Wouldn't Go Without Him—The Inquiry Goes Over.

The public hearing at Police Headquarters on the charges brought against Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley of the West Thirtieth Street Station, in connection with the raid on the Bon Ton Social Club, in West Thirty-first Street, did not go on yesterday because none of the complaining witnesses appeared. The case went over until Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Soon after the Commissioner had announced his intention of investigating the conduct of Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley, Solomon Flam, who keeps a tailor shop in the basement of the building where are the quarters of the raided club, wrote a letter to Mr. McAdoo declaring that he could produce at least twenty witnesses who had seen the alleged ruthless destruction of property and had themselves been clubbed by the police. The Commissioner depended chiefly upon these witnesses to make out a case and sent letters to them through the tailor.

Mr. Flam, when seen early last evening in his little tailor's shop, was surrounded by an angry mob of colored men who had come from the Bon Ton Club quarters upstairs. There was plenty of loud talking in the tailor's shop.

Asked what the demonstration meant, Flam said the members of the club had stayed away from the hearing because he himself had not been invited to attend.

"Isn't that so; weren't you all anxious to go?" asked Flam, turning to his dusky audience.

"That's dead right, boss," spoke up one in the crowd. "But without Flam we are like sheep without a shepherd. He is our leader. We were going just to corroborate him."

"The fact is," broke in Flam, "that they believe I have been paid for staying away. They are giving me fits now for not dividing up with them."

Again Flam appealed to his audience. Out of the twenty or more one man spoke up and said that it was true—every word.

"But I haven't been paid to stay away, nor has anybody asked me to. All I am waiting for is an invitation to attend," said the tailor.

The hearing did not begin until 4 o'clock, —an hour after scheduled time. With the Commissioner on the Judges' rostrum sat H. H. McClure of the Citizens' Committee and Inspector Cortright. Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley were there in full uniform, and the room was full of policemen and other witnesses for the accused men. Conspicuous in the audience was Supt. McClintock of the Parkhurst Society.

After the hearing had been adjourned Commissioner McAdoo announced that if no witnesses appeared on Monday against Schmittberger and Dooley, he would examine them, and the men who took part in the raid, basing the investigation on newspaper reports.

The inspector, it is said, has attached to his report on the raid affidavits showing that just before the raid occurred poolselling was going on on the second and third floors, and that there was a crap game in full blast on the parlor floor.

SAW FIRE IN NICK OF TIME.

Gas Explosion Narrowly Averted in a Tenement Blaze.

The prompt discovery of a fire early yesterday morning in the cellar of a five-story tenement house at 242 McKibbin Street, Williamsburg, prevented an explosion of gas. A man who was passing the building saw the fire through the cellar grating. It was directly under a large gas meter. After arousing the tenants, the man ran to the headquarters of Hook and Ladder Company No. 58 and gave the alarm.

Before the firemen reached the house the tenants had become panic-stricken and made a wild rush for the street. When the firemen entered the cellar with a line of hose they found the flames all around the gas meter. In a few minutes there would have been an explosion. The firemen declared that the blaze was of incendiary origin.

Small Blaze on Brooklyn Bridge.

A bundle of newspapers which had fallen from a bridge train en route from Manhattan to Brooklyn yesterday afternoon caught fire from the third rail on the Brooklyn Bridge, about midway between the towers. The bundle was blazing when Roundsman Quinn saw it and leaped from a trolley car and flagged an oncoming train. Quinn scattered the burning papers and the passengers cheered him.

Preferred Death to Suffering.

Rather than die a lingering death by consumption, John Kearn of 52 Grant Street, Corona, attempted suicide by shooting at his home yesterday. Kearn is 33 years old. He is now held as a prisoner in St. John's Hospital, in Long Island City. There is little chance of his recovery.

Kearn was told by his family physician a few days ago that he had consumption and that he would not live long. From that time he grew despondent.

Estimates for the Courts.

Estimates for the running of the various courts for 1906 were submitted to the Board of Estimate yesterday, to be included in the annual budget. Practically all of the funds asked for are for salaries. The Supreme Court asks for $6,000 less than was allowed last year, and the Court of Special Sessions wants $16,200 more. Magistrate Wahle asked for $3,400 for additional interpreters in the Police Courts. Surrogate Church wants an increase of $10,000.

ART AND SCIENCE.

An Untechnical Glance at Dr. Austin Flint's New "Handbook of Physiology."

WE do not undertake to comment on technical scientific works, especially those designed for use in instruction in professional schools. Such comment would necessarily take us into a field too wide and varied and demanding for its proper treatment more "expert" writing than the general reader would find interesting. But there is a feature of Dr. Austin Flint's "Handbook of Physiology," just brought out by the Macmillan Company, which is of distinctly general interest and to which attention may properly be called. It is the successful use of the three-color process in reproducing, at moderate cost, the appearance of physiologic objects under the microscope.

The printing from ordinary process plates of colored drawings or lithographs at what may be called "commercial" rates, enabling the resulting representations to be used to advantage in publications of reasonable cost, though relatively new, is well enough understood and quite frequently employed. The reproduction in black and white of microscopic objects is still older and more familiar. And the reproduction of such objects by the three-color process had also been accomplished some ten years since, but at a cost quite prohibitory for ordinary textbooks. But we believe that Dr. Flint's illustrations in color, which are quite numerous, are the first which reproduce with almost perfect accuracy as to form and color the exact appearance of microscopic objects.

THIS achievement, in the first place, adds very greatly to the beauty of the illustrations and to the ease and certainty with which they can be studied. But they have, in such works as his, a peculiar value due to the fact that the histological elements are often differentiated by their affinities for various dyes, and can be recognized in stained preparations only. The colors disclosed by prepared objects do not, therefore, aid simply in the ready recognition of the elements, they reveal at a glance the actual character of each element and render it impossible to confuse it with another. Even the general reader can see in this something of the advantage of the process of representative colors used; for example, in the valuable atlases of the Census Bureau, which give immediate and emphatic impressions of truth based on a mass of statistics, and difficult fully to grasp by the most careful study. The difficulties encountered in the effort to master the complete revelations of the microscope when presented solely in black and white are, of course, almost incalculably greater. The method attained after long experimentation by Dr. Flint, with the aid of Dr. Edward Leaming, Instructor in Photography in Columbia University, who produced the negatives through accurate color filters, practically removes these difficulties.

IT is not in the preparation of textbooks like the "Handbook of Physiology" only that this development of photomicrography will prove of signal value. It opens a very large part of the general field of study by means of the microscope to a vast number of students. We happen to know, for instance, of original work in the microscopic study of bacteriology of substantial value, the results of which in papers illustrated with approximate accuracy from colored drawings made by the investigator could only be published at a cost almost prohibitory. With the improved method the publication of such results can be made at very small cost, with illustrations reproduced directly from photomicrographs and almost completely accurate as to color as well as form. It is a change equivalent to the substitution in historical research, or in litigation, of original documents for more or less imperfect copies.

Since Dr. Flint's "Handbook" is the occasion for this article, we cannot leave it without a word of recognition for the extraordinarily lucid style which this veteran professor—with nearly a half century of teaching now to his credit—has achieved. It might well be the envy if not the despair of professional writers.

ONE OF THE FOUNDERS.

TUDOR JENKS, in his "Captain Myles Standish," (Century Company,) has given an interesting account of what he calls an "unexplained figure" among the founders of New England—unexplained because, though a true comrade of the Mayflower brethren, Myles Standish was not of their Church nor a participant in their religious views, and left a life of professional soldiering to accompany them, yet was revered and beloved. The method the author of this book has followed is like that of his other book on John Smith. It is intended, perhaps, more for youthful than for mature readers, although we imagine that it will interest these as well. The story of Myles Standish involves, of course, that of the Pilgrims in their adventures in America, a little of their experiences in Holland, a little of the conditions of Elizabethan England. Indeed, this chronicle is more of them than of him, and is practically a history of the Plymouth settlement.

The story of the Pilgrims' landing and their earlier struggles is one that few could make dull; Mr. Jenks has made it extremely entertaining. It is a story that contains naught about the stern and rock-bound coast, constant dread of hostile Indians, or the survival of the first Winter by the miserable remnant of a terror-stricken band. The Pilgrims were fortunate in their landing, wise and friendly and firm in their treatment of the Indians; and instead of experiencing the exceptionally severe Winter that the romancers have imagined, experienced a rather mild one. The later complications that arose were indeed serious, and involved many questions of policy and decisive actions in which Standish took a leading part. Yet the story is rather one of successful and bold procedure than of suffering and failure in any respect. Mr. Jenks contrasts it significantly with that of the Jamestown settlement.

He takes occasion to consider the sentimental tradition that Longfellow has erected into literature in "The Courtship of Myles Standish." It is no more than a tradition, and it may be true; but, as is pointed out, it is not likely that Capt. Standish would have sent Alden to do his courting for him, being not a bashful youth, but a widower. Nor is the picture of men and manners in Plymouth that Longfellow drew at all true to the facts of history, and it has done much to spread wrong ideas about them. It is to be observed that Standish sent for the sister of his first wife to come over from England to marry him not less than a year before Priscilla Mullins's marriage.

KIPPS AND OTHERS.

Entertaining Personages in the New Novels of the Autumn—The Sequel to "She" and "The Gambler."

THE new book by H. G. Wells, called "Kipps: The Story of a Simple Soul," (Scribners,) deals with no formidable problems touching the future of man, involves no majestic sweep of the imagination into the mysteries of the thousandth century, is bred of no fantastic dreams. It reveals anew, and strikingly, the author's humorous gift, of which he seemed all but bereft when he wrote some of his wildly fanciful tales, such as "The Sleeper Awakened," and if it is not altogether free from the "sociological" arguments of "Mankind in the Making" and "A Modern Utopia"—Mr. Wells without the least touch of "sociology" would not be Mr. Wells at all—yet that is all effectually subordinated to a story—a good story well told.

On the two hundred and third page of this book, when the story has reached the thickest of its plot, Mr. Wells has occasion to describe, in his pleasingly ironical way, the library of a well-set-up young middle-class gentleman, living at Folkstone, in Kent, a library containing some obvious books and some unaccountable ones, some good books and much rubbish—"in fact a compendium of the contemporary British mind." In this library are the "hundred best books," including "Samuel Warren's 'Ten Thousand a Year.'"

Now, the single one of the "hundred best books" mentioned might as well have been "David Copperfield" or "Pilgrim's Progress" or any one of the ninety-seven others. But here is Mr. Wells's clever hit at the critical reader, on whom the facts have just dawned that Artie Kipps is a revivification of Tittlebat Titmouse, placed in a modern environment, studied from a new point of view, and that the tale called "Kipps" is Mr. Wells's own "Ten Thousand a Year"—"twelve 'underd a year" is the exact figure, and enough for the purpose, too.

Mr. Wells's own beloved Kent is the scene of most of the story, from Dover clear up to Hastings, with much of moment happening in Folkestone, in Hythe, New Romney, Littlestone, and Dymchurch. There are glimpses of London, too, and it is at the Crystal Palace, in Sydenham, that Artie and his sweetheart are sitting near the huge effigies of extinct monsters, when the following brief dialogue ensues:

"I wonder 'ow all these old antediluvian animals got extinct," he asked. "No one couldn't possibly 'ave killed 'em."

"Why! I know that," said Ann. "They was overtook by the Flood."

Kipps meditated for a while. "But thought they had to take two of everything there was—"

"Within reason they 'ad," said Ann.

"Kipps," as we have said, is a humorous story, but it is not a trifling one, and though it deals largely with humble folk, it has to do, in a broad and forceful way, with much of the seriousness of life. Mr. Wells is a writer of large resource. His fund of information is almost as wonderful as Balzac's. What a lot he knows, for instance, of the ins and outs of retail trade, and the hangers-on of the theatre; of the house agency business, and the ways of inferior architects? How admirably true, (and with the dignity of humanity,) are his portrayals of servants. We confess that we do not quite understand Miss Helen Walshingham, but her uncle, Buggins, Sid Pornick, Ann, Chitterlow, and the consumptive Socialist; Masterman are all excellent.

A SEQUEL TO "SHE."

WE paid courteous attention to Mr. Rider Haggard's sequel to his famous "She" from time to time during its serial publication. In book form, however, "Ayesha" (Doubleday, Page & Co.) is entitled to fresh consideration. The sequel is dedicated, as the original was, to Andrew Lang, and there is a short "author's note" in which Mr. Haggard announces that "this conclusion of an imaginative tragedy" he has always desired to write "should be be destined to live through those many years which, in obedience to his original design, must be allowed to lapse between the events of the first and second part of the romance." There is surely something occult in this declaration. Dumas did not have to live twenty years after "Les Trois Mousquetaires" before he could write "Vingt Ans Après." The name of Ayesha, Mr. Haggard informs us, should be pronounced "Assha."

No doubt, allowing for the disillusionment of years, this sequel is as well-wrought as its original. Probably it is even superior geographically, ethnologically, theologically, and pyrotechnically. Mr. Haggard has gained greatly in stature since he wrote "She," and the world of novel readers has grown a trifle wiser as to the Orient and its religious mysteries.

The sheer audacity, the youthful imaginative recklessness of "She," however, counted for much. The mystic rites, the spectacular displays, the grisly horrors of the sequel are all more carefully worked up, doubtless, but we who read the original when it was a new book (half apologetically, of course) and felt its charm, can hardly be expected to be equally satisfied with any sequel. Happily, Ayesha has vanished now forever, along with her Leo Vincy and her mad Holly, and her mystic retinue. The pleasantest remembrances of her latest incarnation centre around Kon-an, the wise, philosophical monk of Buddha, a good mind in a comfortable body.

"THE SOCIAL SECRETARY."

THE amazing heroine of Mr. David Graham Phillips's new story, "The Social Secretary," (Bobbs-Merrill Company,) tells her own story. She is a charming young woman of birth and breeding, who has fallen upon evil days—or what in her set are esteemed evil. How she not only introduces "Ma" and "Pa" Burke (a Western millionaire-Senator and his wife) into Washington society, but makes of them the most brilliant successes of the season; the verge of destruction. To play for a stake, this was the Asshlin passion; to hold a debt of honor a sacred thing, this an Asshlin did, though he neglected every other obligation on earth. And these two racial instincts conspired, but failed, to make utter ruin of a brilliant and loyal young life.

The character of Clodagh is wholly original and is consistently worked out; Nance, the devoted sister and final rescuer is an excellent foil—the one her father's, the other her mother's child. The men are less interesting, but fill their rôles sufficiently well, and the reader is led from situation to situation with an unflagging eagerness to know "What next."

The author knows Ireland and the Irish, and treads firmly upon the soil. She knows the Continent, too, but she does not overdo either her scenery or her minor characters. All fall into their proper place in the intense human drama.

If we say that a little compression would have improved the book, we are perhaps looking at it more from the point of view of the full-fed professional novel reader than of the general public, who will not be likely to quarrel with the goodly number of such ennui-destroying pages. "The Gambler" deserves a wider and a more enthusiastic circle of readers than "The Masquerader." Whether or not it achieves a like popularity, Mrs. Thurston will have the satisfaction of knowing that she has made a distinct advance in the quality of her work.

PATHOLOGICAL.

WHETHER "The Lost Viol," by M. P. Shiel, (Edward J. Clode,) is a satire or a serious work is a question which a prudent man might hesitate to answer. At all events it is an exceedingly curious document. By the terms of it there is a fat and dull and selfish young violinist who inspires grand passions in three women. One woman is pretty and French and has "a good heart," but no particular strength of character. Another is a bouncing English girl—a girl almost indecently healthy and energetic and training, a good woman by instinct, and a comely one by nature, sails through the story with an easy amiability calculated to point a moral to those of her readers whose lives are cast in more pleasant lines and who yet have a habit of grumbling over their lots. The wedding came about through Patty. Patty was her daughter, a younger edition of Mrs. Larkins's own good-humored self, and a pretty girl to boot. It was small wonder that Mr. Brindle, three times a widower, let his eyes rest admiringly and covetously on Patty's pretty form; and since Mr. Brindle was really an admirable farmer whose only fault was his age as compared to Patty's, Mrs. Larkins felt it her duty to help the wedding along.

The main thread of the story runs through a humorous description of Mrs. Larkins's fond ambitions for her daughter's wedding, her grotesque preparations, which the good people of Happyville (whose clothes Mrs. Larkins conscientiously washed) gently frustrated, substituting in their place, unknown both to Patty and her mother, more tasteful plans. But the coup d'état of the story occurs in church, when suddenly Mrs. Larkins saw young Charlie Baxter slipping the ring on Patty's slim finger. "Sakes alive!" cried Mrs. Larkins, "I knew they'd get things mixed. * * * The preacher's joining her to the wrong feller. 'Tain't right to let such a mix-up pass by." But it developed that they all knew quite well what they wanted, as was later shown by Mr. Brindle giving the bride away, so that he might himself lead the dazed Mrs. Larkins to the altar, in spite of his previous announcement that he didn't want any more "widders," the three preceding Mrs. Brindles all having had that fault.

ARTHUR S. PIER'S NEW BOOK.

MR. PIER'S strong novel, "The Ancient Grudge," (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.,) emphasizes the thesis of Mrs. Goodwin's "Claims and Counterclaims," that the last and crowning secret of "the gentle art of making enemies" is to save a man's life at the risk of one's own. Mrs. Goodwin's hero

Then there is the sad death scene of Thomas Jefferson and Rebecca's inconsolable grief; the doll which had a soul but no body, but which Rebecca Mary crooned softly over, just as though it was a real doll, and many other incidents—incidents that make one smile even while they bring a lump to one's throat.

On the whole, Rebecca Mary is worth knowing.

BOARDING SCHOOL GIRLS.

MRS. ELEANOR HOYT BRAINERD, who will be remembered as the creator of Nancy and her escapades, has now undertaken to describe life at a fashionable boarding school in New York. "Concerning Belinda" (Doubleday, Page & Co.) is written with the same lightness and sprightly humor that characterized the author's previous stories. Belinda herself was only a teacher in the fashionable finishing school. She was only twenty-two, and she was almost fatally pretty, but she managed to get along fairly well.

As for the girls! Who has not met boarding school girls in the flesh?—and boarding school girls are boarding school girls the world over, even in books. So Mrs. Brainerd is probably not exaggerating when she describes Amelia Bowers, the romantic and sentimental, or any one of the other young creatures assembled in the school, and the things they do, their hero worship, their extravagance of speech, their griefs and their joys. Their escapades are cheerful reading.

MISS CYNTHIA'S REJUVENATION.

IN "The Resurrection of Miss Cynthia" (Dodd, Mead Co.) Mrs. Florence Morse Kingsley tells the story of a spinster of thirty-three to whom the doctor allowed one more year of life, who suddenly broke loose from the traditions of her house, her training, even her instincts, and decided that since life meant only one more year to her, she should have her fling in a world in which she had led thirty-three years of dreary, uneventful existence. So, because Miss Cynthia had all her life worn black for some lamented relative or other, in this last year she cast aside black forever. She clad her small person in pale blues and tender greens, in pinks, and whites, and yellows, and browns. She went into the woods—she, who had never even in childhood attended a picnic—and sat on the damp ground with the Puffer twins, kind-hearted but reckless maidens of very tender years; she took them by the hand and ran races with them; she allowed them to dig up her garden and wallow in her preserve and jam jars; she burned wood recklessly in the front parlor and flared up the lights, although all the traditions of her house favored a dim chilliness. She stopped reading her Bible and gave recklessly to the poor, and altogether she wrought much havoc in her own small world during that allotted period.

But soon a buried love affair was unearthed, as might have been expected, and good little Miss Cynthia, who had planned to live only a year and had tried hard to cultivate resignation, discovered that sometimes Boston doctors make a mistake in their diagnoses. But for all that, the year in Miss Cynthia's life was not wasted.

A MOTOR CAR BOOK.

MRS. A. M. WILLIAMSON and Mr. C. N. Williamson, authors of "The Lightning Conductor," have written a third clever novel of automobile travel abroad, called "My Friend the Chauffeur," (McClure, Phillips & Co.) It holds a peculiar charm for the motorist, but even the lay reader will be thrilled by the adventures of the stanch "Panhard," interested in the unusual tour, amused by the bright dialogue, and, of course, eager to follow to the end the various romances growing out of the expedition of which "My Friend the Chauffeur" is the hero, and resourceful Sir Ralph the deviser.

Like many of the novels of the hour, this story has a tendency to sag rather heavily in the middle, and then to "round up" its characters at the end, for no particular reason except that the requisite number of pages has been filled.

About a third of the pleasant tale goes easily and fleetly; afterward, while the interest of the tour and the love affairs is well sustained, the sparkle has died out, and the book ranges itself with the host of guidebook romances, of which the genial and forgotten "Porte Crayon" was perhaps the pioneer. Still it is never dull, and no reader is likely to lay it aside until the destinies of the masquerading chauffeur and the irritatingly superior Maida; of the sensible Ralph and the flippant Beechy; of the dubious Countess, and the more dubious Prince are as well settled as their creators permit.

While one reads the book for entertainment alone—and finds what he seeks—he absorbs not a little information in the process, a thing to be forgiven when so dexterously imparted. "My Friend the Chauffeur" will be gratefully remembered, too, as releasing the novel reader from his usual position of a toad under a harrow—there isn't a pang in its pages; its thrills are just thrilling enough to be agreeable—altogether a bright and pleasing story.

AN AWAKENING.

THE story of Western Kentucky, called, somewhat audaciously, "A Brother of Christ," (Broadway Publishing Company,) is told not without considerable literary skill, with a suggestion of the influence of James Lane Allen. Ingram Crockett, the author, has chosen a young mystic for his protagonist, and placed him in the eccentric sect called Christadelphians, domiciled in rural Kentucky. The story lies in the effect of real life (even in the quiet country) upon this young man, and links with his fate that of two young women of very different types, both real enough. The first is a passionate beauty, and serves to introduce some highly colored effects; the other is wise and calm and pure, and is "good medicine" for the soul of the dreamer.

The "local color" of the book is particularly to be commended as adding to and not subtracting from the story. You will read of a Sunday morning at the "synagogue" of the Christadelphians, when Brother Andrew (the hero) lectures; you will read of a Sunday afternoon at the house of Brother Nathanael and how a country coquette entertains two incongruous suitors; you will read, again, of a barn-raising and the ways of the coquette there, of an old-fashioned dance, and again the ways of the coquette—this time quite scandalous.

The other suitor, of course, the mystic being suitor number one, is a coarse and wicked villain, and he is present at all these festivities. In another place you have a rescue—the catching of a runaway horse—and that introduces the other girl. An account of a public "debate" (lasting three days) between the prophets of the Christadelphians and the local representatives of orthodoxy will serve admirably for a picture of a "camp meeting" anywhere in Virginia or Kentucky. The debate, of course, is merely the occasion for a picnic.

It may be added that the story doesn't at all give the effect of having been written in order to string these scenes together. The scenes seem the natural background of events conditioned by that background and the peculiarities of the hero.

A FIGHT BEQUEATHED.

THERE was once according to the story of "Sunrise Acres," (Dodd, Mead & Co.,) a "plunger and financial daredevil" who came to die when he was forty-one years old and the possessor of millions. He had a nephew. And in his youth he had fought another man for a lady and lost. Now he bequeathed half a million dollars to his nephew on condition that the young man, who was a football player and a trained athlete, go out into the world, find the man who had beat his uncle, and with his bare fists and in fair fight administer to him an equally good drubbing.

This commission, after some misgivings overcome, the nephew undertook, and went to Indiana after his man. The man turned out to be a giant with a pretty daughter and an invalid wife. Love entered into the plot, and a trained nurse and a comic hired man. But the fight was pulled off in great style out in one of the big man's pastures—for he was a farmer.

The author has an excellent idea for a farce comedy. He has unfortunately lacked some skill in execution.

VARDON ON GOLF AS HE PLAYS IT.

An Admirable Book by the World's Most Expert Golfer on the Technic of the Game and Its Charm.

IT IS paying high but well-deserved praise to Harry Vardon to say that all sincere lovers of the game will enjoy reading his book on golf as much as they enjoy seeing him play. He has accomplished what has often been called the impossible, the writing of a helpful book in an entertaining manner by one who is an acknowledged expert of the game. This success is all the more pleasing in Harry Vardon's case, because practically his entire life has been spent on the links. At the age of 7 years he began his golfing career as a caddie on the Isle of Jersey, where he was born in 1870. At the age of 20 he got his first position as club "professional." At 23 he made his first bid for that great honor coveted by every professional, the open championship of Great Britain. It was not until three years later, when 26 years old, that he reached that pinnacle of golfing excellence, and his title has since been unquestioned as one of the most finished players that the annals of the sport can show.

Vardon has held the British open championship four times, the American open championship once, besides winning first prize in over forty-eight first-class tournaments. Truly a record to be proud of and one that would doubtless cause 99 per cent. of our amateurs to cry "enough." But not a hint does Vardon give of his inclination to retire.

"I hope to play many of my best games in the future," he says confidently, "for it takes longer to kill the golf in a man than it does to breed it."

These words are indicative of the keynote of the book, for a whole-hearted enthusiasm, coupled with the ever-present hopefulness of better things to come, runs through it from cover to cover. Above all, it is brim full of common sense. The didactic method is happily lacking. Because Vardon prefers a certain club or makes a stroke in a certain way, he does not demand that the novice do likewise. He recognizes American invention, it is all the same. "If it suits the man who uses it, then it is the best putter in the world for him."

Vardon relates an interesting experience of one of these freaks of fancy in his own case. Never in his life, he says, has he putted better than in the two rounds which won him his first championship. He was playing off the tie then with J. H. Taylor. Having felt he was off his putting, he picked up in Ben Sayers's shop at North Berwick a light cleek that had apparently been cast aside as useless. A sudden inspiration came to him to use the cleek as a putter with the substitution of a shorter shaft. "I fancied this new discovery of mine and had confidence in it, and that was why I got all those long putts down," but, adds Vardon, "though I keep it still and treasure it, I have never played with that putter since. It has done its duty."

THE NEED OF PATIENT PRACTICE.

IF THE practical suggestions offered to the beginner were more generally adopted the percentage of good golfers as compared to what Vardon aptly styles "the noble army of foozlers," would be considerably enhanced. But the desire to reduce one's score at the outset rises paramount in nine cases out of ten to the necessity of patient practice, and ere long the player finds himself hopelessly enmeshed in the class of mediocrity.

"Get hold of the game stroke by stroke," advises Vardon, and undergo this slow process of tuition for three months at least, preferably more. The excellent golf of Prime Minister Balfour is due to this tedious method of learning. Under the guidance of Tom Dunn Mr. Balfour spent a miserable fortnight in bunkers alone learning how to get out of them from every possible position. Vardon is a firm believer in professional advice for the beginner, but this is not all. He places great faith in the study of other players' methods. "There are few from whom one is not able to learn something," he says. As for himself, he admits a higher opinion of the present and future of golf in this country than is entertained by many eminent players in his own land. He calls Travis one of the steadiest golfers he ever saw, and one who always plays with his head. The effect of Travis's victory of the British amateur championship, says Vardon, "was to wake up our British golf, which stood sadly in need of arousing. There are other good golfers in the States besides Mr. Travis, and, frankly, I think that unless we wake up the cup will go there again."

The American girls also are credited with adopting the game more wholeheartedly than their English sisters. The average English girl does not make so many sacrifices for golf as the American. Vardon's familiarity with these differences in both countries causes him to say of the American girl:

She tucks up her sleeves like a man, and in the soles of her shoes she has plenty of goodly sized nails. And she does not look a tittle the worse for any of these things; indeed, the picture of the determined, strenuous, and yet charming lady golfer was one of the most attractive that I saw when in America.

The novice seeking for points as well as the veteran who may peruse its pages for mere entertainment will find this book equally interesting. The sixty-five illustrations are admirable object lessons in the study of easy and difficult strokes, while some of the anecdotes that give piquancy to the reminiscences will repay repetition among the devotees of the game as they gather around the popular nineteenth hole. Let one suffice. A Welshman of title who played with more enthusiasm than ability found himself one day on a famous Scotch course. His caddie was a typical, blunt-spoken native. The turf suffered severely every time the visitor used his irons. At last, when the Welshman had taken a mighty swipe, making an unusually deep excavation behind the ball, the caddie could control his emotions no longer, and exclaimed pathetically:

"Oh, Lord, man, hae mercy on puir auld Scotland."

FRENCH NOVELS.

Four New Ones by Bazin, Romain Rolland, and Others.*

By arrangement with The London Times.

ONCE, many years ago, M. Rénan remarked that most novels are wearisome "because they are not concerned with the problems of conduct. A novel," said he, "should represent the give-and-take of principles and passions, and had I a life to spare (he continued) I conceive myself writing a novel which should be a treaty of ethics, in fact a morale en action." This evidently is the aim of M. René Bazin, but it is complicated by a feeling for geography eminently characteristic of our age. He intends, we imagine, to compose a moral geography of contemporary France! M. Rénan would have read with pleasure the novels of M. René Bazin, would have entered into his point of view, and seen what was reasonable and delicate and right in it, before returning to his own standpoint, which showed conspicuously the other side of the prospect. M. Bazin is not capable of such excursions. But in his own limited and even narrow way he is a man of great moral delicacy and much sincerity of feeling, endowed with that sense of beauty which is, perhaps, the most usual gift in our days—at least among French novelists—for three out of the four authors in our list possess it in a high degree. M. Bazin's novels are conservative and religious, and this one even more so than the rest, but with a note of passion in it—a passionate pity—called up by the recent laws against the religious orders in France.

When we say that M. Bazin intends composing a moral geography of France we have in mind especially four of his later books—"La Terre qui Meurt" (our favorite of all his works,) which gives an unforgettable a picture of the Vendean marshes with their waterways and punts, while it considers the moral problem of military service, which draws the young peasant from the land, congesting the city with inefficient unemployed; "Donatienne," a study of austere and sterile Brittany, where the young wife and mother leaves her home in order to serve as foster-mother to the children of the rich—M. Brieux has treated the same subject in his "Remplaçante"; "Le Oberlé," a panorama of Alsace, with the great problem of patriotism inevitably put to the young French-Alsatian who comes to man's estate, since he must serve in the German Army if he would live on his father's land—and this novel has provoked an answer from M. Maurice Barrès in his "Au Service de l'Allemagne." In his last volume M. Bazin has been happy in his choice of Lyons—fervent, revolutionary, religious Lyons—as the scene of a story which concerns the disbanding and expulsion of a pious sisterhood, and the subsequent fate of the nuns turned adrift on the world. It is in fact a problem not easy to solve, for the Church in France is an empire within an empire, and hostile at every point to that governing empire which is the French Republic. It is natural, if illiberal, that the State should desire to form its future electors according to its own ideals, and not intrust them to the teaching of an enemy.

MONKS and nuns, like all highly specialized workmen, are ill-fitted for everyday life and ordinary duties just in proportion as their peculiar faculty is developed at the expense of the rest of their natures. They can pray, or teach, or nurse the sick, or make liquenrs and sweetmeats, or sew and embroider, as the case may be; but by rote and order, according to a definite rule. The virtue of obedience has deprived them of initiative; and their case, when turned out of their convents into the hustling crowd of the street, is hard indeed. M. Bazin has chosen here a fine subject. He has treated it with too much haste; we see traces of the well-known formula of naturalism; the thing is not mature, inevitable, natural, as is the case with work long brooded over, assimilated, and at last produced by what is unconscious in our nature. Too obviously he has studied the question and got up his brief from the most accurate documents.

BUT the passion and compassion of the man are sincere enough, and move us through the artifices of his fabulation, which are conspicuous especially toward the end. Sweet unfortunate Soeur Pascale falls too easily; we lose our interest in so passive a creature, who holds her soul so cheap. Her murder scarcely moves us. Compare it with the final fate, almost exactly similar, of the miserable heroine of "Babre de Montparnasse." There, we feel that the writer treats of what he knows; here, of what he has read. But the beginning of "L'Isolée" is exquisite in its simplicity, and, in Adolphe Mouvaud, M. Bazin has sketched a type as frequent in French daily life as hitherto unrepresented in French literature. We see the slender man with his big head, tired, kind eyes, and the cropped, bristling black and white hair like worn plush; and we seem to know him, so firm, so gay, so laborious, so fond of action and movement, yet patient—surely the most patient of mortals—because (deep at heart) the most pious; living, indeed, beneath all his surface of banter and playful rustlcity, in perpetual communication with a secret ideal—patiens quia aeternus. Alternately taciturn and gay (and equally natural in either mood, as he is equally a Christian and an artist,) sensitive and brusque. Adolphe Mouvaud is a living figure. And how Charlotte Brontë would have loved this compatriot of M. Paul Emmanuel!

THE season has produced more than one good novel, and one, at least, which will outlast many a season. M. Romain Rolland's "Jean Christophe" is a remarkable book—and yet is it a book at all? The third volume of it, recently published, leaves the hero on the eve of manhood, without an adventure in his uneventful history. How many volumes will it take to complete his career? Who and whence is "Jean Christophe"? We were admiring the way in which M. Rolland had caught the air and spirit of a little German town toward the close of the eighteenth century, when, far on in the story, an allusion warned us that Jean Christophe is our contemporary. Much that is vague and formless and diffuse surrounds the central figure, recalling the golden Rembrandtlike mists which envelop a scene lit up at night by a single lantern. But that which the ray touches lives and speaks. M. Rolland at his best reminds us of the greatest writers only, and the names that rise to our lips are Rousseau, Goethe. He ignores the tricks of the trade. He is not half so clever as M. Abel Hermant or M. de Regnier. But M. Romain Rolland is "une nature." If he live it is probable that we may have to admire him, with all his faults thick upon his head, and perhaps to consider them (as we consider the emphasis of Rousseau, the prolixity of Goethe) an integral part of his gift. Geniuses are never impeccable—they leave perfection to a Gautier or a Banville.

Perhaps the first volume (L'Aube) of "Jean Christophe" is the best; it has the double charm of the romance of childhood and the musical novel; two dangerous styles, but which, when successful, have a haunting felicity of their own. In M. Rolland's first volume, the homely grace of the German setting, the force and fidelity of the character-painting, something at once cordial and large, simple and tender, in the telling, reveal the author of the "Vie de Beethoven." The last volume, "L'Adolescent," has, however, one episode—the story of Sabine—which is even better. It seems a tremendous thing to say, but we have thought it more than once. Goethe might have held the pen which traced these few pages, so natural in their power and grace, and which, re-read for the third or fourth time, seem the more moving for that repetition.

The best of "Jean Christophe" is so very good that the novels we read after it seem futile and ineffectual. Mme. de Noailles's prose is seldom as happy as her verse, (we except from this verdict "Le Visage émerveillé," which is, in fact, a prose poem,) and she is not at her best in the book before us. The hero, Antoine Arnaud, reminds us of the heroes of M. Maurice Barrès's earlier novels; he, too, is an "homma libre," but the liberty he claims is not intellectual or moral, but merely sensuous and passionate. His speeches are the best thing in the book—absurdly lyric, romantic, and jejune—but with the song and joy of youth in them. Antoine is a Don Juan, with all the sex at his feet, who dies at last of love for a young girl—a girl he can never hope to marry—his wife's sister. There is a morbid delicacy, an ardent melancholy, in these last chapters; yet nothing that strikes to the quick with intimate conviction. We cannot justify to ourselves the success—succès de scandale—of "La Lueur sur la Cime." It seems to us neither very good nor very bad, though either opinion is orthodox in Paris. We have seldom read a less interesting book. It follows scrupulously the modern formula—out of Ibsen by Nietzsche—but its dogmatic immorality does not galvanize it into life. Yet, under the name of Femina, "Jacque Voutade" contributes to the Figaro notes and studies of considerable literary merit; and she has had a hand in the making of at least one novelist's reputation. She is a woman of talent, who has not breathed life into her work.

For Mathematical Students.

William Hall, author of "Modern Navigation," "Ex-Meridian Tables," "The Nautical Slide-Rule," &c., has compiled a volume of "Tables and Constants to Four Figures," for use in technical, physical, and nautical computation and adapted to the requirements of junior mathematical students. The Macmillan Company is bringing it out here. The book is divided into two parts—trigonometrical tables and arithmetical tables. There are also notes on the tables and their use.

A HOUSE FILLED WITH BOOKS.

The household book shelf, whether it be a single shelf or an entire library, should be filled with the books you care for, that add something to your life, whether amusement, instruction or inspiration.

We do not publish books for one kind of man or woman only. We try to choose what most men want, recognizing that the same book does not appeal to all men. Here is an announcement of five new books, two of which are frankly stories—one of them going further and dealing with a great American industrial problem—and three of which will appeal to different sorts of readers, from lovers of the horse to lovers of literature. We believe that you will be interested in at least one of these five books.

The Work of Our Hands

By H. A. Mitchell Keays, author of "He That Eateth Bread With Me." $1.50.

This story, for it is a story and should be read for the story, deals with the problem of the responsibility of an employer of labor and the men who help to make his fortune, just as Mrs. Keays's previous book dealt with the subject of divorce. The book will interest and entertain for its story, with a special leaning toward those interested in sociologic problems.

The Fortunes of the Landrays

By Vaughn Kester. Five illustrations by The Kinneys. $1.50.

Americans never seem to tire of stories dealing with the romantic features of their own country. This book carries its characters and the reader through the California Gold Fever, the Civil War and the boom town epoch of the West. It is good reading and good Americanism.

A Modern Symposium

By G. Lowes Dickinson, author of "Letters from a Chinese Official." Postpaid, $1.07; net, $1.00.

Gathered at the Seeker's Club are an artist, politician, Socialist, newspaper man, poet and others who carry on an able discussion of life, each from his own point of view. The individualities of the men taking part are well drawn and well kept. This book is neither a novel nor a story, but it has all the fascination of both.

The Horse in America

By John Gilmer Speed. With sixteen illustrations, two in color. Net, $2.00; postpaid, $2.20.

This book seems to contain everything that the lover of the horse could want to know, told in an attractive way and magnificently illustrated. It is almost necessary to every one who owns or loves a horse.

The Torch

By George Edward Woodberry. Author of "Makers of Literature." $1.30.

The Torch is the symbol of knowledge passed on by means of the printed page. These eight lectures by Professor Woodberry describe how each successive race reflects its own literature and life and passes on its traditions in some form of literature from epoch to epoch. A part of the charm of these lectures is the language in which they are expressed.

Readers of books will be interested in "My Friend the Chauffeur," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, "Back Home" by Eugene Wood, "The Ancient Landmark," by Elizabeth Cherry Waltz, "Plunkitt of Tammany Hall," by W. L. Riordon, "A Commercial Traveller in South America," by Frank Wiborg, "Justice," by Charles Wagner, "The Complete Golfer," by Harry Vardon, and "Old Greek," by S. N. D. North.

MILLIONS OF MISCHIEF

By HEADON HILL,

AUTHOR OF "BY A HAIR'S BREADTH," "THE DUKE DECIDES," "A RACE WITH RUIN," AND OTHERS.

Sold at all book shops. Illustrated. Price, $1.50.

He closed the book at the last page.

"The most interesting novel I have read in many a day," exclaimed the well-groomed gentleman, a prominent banker, occupying the neighboring chair on the Boston Limited; and added, "Have you read Headon Hill's books? I have, all of them. He is a growing man. Get his latest," holding up his book, "'MILLIONS OF MISCHIEF.' It is the best of the lot. His people are all alive and all interesting—some of the best character studies I have ever seen. The incidents are exciting, adventures thrilling, but the author never oversteps seeming probability. The plot is as good as Wilkie Collins'. Primarily, it is a detective story, but there is a love story, of course, and it's good, too. The type is just right—I have to consider that—and the illustrations help out the story."

His companion purchased a copy at the news stand on her way to the waiting auto, and so did I, who had overheard the monologue.

HISTORY OF EGYPT.

Mr. Petrie's Third Volume, Covering the Exodus and the Last of the Dynasties.*

MR. PETRIE'S third volume of the history of Egypt covers the period in the story of that country from the nineteenth to the thirtieth dynasty, a period of some thousand years. It is a curious book, as its predecessors have been curious, and for the same reason. We have medallic histories of various countries; Mr. Petrie's book is a monumental history, actually as well as figuratively. He says in his preface: "There is, I believe, no other country of which there is a complete index to every historical monument that is known, with a translation or abstract of every historical text." It is from these monuments that Mr. Petrie has made up his history, which necessarily is skeletonic. For this reason, like the earlier volumes, the effect of this third volume is somewhat curious. The remaining volumes of the history, to be prepared by Prof. Mahaffy, Mr. J. G. Milne, and Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole, are much more likely to approach the usual form of historical work.

NOT the least interesting part of Mr. Petrie's book is his preface, wherein he speaks of the chronology of Egyptian events. On this subject he says:

> The greatest care has been taken to get all the data together; and, in some parts, as the twenty-second dynasty, a very different face is put on the history by the fresh material here stated. Broadly, there is not so much as ten years to spare anywhere in this volume. The fixed amounts occupy the whole period very closely, and it is really difficult to suppose that they really come together without more unascertained intervals.

Is it flippant to say that this is petrified English? The author means that the chronology of his book is everywhere correct within ten years, and that it is wonderful that the Egyptian dates can be reduced to terms of our chronology so closely. It certainly is wonderful; Mr. Petrie gives us the dates of the nineteenth dynasty—that in which the Exodus occurred—as B. C. 1328 and B. C. 1202; just as a modern historian might say that the House of Hanover ruled in Great Britain from 1714 to 1901.

CARDINAL WOLSEY.

GEORGE CAVENDISH'S "Life and Death of Cardinal Wolsey" is appearing in the Riverside Press series (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $7.50 net) in a large and handsome quarto, printed on light, English-made paper, in large, clear type, and bound in green boards with buckram back, the Wolsey arms being stamped in gold on the cover. The edition is believed to be from the most authoritative text and contains the full-page photogravures, reproduced in sepia and red chalk tints, of Wolsey, King Henry VIII., Thomas Cromwell, Catherine of Aragon, Anne Boleyn, Mary Tudor, and Charles Brandon, and others mentioned in the book, reproduced from paintings by Holbein and others.

The original manuscript of the biography was left by George Cavendish upon his death in 1561. Cavendish was gentleman usher to the great Cardinal, and was with him through the period of his rise to eminence, his tragic fall and death. He later returned into the country and spent the rest of his life in solitude. He seems to have taken to heart the lesson of the "wondrous mutability of vain honor, the brittle assurances of abundance, the uncertainty of dignities, the flattering of vain friends, and the tickle trust to worldly Princes." And he consoled himself in his poverty by writing the simple story of his service as one of Wolsey's suite.

The work remained long in manuscript owing to the fact that it contained numerous reflections on the character of Henry VIII., and could not very well be published during the reign of his immediate descendants. It first appeared in 1641, but in an incomplete form, and was later brought out in various other forms, until, in 1815, S. W. Singer reprinted it from what

CORPORATIONS.

Their Origin and Development and Their Relation to the State.*

THESE two substantial volumes are the result of the author's intention to write a brief introduction to a work on the "Corporation Question." It must be regarded as a loss to political science that so keen a student did not live to complete more than the introduction to his subject. While the larger portion of these volumes is devoted to the historical growth of corporations—the ecclesiastical corporations, guilds, universities, Colonial companies, &c.—Dr. Davis gives us chapters on the "Nature of Corporations," the "Legal Conception of Corporations," and a brief chapter showing the relation between the older and the modern corporations.

He believes that "the technical legal conception of them [corporations] is so clearly unscientific that it must sooner or later be greatly modified or entirely dispensed with." He believes that the importance of corporations has been overlooked by historians, whose attention has been fixed mainly on the framework of the State and National activity. Dr. Davis's study of the nature of corporations leads up to this definition of them:

> A corporation is a body of persons upon whom the State has conferred such voluntarily accepted but compulsorily maintained relations to one another and to all others that as an autonomous, self-sufficient, and self-renewing body they may determine and enforce their common will, and in the pursuit of their private interest may exercise more efficiently social functions both specially conducive to public welfare and most appropriately exercised by associated persons.

Dr. Davis has evidently no sympathy with the legal principles of "artificial personality," or "limited liability," which latter, he says, was not a feature of early corporate life in England. He believes that its "undue prevalence" in this country has been because when [illegible]ks are involved men will not invest un[illegible]s they know the limit of their liability. "Limited liability" now, he says, is [illegible]en regarded by promoters and inven[illegible]s as a positive detriment. The princ[illegible] that "a charter is a contract" he [illegible]nsiders vicious. "The conception of a [illegible]argain between a state and a group o[illegible]s citizens is illogical." In short, he [illegible]elieves that "the system of law linge[illegible] behind society in its progress and delays [illegible] translate newly formed social relat[illegible]ns into enforceable rights and obligation[illegible] until (in many cases) long after they h[illegible]ve been fully formed." He criticises th[illegible] modern law of corporations from three [illegible]oints of view: 1. It conserves obsolete [illegible]cial relations. 2. It fails to recognize new social relations. 3. It employs [illegible] vicious system to provide apparent har[illegible]ony between an old system of law[illegible]nd new elements of society.

Coming down to modern cor[illegible]rations, he comments on the remarkable [illegible]hange in public opinion regarding the fu[illegible]ctions of the State. The masses, consci[illegible]s of the powers enjoyed by corporations although having formerly opposed increa[illegible]d activity of the State, lest it might [illegible]ncroach upon their own, are now cla[illegible]ing for such activity to protect themselv[illegible]s against the corporations. The Go[illegible]nmental features of corporations will be [illegible]radually absorbed by the State, though [illegible] the so-called "economic" corporation[illegible] this absorption has not as yet gone f[illegible].

Within corporations tha[illegible]cess of "corporate shrinkage" is ma[illegible]d. The exclusion of the small stockh[illegible]er from participation in corporate act[illegible]y is an instance of this. Under the [illegible]ew feudalism" the baronage will co[illegible]t of the small bodies to which corpor[illegible]ns have shrunk, exercising as "priva[illegible] rights" the public powers of corpor[illegible]ons that have so shrunk.

The all-pervasiveness of c[illegible]porations is a fact which the student [illegible] society has to take into account. T[illegible] modern citizen discovers, says Dr. D[illegible]vis, that citizenship in his country has [illegible]en largely metamorphosed into mem[illegible]ership in corporations and patriotism [illegible] fidelity to them.

The New York Times
SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS

LITERARY SECTION OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 7, 1905.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

FICTION leads in the publishers' Autumn announcements inevitably; the novel is assuredly not going out of fashion this season. The lists in the special Autumn number of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, to be published next Saturday, will include many columns of titles of new works of English and American fiction, which have been published recently or are still in press. These books, though they give promise of no sensational triumph in the most popular of all literary fields, are, in many cases, the works of well-known and well-liked authors. As the reviews of some of the newest novels printed in this number indicate, the standard of merit is reasonably high. In American fiction the first place among the Autumn novels will undoubtedly be filled by Edith Wharton's powerful social study, "The House of Mirth," which reaches its tragic climax in the November Scribner's; but the new books by Ellen Glasgow, Winston Churchill, Margaret Sherwood, Alice French, (Octave Thanet,) Robert W. Chambers, will greatly increase the demand for books and benefit all booksellers.

WHILE Mrs. Wharton's new novel depicts vividly the tragedy of our modern social life, there is published at the same moment another book in which the comedy of contemporary American society is adroitly set forth and in an unhackneyed way. "Our Best Society" (Putnams) was avowedly the outcome of a desire to depict fashionable life in New York fifty years after "The Potiphar Papers" of George William Curtis satirized the worldly clergyman as the Rev. Cream Cheese. In its serial publication, we fancy, the new story attracted comparatively little notice; but we bespeak for it a general hearing now. It narrates the adventures among the rich, vain, and reasonably well-cultivated of New York of a young writer and his nice wife, and contains vivid and veracious pictures of the dinner party, the coaching party, the theatre party, and many other "social functions," glimpses of literary, artistic, and dramatic "sets," with a study of the manners of a mannerless age, and a hint or two of its morals.

THERE is food for the imagination in the communication we print elsewhere, from Mr. Avern Pardoe of the Ontario Legislative Library in Toronto, relating to the poisoning of a dog, in a recent novel, by administering powdered glass. It seems that powdered glass has been, for many years, a favorite medicine for certain diseases to which dogs are subject, and our correspondent believes that the eating of powdered glass would not kill a human being. The notion that a small quantity of it would kill suddenly, he declares, is one of the traditions of the age when the world was full of fables of poisons and poisonings, and every mysterious death (mysterious because of the common ignorance of anatomy and pathology) was ascribed to the use of powdered glass. Mr. Pardoe's letter is interesting in the light it throws on the origin of a widespread belief.

THERE was no particular reason, probably, why the publishers of Scribner's Magazine should choose to celebrate the eighteenth or the nineteenth anniversary of the first publication of their excellent periodical rather than the fifteenth or the twentieth. The pamphlet they have just issued as "a brief retrospect" comes now by mere chance, but is not the less welcome. From the first Scribner's has been one of the most interesting and veritably "readable" of all the magazines. Its "Unpublished Letters of Thackeray" caused a literary sensation at the very beginning, and it has been a rich mine of biography and personal reminiscence. Stanley, the Bancrofts, Minister Washburne, the Everetts, Gen. Sheridan, Gen. Gordon, Hugh McCulloch, and Mme. Waddington are only a few of the illustrious contributors in this line. Serial fiction has been contributed by Stevenson, Barrie, Richard Harding Davis, Harold Frederic, F. Hopkinson Smith, Mrs. Humphry Ward, George Meredith, Robert Grant, and a host of others, not to mention Edith Wharton. Some of the best short stories of Kipling, Hopkinson Smith, Cable, James, Kenneth Grahame, and Josephine Daskam originally appeared in Scribner's. The "brief retrospect" will be found an interesting stimulus to pleasant memories by many a reader of good magazines.

LEST you should marvel all in vain over the meaning of the title of a new volume of verse by the novelist, Eden Phillpotts, which is now announced in the Autumn lists—"Up List of favored Gypsy names of countries and towns, and many quaint and curious odds and ends of the folk-lore of the wandering people accumulated by Borrow. It is, in fact, a book in which the admirer of Isopel Berners may find much to entertain him for an hour or so.

MRS. WHITNEY'S POEMS.

AN FASTIDIOUSNESS of taste, a clear personal vision, and a perfect sincerity are qualities that go far in making any writing, verse or prose, agreeable to read and worthy of respect. If added to them is a delicate insight into the human heart of common mortals the result is certain to be sympathetic, to use a much abused word. Mrs. Whitney's "Sonnets and Songs" (Harpers, $1.20,) are quite what one would expect from a daughter of her race, and possess to a high degree this little catalogue of attributes. Their mood is chiefly that of quiet wistfulness, touched by the fears and sorrows of uncertain human fate, but open also to the influences of wholesome joy and unaffected sentiment. The sonnet "As a Pale Child" reflects the suggestion of somewhat conscious withdrawal from the lustier interests of the world, and strikes a note that may be called feminine in its hint of inherited repressions and conventions:

As a pale child, hemmed in by windy rain,
Patiently turns to touch his well-known toys,
Playing as children play who make no noise,
Yet happy in a way: then sighs again,
To watch the world against the storm-dim pane,
And sees with wistful eyes glad girls and boys
Who romp beneath the rain's unlicensed joys,
And feels wild longings sweep his gentle brain,

So I, contented with my flowers for stars,
Stroll in my fair walled garden happily,
Knowing no gladder game till, shrill and sweet,
I hear life's cry ring down the silent street,
And press my face against the sunlit bars
To watch the joyous spirits who are free.

It is characteristic of this cloistered mood that nature plays but a small

LONDON NEWS.

A Biography of Nelson's Flag Captain—Science and Religion—New Novels.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1905.]

LONDON, Oct. 6.—A life of Lord Nelson's friend and Flag Captain, Sir Thomas Masterman Hardy, will be published early in 1906 by John Murray. It is largely based on several hundred recently discovered and hitherto unpublished letters.

The De La More Press will issue next month "The Memoirs of Buck Whaley," now first published from the original manuscript owned by Sir Edward Sullivan. Whaley was an eccentric Irish politician, notorious for his extravagances, who wrote his memoirs in order that his career might be a warning to others.

The same publishers will soon bring out a book on "Costume as Illustrated by Monumental Brasses," written by Herbert Druett.

Besides Sir Oliver Lodge's "Life and Matter," another book in reply to Ernest Haeckel's "Riddle of the Universe" will be published this Autumn by Messrs. Williams & Norgate. This is "Science and Religion Demonstrated by the Reconcilability of Their Points of View," written by Rudolph Otto of Göttingen.

Two important religious works soon to be published by the De La More Press are a translation of Prof. Von Soden's "History of Early Christian Literature" and "Jesus: A Study," by Prof. Wilhelm Bonset of Göttingen.

Messrs. Bradbury & Agnew publish next month, "by command," an art book entitled "The Furniture of Windsor Castle," by Guy F. Laking.

Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's new story, "Barbara Rebell," will be published soon by William Heinemann. Fisher Unwin will publish next week a story by Kate Westlake Yeigh entitled "A Specimen Spinster." John Lane will publish Oct. 10 "Display," a romance by R. E. S. Spender. A new novel by Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Castle will be published in a few weeks by Messrs. Smith & Elder. It will be called "French Nan," after its eighteenth century heroine.

W.

"ANIMAL HEROES."

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON'S new book of aoimal stories, wbich contains the "Histories of a Cat, a Dog, a Pigeon, a Lynx, Two Wolves, and a Reindeer," is out this week with the imprint of Charles Scribner's Sons. Every one of the stories, writes the author in his prefatory note, "though more or less composite, is founded on the actual life of a veritable animal hero." He continues:

The most composite is the White Reindeer. This story I wrote at Utrovand in Norway, during the Summer of 1900, while the reindeer herds grazed in sight on the near-by uplande. The Lynx is founded on some of my own early experiences in the backwoods. It is less than ten years since the "Jack Warhorse" won his hero crown. Thousands of "Kaskadoans" will remember him, and by the name "Warhorse" his coursing exploits are recorded in several daily papers. The least composite is Arnaux. ("The Chronicle of a Homing Pigeon.") It is so oearly historical that several who knew the bird have supplied additional items of loformation. The nest of the destroying peregrines, with its owoers and their young, is now to be seen in the American Museum of Natural History of New York.

There are over 200 drawings to the book made by the author himself. They loclude a number of full-page pictures and marginal illustrations oo every page. They have been inserted, as stated on the title page, "in elucidation" of the "histories" of the various "Animal Heroes."

EXTINCT ANIMALS.

IN his new volume, "Extinct Animals," made up from the shorthaod report of a course of lectures to a juvenile audience givan by Dr. E. Ray Lankester during the Christmas holidays of 1903-4 at the Royal Institution of London, the well-known author and naturalist has brought to the reader's notice in simple language soma of the "marvelous and delightful" things known about fossils.

Dr. Lankester writes about some animals that have only lately become extinct, teeth and bones, the mammoth elephants and mastodon, the ancestral history of elephants, extinct horses and rhinoceri, giraffes, apes, South American mammals and the kangaroos of Australia; some great extinct reptiles, mammals of the trias of North Russia and South Africa, marine reptiles, extinct fishes, scorpions, &c. In his last chapter the author says a few words about the "endless delight and health-giving pursuit" of hunting for specimens.

Fossil hunting with hammer and chisel and a bag to be laden with specimens is splendid exercise, and, if skillfully conducted, an exciting form of sport. Even within reach of a Londoner's day there are the brickfields of Ilford and Grays, where I used to get remains of mammoth, rhinoceros, and such beasts. * * * A very little longer journey brings the fossil hunter to the Isle of Wight, which used to be, and I doubt not still is, a magnificent preserve of Eocene, Greensand, and Wealden fossils. * * * And there is always the chance—a good sportsman's chance—of finding 'something new,' if one understands the business and is never wearied of digging in sand and clay and hammering the rock and hunting up quarrymen aod those delightful people—rarer now than they were forty years ago—the local naturalists.

The illustrations in the book, from photographs and drawings of actual specimens, number 218. There is a portrait of Dr. Lankester as frontispiece. Henry Holt & Co. have acquired the American rights to the book.

SECOND LORD GRANVILLE.

THE Life of Granville George Leveson Gower, Second Earl Granville, K. G., 1815-1891," by Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, is about to be published, in two volumes, by Longmans, Green & Co. The work is principally made up of extracts from Earl Granville's diaries and correspondence and from letters from his mother, from the late Queen Victoria, and the Prince Consort, Gladstone, Lord Specer, William Edward Forster, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Aberdeen, Joho Bright, Lord Russell, Lord Palmerston, and meny others with whom Earl Granville was intimate and acquainted. Some of the epistles have been printed in earlier pnblications dealing with this period, notably in Morley's life of Gladstone; but, as the biographer writes in his preface, "the close connection of Mr. Gladstone and Lord Granville, both political and personal, for so many years, may be deemed to have had a fitting counterpart in the appearance of their biographies at no great interval of time from each other." Amoog the other published material are the substance of the account of Egyptian affairs and the history of the Home Rule question.

Among the earliest reminiscences in the book are those the late Earl wrote of the Duke of Wellington.

The activity of the Duke was wonderful. No idle young man was so exact in the discharge of all social duties. * * * The respect for his great qualities in public and in private was universal. * * * In the streets everybody touched their hats to him as he paseed. * * * There was a delay of an hour at Lord Wellesley's funeral. He complained that it was very incoovenient. "One might have done something else." His military punctuality was great. * * * The Duke of Wallington walked every morning on the Batteries, and went hunting with the harriers, almost to his death. * * * He was proud of his French, which was not very good, and peculiarly pronounced. Very civil to foreigners.

There are several illuetrations, including portraits of Earl Granville, Earl Canning, and others.

Stokes's Children's Books.

There are several juveniles on the early Fall list of the Frederick A. Stokes Company. They include a new edition of Lewis Carroll's "Through the Looking Glass," with the original Tenniel illustrations and twelve new full-page pictures in color by Maria L. Kirk; "Sir Toady Cruse," by S. R. Crockett, the well-known novellet, contiouing the adventures of "Sir Toady Llon," who has changed his name to "Cruece." The experiences in the book are said to be founded upon incidents of the author's own childhood. Four fanny books to come from this house will include two by R. F. Outcault—"Tige: His Story" and "Buster Brown's Franks"; one by Winsor McCay, "Little Sammy Sneeze," and a new Foxy Grandpa book, "Foxy Graodpa's Surprises."

Jack London's Fish Stories.

Accounts are given in Jack Loodon's new book, "Tales of the Fish Patrol," now being issued by the Macmillan Company, of seven adveotures during his year or two of service with the Fish Commission, at which time he was sixteen or seveoteen years of age. He joined the forces along San Francisco Bay, tryiog to suppress the law-breaking Greeks, Italians, and Chinese, the last of which are the "wildest among the fisher-folk." Exciting times, writes Mr. London, are the lot of the Fish Patrol: "In its history more than one dead patrolman has marked defeat, and more often dead fishermen, across their illegal nets, have marked success." The stories in the book are entitled: "White and Yellow," "The King of the Greeks," "A Raid on Oyster Pirates," "The Siege of the Lancashire Queen," "Charley's Coup," "Demetrios Contos," and "Yellow Handkerchief."

On none of the expeditions, except the last, did any mishap come to the young sailor. But "Yellow Handkerchief" had a grudge against him, as related in the first tale—he was arrested by Jack London. On returning to his studies after capturing the Greek fisherman, Demetrios Contos, he came across a Chinese junk, owned by "Yellow Handkerchief." This they took over, but London, under cover of a heavy fog, was bound and gagged and taken to one of the Marin Islands. Somehow he freed himself after the Chinese left him, and, evading "Yellow Handkerchief" when he returned for him, was rescued by his friends.

Georgo Varian has made the seven illustrations for the book, which are reproduced in half-tone.

Keeping the Child Busy.

Prof. Mary Schenck Woolman, Director of Domestic Art, Teachers College, Columbia University, has written the introduction to the volume on "Occupations for Little Fingers," by Elizabeth Sage and Anna M. Cooley, which the Scribners are sending from the press this week. The book has been compiled for mothers, kindergartners, settlement workers, and teachers of grade classes. Chapters are given up to weaving and coarse sewing, beadwork, crocheting and knitting, clay, cord, raffia, paper cutting and folding; suggestions are made for the use of nature's materials and for work for boys; descriptions are given for the furnishing of a doll's house and to make the different articles; simple upholstery is discussed. The illustrations comprise seventeen half-tone plates and over 100 diagrams by the authors.

Prof. Breasted's "Egypt."

Charles Scribner's Sons annouoce for publication at the end of the month "A History of Egypt," by James H. Breasted, Professor of Egyptology and Oriental History in the University of Chicago, who has just sailed for Europe as Director of the Egyptian Expedition of the University of Chicago. There are many new translations of original documents in the book, and altogether it will be as valuable for the scholar as for the general reader. Another popular feature will be found in the 200 illustrations and maps. While collecting material for the Egyptian Dictionary endowed by the German Emperor to assist the Commissioner of the Academies of Berlin, Leipsic, Göttingen, and Munich, Prof. Breasted had the opportunity of copying from the originals practically all the historical Egyptian monumeots now in Europe.

Lippincott's for October.

The leading Lippincott novelette for this month is by Frederic Reddale, and is called "A Manila Madness." The list of authors of short stories includes such nsmes as John Hay, Robert C. Welsh, Cy Warman, Helen S. Griffith, Carolloe Lockhart, Sarah C. Page, Edward C. Carpenter, and Frank H. Sweet, while among the poets for the month are Phoebe Lyde, Edwio L. Sabin, Charlotte Wilson, Thomas L. Hunter, Thomae S. Jones, Jr., John V. Cheney, Ruper Hughes, Elsa Barker, and others.

The Cory Book.

"The Pleasant Tragedies of Childhood," announced by the Harpers for Oct. 12, is a very attractive holiday book cootaining thirty full-page pictures in color by that admirable artist of child life Fanny Y. Cory. There are as many more pen-aod-ink drawings, and the whole is completed by verses set to the pictures by Burges Johnson, who has something of a rare knack at child's rhymes and has lately published a book of them.

RIDER HAGGARD AT HIS BEST.

To the thousands of readers who still remember the thrills of "She" and of 'King Solomon's Mines" we commend this new book, "Ayesha," the conclusion (not sequel) to "She." The critic of the New York Tribune describes the book better than we can:

> We are sorry for the solemn souls who care nothing for the heroic savage and his axe, and we are glad that after twenty years "She" has come back. . . In publishing "Ayesha" (pronounced Assha) Mr. Haggard does more than give his public a good story to read. He brings back memories of a time when the town was quite mad about his work . . . It is the kind of book which one naturally reads straight through, absorbed in every incident, and intensely concerned to know just what is going to happen before the curtain is rung down.

Illustrated by Greiffenhagen, $1.50.

A NEW EDITION OF "RIP."

We publish to-day a sumptuous edition of Irving's "Rip Van Winkle," with fifty plates in color by Arthur Rackham.

When a member of our firm saw these pictures by Mr. Rackham in London a year ago, he bought the American rights of publication in book form, with the understanding that the original drawings were to be exhibited in this country—after being shown in London. Every picture was bought at this first exhibition in London, and the American display had to be abandoned. It will repay you to look at a copy of the book at your dealer's; or if you will call at our library salesroom, 133 East 16th Street, we shall be glad to show it to you. $5.00 net. Do Not Be Misled by a Novel When You Want to Poison a Dog.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

VILLAINS who are desirous of poisoning the valuable dogs of their neighbors are strongly advised not to allow themselves to be misled by an incident in the splendid new novel, "The Trideot and the Net." I can testify from experieoce dating back more than forty years that powdered glass is a completely innoxious substance for usa with dogs, and that it is the only vermifuge worth considering for employment against taenia. I have used it on scores of dogs and never knew of any evil effect upon the dog. Youatt, the best authority on diseases of the dog, recommends its use and certifies to its harmlessness. It was from him that I first got the prescription, but I think the substance has been in use for centuries for this purpose.

The notion that powdered glass or diamond dust will kill a man or other animal is a mere survival of the time when our ancestors were in a state of blue funk about myaterious poisoolngs; wheo every atrange death was attributed to poison; when hundreds of innocent persons were legally murdered as the supposed authors of the deaths of persons who had died of diphtheria, Bright's disease, appeodicitis, or some other of the many diseases then unnamed. It may be true that powdered glass or diamond dust administered continuously and in large dosea would cause irritatioo enough to destroy the health of the subject to whom it had been administered, but why go to the trouble of powdering glass, or the expense of procuring diamond dust, when common builders' sand would do, no doubt, just as well?

Almost Entire Disapproval.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I have read with a great deal of interest, but I regret to say with almost entire disapproval, your very able and uodeniably well-written review of Mr. Madiaoo Cawein's poetry, published Sept. 15. The volume which you had up for review was Mr. Cawein's recently published "Tha Vale of Temple," a book of poems, which in my opioion merits far more praise and appreciation than your reviewer aeems willing to accord to it. This, however, beside the question.

I am not a literary critic, but I have read Mr. Cawein's poems for several years, and I have always found in them a delicate appreciation of nature and a true poetic feeling. I have found in them a sympathy with the beauties of nature which is rare in these days of materialism. I have found in them a love for the beautiful which is refreshing. I have found in them a spirit which is pure and elevating. I have found in them a style which is clear and forceful. I have found in them a rhythm which is musical and pleasing. I have found in them a rhyme which is perfect and appropriate. I have found in them a diction which is choice and elegant. I have found in them a thought which is original and profound. I have found in them a feeling which is tender and sympathetic. I have found in them a passion which is strong and overwhelming. I have found in them a humor which is delicate and refined. I have found in them a pathos which is touching and moving. I have found in them a sublimity which is grand and awe-inspiring. I have found in them a beauty which is exquisite and charming. I have found in them a truth which is eternal and universal.

I have found in them all these things, and I have found them in such a degree that I cannot but feel that Mr. Cawein is one of the greatest poets of our time. I have found in his poems a power which is rare in these days of weakness. I have found in them a strength which is unusual in these days of feebleness. I have found in them a vigor which is remarkable in these days of languor. I have found in them a force which is extraordinary in these days of inertia. I have found in them a energy which is wonderful in these days of lethargy. I have found in them a activity which is astonishing in these days of stagnation. I have found in them a life which is abundant in these days of death. I have found in them a soul which is immortal in these days of mortality

BOSTON NOTES.

New Books by Archibald Marshall, Mrs. Frances Squire, Miss Edna E. Wylie, and Others.

So persistently have the subterranean mysteries of Welbeck Abbey been kept before the British public since the death of the late Duke of Portland that the number of English novels with underground passages is hardly surprising, but in Mr. Archibald Marshall's "The House of Merriles" there is something more and better. There is a second bit of melodrama in the shape of a case of mysterious parentage, but the thing which makes friends for its author are its pretty pictures of family life, and of manly, honest, clean living youngsters. The book will be reprinted in the United States by Mesers. Herbert B. Turner & Co.

The new edition of Miss Josephine Preston Peabody's "Marlowe" is one evidence of the poet's return to favor; another, even more significant, is a quotation in Mrs. Frances Squire's "The Ballingtons." The book is hardly to be called a religious novel, but if the deacons reputed to buy the Sunday school libraries do not immediately perceive its value to them, they will miss an attraction at least equivalent to a picnic.

One of these deacons appears in Miss Edna Edwards Wylie's "The Ward of the Sewing Circle," which Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. will publish to-morrow, with "The Ballingtons." The author describes the experiences of an orphan successively entertained in five small households, and yet avoids the exaggeration almost invariable in books of this species, but at best such sojourns are unhappy, and as all children not absolutely spoiled are martyrs in their own eyes, young readers will hugely enjoy the tale.

There cannot be any doubt about Miss Helen Leab Reed's "Amy in Arcadia," which is perfectly understood to be written for young girls, or about Mr. Edwin Carlile Litsey's "The Race of the Swift," which also comes to-morrow, and is as evidently written for forest lovers with strong nerves, for the author le ruthless with his four-footed heroes.

But there is even better luck for lovers than for the deacons, for it has been decided that Mr. Artbur I. Keller's holiday edition of Bret Harte's "Her Letter" shall be sold at a price that does not suggest the holidays, and it is made for lovers. "Her Letter," "His Answer tn Her Letter," and "Her Last Letter" are series of pictures which "the eyes make when they are shut," and Mr. Keller has drawn them exquisitely, coloring some, leaving others in tint or in black and white, giving each page further special decoration of white and black on gold, and showing Cupid in countless aspects. The book will be publisbed Oct. 18 by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

A novel version of Cupid's own costume appears in a set of end papers prepared for Mr. Frank P. Sebley's "All by Wire," to be pnblished by Messrs. John W. Lnce & Co. The son of Venus is arrayed as a messenger boy and in various phases of motion skims over the pages at a pace seldom seen in real life.

"The Counsels of a Worldly Godmother," although but a few days published, is making more stir than one expects to note in tbe case nf a book so serious in substance, althongb amusing in form, bnt Saturday gives it a formidable rival in "The Coming of the Tide," Miss Margaret Sherwood's story, with its touching picture of an eccentric idler pursuing his unconscious, useless way, beside the tragic or happy lives of the chief characters. In this book, again, the entering wedge of interest is the mischievous sketch of the affected, club-taught women who fancy that they monopolize all knowledge of letters. It is so easy to remember a bit of keen naughtiness! Among the other books to come Saturday are Mr. John Burroughs's "Ways of Nature," containing his recent controversial essays and some others, and having his portrait fnr a frontispiece; Miss Alice N. Bacon's "In the Land of the Gods," nominally fiction, but really exemplifications of Japanese religious belief; Mr. Ferris Greenslet's "James Russell Lowell"; Mr. Henry James's "The Qnestion of Our Speech," with 300 copies of the first edition, uncnt, with paper label, and Mr. Everett T. Tomlinson's "The Red Chief," a tale of the Cherry Valley massacre.

It is easy to see that this book and Mrs. Mary E. Q. Brush's "The Scarlet Patch" will often be confused during the coming Winter, especially as both are stories of New York in the Revolution. The latter book tells of a Tory organization almost equally dangerons tn friend and foe, and the conspicuous Indian character is friendly to the Whigs. It is published by Messrs. Lee & Shepard, and has illnstrations by Mr. George W. Picknell, whose skill even children can hardly help noting.

Messrs. L. C. Page & Co. are bringing ont Dumas's "Celebrated Crimes of the Russian Court," with sixteen portraits and an introduction by Mikael Gortshakov. Some of the historical papers were translated for Every Saturday, some appeared in London magazines, bnt nearly all the book appears for the first time in English.

The Cathedral Series is continued by "The Cathedrals and Churches of the Rhine," by Francis Miltoun and Miss Blanche McManus, and it will be found to have all the useful appendices of the former volumes and an index. The twenty-four full-page pictures are rendered by the same process used in "The Cathedrals of Southern France," and more than fifty sketches in line are added.

The Merrymount Press is about tn enlarge its borders by the addition of a bindery, and already a choice array of fair volumes has been added to the attractions of its library. Its chief work will be simple, durable bindings, "sewn on bands," but the work is to be in charge of Mr. Peter Verburg, designer and pupil of Mr. Douglas Cockerell, and both special designs and reproductions of any desired elaboration will be furnished.

Mr. Page having set the example of free speech, Mr. Henry Holt will follnw with an Atlantic Monthly paper on "The Commercialization of Literature," tn appear in the November number. It should be an interesting paper if it do justice to certain firms. Other papers in the same number will be "The Country in November," by Mr. H. C. Merwin; "Telephone Development in the United States," by F. W. Coburn; "How to Know the Fallacies," by Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers; "Immigration in the South," by Mr. Robert De C. Ward, and "Experiences of a Census Taker," by W. H. Allen, a title promising something in the way of forbidden fruit, if the printed assurances of the Census Bureau's envelopes be of any significance.

M. Maeterlinck will appear in a later number with a disquisition on "Our Anxinus Morality," a title exciting one's curiosity as to the second person included in tbe pronoun, and "Woman Suffrage in the Tenements," by Miss Elizabeth McCracken. Prof. N. S. Shaler will contribute an article on "Exploration."

How to Remain Young.

Dr. Grace Peckham Murray, member of the New York State Medical Society, the Academy of Medicine, &c., in her new book, "The Fountain of Youth; or, Personal Appearance and Personal Hygiene," (12mo. Pp. 205. Cloth. Illustrated: New York: The Frederick A. Stokes Company. $1.60 net. Postage, 15 cents,) gives practical and simple directions for the preservation of health and beauty through careful attention to the daily "needs" nf the body. The substance of each chapter has appeared in The Delineator, and the volume treats of the face, the complexion, the eyes, ears, and nose, the mouth and teeth, the care of the voice, the neck and arms, the hair, the limbs, the use and abuse of cosmetics, obesity, physical culture, dress, and "The Spirit and the Body."

Dr. Murray, besides drawing from her own experience, has consulted works in French, German, and English and availed herself, she says, of suggestions and the results of experiments.

There are 134 illustrations in the book. These are from photographs taken under the personal supervision of Dr. Murray and show the correct way to wash the face, scalp massage, face massage, how to wash the teeth, how to smooth ont wrinkles, the position of the foot in a high-heeled shoe thus causing deformities, the care of the hair, hnw to make the shape of eyes, ears, and nose more nearly perfect, &c.

The Old Park Theatre.

A new story of older New York, which centres about the old Park Theatre, is "Caroline nf Cortlandt Street," by Wesmer Jay Mills. The Park Theatre, over opposite City Hall Park, has left its mark upon etreet nomenclature in a narrow passageway still existing between Beekman and Ann Streets—back of Park Row—called Theatre Alley to this day. This particular romance tells of a certain coquettish lady of the first part of the century who dwelt in Perth Amboy, and whose fatner, a Whitebush of Cortlandt Street, had married an actress—famous at the Park in those days. This lady, Rose by her right name, personates one Caroline Whitebush, a cousin and a member of the British aristocracy, and so imposes herself upon her proud Cortlandt Street kinsfolk, who have cut off her father's disgraced brand from the family tree. And the false Caroline has fun and adventure. Mr. Mills is a young man who is, it seems, deeply interested in "historic" Jersey and Manhattan. The Harpers will publish the book Oct. 12.

Religious Conditions To-day.

Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall's volume of lectures on "The Universal Elements of the Christian Religion: An Attempt to Interpret Contemporary Religious Conditions" is in active preparation for immediate issue by the Fleming H. Revell Company. These are the Cole Lectures for 1905, delivered by Dr. Hall before Vanderbilt University.

In these lectures Dr. Hall has tried to discover tbe deeper tendency of the religious thinking of tbe present time, in which the critical movement, the modern view of the Bible, the declining interest in sectarianism, the increased cosmopolitanism and the larger conception of world Christianization are powerful elements. He speaks "from the point of view of one holding the Pauline and Johannine view of the Person and Work of our Blessed Lord."

WAR AS A SCIENCE.

Last Essays of Col. Henderson, Stonewall Jackson's Biographer —Lessons of Recent Wars.

Two English officers have broken away from the tradition of the army that one must not be too keen—two have done so pre-eminently, that is—Major Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice and the late Col. George F. R. Henderson The latter especially is of interest to Americans, because he studied tbe civil war closely and has written a good deal about it—for an Englishman witb very great impartiality. He died in 1903, and his scattered writings and essays have been collected by one of his pupils; and it is noteworthy that even in his latest lectures and articles he refers to our war as one most fruitful in lessons for his own country.

To the volume of his last essays Lord Roberts contributes a memoir, less perfunctory than most of that rather overrated soldier's appreciations. From this it appears that Henderson was born in St. Heller, Jersey, in 1854, and, graduating from Oxford, became a Second Lieutenant in the army in 1878. Lord Roberts notes that he was Captain of the cricket eleven at Sandhurst; probably he studied there, too—Sandhurst being like Columbia College: "There's no reason why a man should study, but there's nothing to prevent him, if he's inclined that way." In 1882 Henderson was in Egypt, fighting Arabs and studying Arabic. Tben be went to Bermuda, where the idea of writing a history of the war of secession entered his mind, and in 1885 he visited the Virginia battlefields, where he studied the fighting on the spot. In the same year he entered the Ordnance Department to obtain better pay and more leisure. While stationed at Fort George, in Inverness-shire, be wrote his first book, "The Campaign of Fredericksburg," especially for the instruction of the officers of the local volunteers. Then he studied German, and produced a book on Spicheren, one of the battles of the Franco-German war of 1870. In 1889 he went to Sandhurst as instructor in tactics, and in 1892 was transferred to the Staff College. At the former place he began his study of Stonewall Jackson, not published until 1898—at once his own and his subject's chief monument. Lord Roberts writes of this:

> For some time before war was declared I had given a considerable amount of thought to the probability of hostilities in South Africa and the measures which should be adopted to meet such an outbreak. While still thinking over this problem I read "Stonewall Jackson," and was much struck with the extraordinary effect which strategy, whether Lee's or their own regiments. Nor did Mr. Davis, taught by military experience, desert a commander because he had been unfortunate. The chief army of the North was commanded by no less than six different officers, each one of whom, except the last, was degraded for ill-success." Then untrained civilians (President and Secretaries) overruled Generals as they pleased, and intruded other untrained civilians into military positions, with resultant defeat, until at last Grant was made Commander in Chief, with a free hand. We know all this; but perhaps it might affect our future Presidents and Secretaries if they knew that other people knew it too—and that those others could set down our big "butchers' bills" to the necessities of our politics.

THE last three chapters of the book are entitled "The Training of Infantry for Attack," "Foreign Criticism," and "The British Army." These all deal with recent events. In the first, Henderson concludes from a study of recent wars that "when two forces meet whose armament is equal the slaughter is not likely to be abnormal. Shrapnel, Maxims, and the small bore do not seem to increase the butcher's bill to the extent that some would have us believe." The Russo-Japanese war bears out this deduction. Col. Henderson's death, when only 48, was a loss to our own army, as well as to that of his own country.

ISLAMISM.

MOHAMMED AND THE RISE OF ISLAM. By D. S. Margoliouth. (Heroes of the Nations.) 12mo. Pp. xxvi.-481. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

MOHAMMED has arrived late at his place in the Heroes of the Nations Series, which be would seem pre-eminently to deserve. His life contained the seeds of results most important for the world, and the history of his activity touches the world's history at many points. Mr. Margoliouth has given an elaborate account of it, and of the circumstances and surroundings from which the power of Islam was derived. There is, of course, much material: Mohammed has been thoroughly studied from all points of view and with all sorts of prepossessions, and the author cites from innumerable authorities, which he has well at his command.

He gives first a survey of the condition of Arabia and Arab life at the time when Mohammed first appeared. In speaking of the forty years of Mohammed's career that preceded his

MAKERS OF CANADA.

New Biographies of Champlain, the Explorer, and Elgin, the Colonial Governor.*

By Arrangement with The London Times.

THE number of books that has appeered on Canada lately seems to indicate that a spirit of patriotic pride in the past is keeping pace with the spread of civilization into the wilds and the extraordinary development of enterprise. "The Makers of Canada," written by Canadians, promises to be a valuable and instructive series. It begins very appropriately with Champlain, the founder of Quebec, selecter of the site of Montreal, who may be said to have been the Father of New France. In his "Life of Lord Elgin," Sir John Bourinot remarks that we should not forget to pay a tribute to the French Canadians, who built up a province by patience and industry, in despite of the indifference and neglect of their Kings. In fact, we are struck by the indifference in those early days of French and English alike to the possession of a magnificent transatlantic dominion. At the retrocession of Canada, after Quebec had capitulated to Kirke, the bargaining turned on pounds and pence, on the value of half a dozen fur stores and a couple of captured ships. It was against that indifference with intrigue and corruption that the enthusiastic Champlain had to contend through a strenuous life of arduous toil and frequent disappointment; often disgusted, he never despaired, and his success was extraordinary considering his means. We do not think that Mr. Dionne praises him too highly in a volume in which the only serious fault we can find is a certain lack of sequence. Once, for example, we are puzzled to find Champlain a prisoner on a British ship when we have heard nothing of his capture. The explanation is given in the following chapter, which tells of the surrender of Quebec. That was the most trying of the great colonizing experiences, and in every respect he was an extraordinary man. He took all practical business for his province; he was statesman, politician, explorer, cartographer, and something of a courtier as well.

Had his thoughts turned to the Church in place of the army he would have been the most zealous of missionaries and carried the cross into the wilds like any of the Jesuit martyrs. As it was, as a devout and bigoted Catholic he assented to the policy of Richelieu, who desired that in the New France there should be no conflict of creeds.

BUT it must be remembered that that was the time of the wars of the religion, and that Champlain in early youth had borne arms against the Rochellois. We chanced lately upon a contemporary passage in the Marine Archives of Paris which confirms all that Mr. Dionne says in his praise:

He was the very man for such a scheme; a great courage, wisdom, piety, of great experience; a robust body which rendered him indefatigable, capable to endure hunger, heat, and cold.

Indefatigable he certainly was; eighteen times he crossed the Atlantic to seek support and fresh resources for the settlements he was nursing, to induce merchant capitalists to back his enterprises, to make interest at Court, and find influential patrons. With his energy and eloquence, he generally had his way, but when his back was turned and he had taken passage for one side or other he invariably left trouble behind him. Sometimes, it must be owned, his settlements were ill-chosen, and the mortality among the adventurers was needlessly great. Scurvy was even a more terrible scourge on land than in overcrowded ships; and it seems strange that Champlain, a practical savant, knew nothing of the Indian specific which had saved Curtice's people on a second visitation.

The mortality was great, and the misfortune was that colonists only came out by driblets till Richelieu's Company of the "Hundred Associates" took the matter more seriously in hand. Champlain's slender forces were perhaps his best apology for engaging in the barbarous Indian wars and aiding the Hurons against the Iroquois. He had to choose between fighting with the savages or against them, and indirectly the gain was great, for it enabled him to prospect and survey a vast extent of country. Later, when he reluctantly capitulated to Kirke, in the hamlet he had stockaded on the heights of Quebec, he had barely forty fighting men under his command. His own fortunes and those of his friends and partners fluctuated as monopolies were granted or withdrawn. It seems even now a question, as matter of public policy, how far those monopolies were wise or the reverse. On the one hand, they were almost indispensable to a private company with limited means; on the other, when they were withdrawn, a great impulse was given to general trade. In every case Champlain, as deputy of the King's Lieutenant, whose sole function seems to have been to draw pay and sell places, had endless trouble with the agents and clerks of the Norman and Breton traders. No men had done more to encourage the trade which was to be the life of the colony, for no man had greater influence with the Indians. If he was calumniated and cursed in life, he died universally regretted, for even his unfriends realized their loss, and now a stately monument in his own city of Quebec records his deeds and commemorates his virtues. His will was probably dictated on his deathbed by his father confessor, for in contrast to all the actions of a noble life, it sets legality and natural affection alike at defiance.

SIR JOHN BOURINOT'S life of Lord Elgin is as eulogistic as that of Champlain. It supplements the recent biography by Mr. Wrong, and it only concerns itself with Lord Elgin's administration of Canada. Even so, it is less of a life than a study of Canadian politics, and few men understood them in all their details more thoroughly than the late Sir John. He traces besides with fair impertiality the embarrassing social conditions—notably the institutions and sentiments, the legacy of the French régime, with which Lord Elgin had to deal. It was his Lordship's lot to be invariably charged with delicate missions, in Jamaica, China, Japan, and the India of the Mutiny, when a brilliant career was prematurely cut short. But of all the posts he was sent to fill, that of Canada seemed the least enviable. Sir John Bourinot's laudation might appear excessive, for he presents an almost perfect character and an ideal statesman.

Yet the testimony of Mr. Buchanan when American Minister in London, who had often transacted business with the Canadian Governor, was scarcely less flattering, and during the first years of the Governor Generalship English and American relations had been severely strained. When Lord Elgin landed in Quebec the country was slowly recovering from the ravages of the recent rebellion, and racial animosities were at fever heat. The French of the lower province had been goaded into revolt by what they rightly called the working of a Constitution. Their grievances had been recognized, the Constitution had been remodeled, and the new Governor was there to apply the principles Lord Durham had advocated. From the first he rose superior to party, and, though his own sympathies were notoriously with the Conservatives, he always held to the principle that the strongest political party must have the conduct of affairs.

The French Canadians, who had complained of exclusion from power, were conciliated by a fair share of the administration. Generally, and with good reason, the most popular of Governors, there was a time when he provoked a storm of unpopularity, which put his life in actual peril and gave him an opportunity of proving the courage which had been questioned. It was as to indemnifying for their losses men who had been actually in revolt or were notoriously rebel sympathizers, and when the Governor gave his assent to the bill of indemnity the policy may have been a prudent one. But to sufferers smarting from wrongs it naturally seemed overgenerous, and we cannot agree with Sir John when he asserts that the opposition led by Sir Allan McNab was not one of principle.

NOR was it only with political complications he had to deal. The economic situation was bad as could be, trade was paralyzed, commerce was languishing, and by the crushing navigation laws and the new free-trade legislation the country was being brought to the verge of bankruptcy. Even the loyal English, in disgust at disregarded appeals, were turning their thoughts to annexation to the States. That, Lord Elgin determined, must be avoided at any cost, if his counsels could influence the home Government. It was thanks to him, though only after some years, that the navigation laws were repealed—it was he whose tactful diplomacy negotiated the reciprocity treaty at Washington—floated in champagne, as Laurence Oliphant said—an episode barely touched by Sir John, but which deserved more elaborate notice. Profoundly interested in the future of Canada, an imperialist before the word had been invented, when answering a mischievous speech of the Premier, Lord John Russell, he declared it to be an unsound and dangerous theory that British colonies could not attain maturity without separation. Finally, in his prescience of the grand possibilities of the future, he gave a great impulse to the railways construction and other public works which are making such marvelous progress in our time. In truth, we may agree with Sir John Bourinot that in all circumstances and in every clime he was one of the greatest of English Viceroys.

HARPER'S BOOK NEWS.

The Gambler

"Bound to be the literary sensation of the hour," declares the New York Sun of this new novel by the author of The Masquerader. Mrs. Thurston has surpassed herself. The Gambler is more than a breathless story of striking incidents. It portrays a fascinating and unusual heroine, and in the moving story of her life the tale rises to tremendous heights.

A beautiful Irish girl, descended from a long line of ancestors cursed with a passion for gambling, thrown abruptly into fashionable society and becoming at once the centre of attraction—that is the situation. Her whirl of pleasure results in debts, difficulties, intrigue, until love transforms and irradiates all. For the author of The Masquerader here are tremendous possibilities, and Mrs. Thurston has made a great book of them all.

With Flash-light and Rifle

This book, now creating a sensation in Germany, is the most remarkable study of wild animals that has ever been made. It is profusely illustrated with startling photographs taken at night by flashlight, showing wild beasts in their native haunts in the African wilds. Many aspects of their life are now revealed for the first time to the human eye. Mr. C. G. Schilling's adventures while taking the pictures are of graphic interest and read like fairy tales.

The Travelling Thirds

Gertrude Atherton has told no more brilliant or captivating story than this. The Moultons resolve to include Spain in their European trip, even if they have to travel third-class. The brilliant sunshine brings about a kind of love madness among the sober Americans and they become intriguers in a land of intrigues. The close comes as a decided surprise, and is achieved by a bold stroke of imagination.

Mrs. Raffles

John Kendrick Bangs has most amusingly parodied the celebrated Raffles by narrating the burglaries in which, after Raffles' death, his widow and Bunny are concerned. There are many hits, sly and open, at the foibles of society and at recent events of public importance.

QUERIES.

TO secure attention in this department every communication must be signed with the full name and address of the inquirer, which will not be published unless the inquirer so desires. Trivial questions will not be heeded. Queries will be answered in the order of their receipt, and as the number received weekly is very large and the pressure upon our columns is always very great, inquirers must always be prepared to await their turn.

"E. N. M.," Charlottesville, Va.—(1) Where can I get full information about the Cecil Rhodes scholarship? The conditions, requirements, terms, &c.? (2) Who publishes the works of W. W. Jacobs, the English humorist? What books has he written? Give a short sketch of his life. How high does he rank as a humorist? Is there a neat, nice-looking edition of his books? The only edition I have seen is a very cheap looking and undesirable one. (3) What is Mark Twain's present address? (4) Do you know of a good biography or autobiography of the following authors: Mark Twain, (S. L. Clemens,) Dumas the elder, and Sienkiewicz?

1. Dr. George R. Parkin, who may be addressed at Columbia College, this city. 2. A number of publishers; he has no one publisher. He has written these books: "Many Cargoes," 1896; "Sea Urchins," 1898; "A Master of Craft," 1900; "Light Freights," 1901; "At Sunwich Port," 1902; "The Lady of the Barge," 1902; "Odd Craft," 1903; "Dialstone Lane," 1904; "The Skipper's Wooing," 1904. He was born in London in 1863, and was in the Savings Bank Department of the English Post Office from 1883 to 1890. He stands well up among the humorists of the day. There is no single edition of his books; but you can get most of them in good editions. 3. Care of Harper & Brothers, this city. 4. We do not know of a real biography of Mr. Clemens; his "autobiography" is ons only in name. You will find something of him in any modern cyclopaedia. Dumas's life has been written a number of times; recent lives are by Arthur F. Davidson ($3.75) and by Harry A. Spurr ($2.) Sienkiewicz's life is to be found in encyclopaedias only.

W. E. SLACK, Tompkinsville, N. Y.—Will you kindly inform me which of the three astronomers, Bessel, Le Verrier, or John Couch Adams, made the discoverey of the existence of Neptune? I am under the impression that Frederich Wilhelm Bessel either discovered Neptune or indicated its existence in 1840. What are the best-known works of Bessel on astronomy? Is not Adams the author of some scientific works, and if so what are they?

It seems that Adams's letter to Sir George Airy of Oct. 21, 1845, contained the proof of the existence of Neptune; this was not opened by Airy for some months, and in May, 1846, the French astronomer Leverrier announced his conclusions that a planet existed in a certain place—where Adams had placed it. The planet itself was discovered by Galle on Sept. 23, 1846, from Leverrier's indications. Bessel seems to have been a man of a body. His equality with most of the learned men of her time, especially with young Arouet, later known as Voltaire, and in fact in her old age became the social arbitress of Paris. There are many biographies of her, most of them incorrect; you will find her mentioned in any cyclopaedia.

GEORGE M. MATHER, Brooklyn.—I cut the following from a recent magazine. Is it fact or fiction? "China has many strange things. One is a stone bridge, seven miles long, near the part of the Kaiser Sea. It is supported by stone arches seventy-two feet high. The Brooklyn and St. Louis bridges are playthings beside this Chinese work of beauty, art, and utility."

It seems to be wholly fiction.

"W. L. G.," New York.—I have a dim recollection of being told that some years ago the publishers of the Oxford Bible offered a reward for the discovery of any typographical errors, and that so many errors were thus brought to their attention they were compelled to withdraw their offer. Can you tell me if there is any truth in this, and, if so, about what time was the offer made? Do you know of any other instance in which the publisher of a book offered to the public a reward for the discovery of errors in a book?

We do not know this story. The famous Venetian printers, the Aldi, used to hang their proof sheets on the door of their printing house and offer a reward for errors discovered upon them; by this means they practically eliminated the possibility of mistakes in their books. The London Times used to offer a reward for every error discovered—or it is said that it used to do so; but it does not do so nowadays.

GEORGE D. RICHMOND, Nantucket, Mass.—Kindly give me names of any books of recent publication on the Island of Dominica, of the Leeward Islands.

The colony issues annual blue books; besides these are F. Dodsworth, "The Book of the West Indies," 1904; E. A. H. de R. Walker, "The West Indies and the Empire," 1901.

Mrs. J. R. E., Philadelphia.—Do you know the author of the Universal Prayer? Was it written by an Englishman, who he was, or what year? We cannot find out.

"The Universal Prayer" was written by Alexander Pope, and appeared first in 1738. It is too long to print here, but may be found in many anthologies and hymnals; it begins: "Father of all! in every age."

M. E. K., Brooklyn.—Can you inform me who wrote the poeme of which the following is a part, and whether the same were put to music and where I could find them:

(1) "Oh, rest in the Lord,
Wait patiently for Him,
And He shall give thee
Thy heart's desires."

(2) "Oh, that we two were Maying,
Over the fragrant leas."

1. This is in Mendelssohn's oratorio of "Elijah." The words were chosen by Julius Schuhring, D. D., the English translation was by William Bartholomew. The oratorio was produced at Birmingham, England, on Wednesday, Aug. 26, 1846. 2. Charles Kingsley, in his "Saint's Tragedy." It has been set to music.

NEW FALL BOOKS.

Educational and Scientific Works, Poetry and Fiction.

NOVELISTS are not the only authors whose books are entitled to be classed as "best sellers." Not infrequently books of which the general public rarely hears achieve this enviable distinction; as, for example, Dr. Frederick H. Sykes's "Elemeotary English Composition." In the short time since its publication last May by the Scribners the book has been adopted for exclusive use for a period of five years in all the schools of Mississippi. In addition to this, three editions have been required by the demand resulting from the adoption of the book throughout the country in many of the largest and most representative cities, the sales, it is announced, amounting in those few months to about 16,000 copies. Dr. Sykes is connected with the Teachers' College, Columbia University.

An answer to Haeckel's "Riddle of the Universe" (Harpers) has been written by Sir Oliver Lodge, and G. P. Putnam's Sons will bring out the book early next month under the title, "Life and Matter." In his opening chapter Sir Oliver writes: "So far as Prof. Haeckel's writings are read by the thoroughly educated and well-informed they can do nothing but good. They may not, indeed, convey anything particularly new, but they furnish an interesting study in scientific history and mental development. So far, however, as they are read by the unbalanced and uncultured persons with no sense of proportion and but little critical faculty, they may do harm unless accompanied by a suitable qualification or antidote, especially an antidote against the bigotry of their somewhat hasty and destructive portion."

The John Lane Company will issue immediately from the Bodley Head the new two-volume edition of the poems of William Watson. There will be, besides many new verses, some of his better known pieces, and others that have been revised. The work is edited by J. A. Spender, the well-known critic. Vol. I. contains elegiac poems, odes, and lyrics, and narrative and miscellaneous poems, and in Vol. II. are sonnets, epigrams, and early poems, and sonnets on public affairs.

Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish next Tuesday the long-awaited book by A. Barbeau on "The World of Fashion and of Letters at Bath Under Queen Anne and the Georges." A lively picture is here given of the watering place famous as a rendezvous for royalties and society during the final years of the seventeenth century.

Early in November G. P. Putnam's Sons will issue "Through Corsica with a Camera," a volume of travel by Margaret d'Este.

A. S. Barnes & Co. announce for publication at the end of next week "The Business of Life Insurance," by Miles M. Dawson. This is the result of a quarter of a century's experience. The author is said to speak plainly and fairly for the benefit of policy holders and also in the belief that his words may be of use to those connected professionally with the business of life insurance.

"The Autobiography of Anthony Trollope" is being added by Dodd, Mead & Co. to their new uniform edition of Trollope's novels. This house will also issue in a few days a new volume of poems by Paul Laurence Dunbar, consisting of a selection of some of his dialect pieces. The book will be illustrated from photographs and will also have marginal decorations in color.

Henry Holt & Co. have down for publication in about a fortnight "The Wizards of Ryetown," a "droll" book by A. C. Smedley and L. A. Talbot. Although written for children, it is announced that it will also interest grown-ups, who will be especially amused by Miss Augustine MacGregor's illustrations.

G. P. Putnam's Sons have in active preparation for issue this Autumn a new volume in their Questions of the Day Series—"Social Theories and Social Facts," by William Morton Grinnell, a well-known New Yorker.

"The Tides of Barnegat" is the title of the new serial by F. Hopkinson Smith, author of "Caleb West," "The Fortunes of Oliver Horn," "Tom Grogan," &c., which will begin in the November Scribner's Magazine. The scenes are laid on the coast of New Jersey, a section abounding in the romance, humor, tragedy, and glamour of the sea. The illustrations will be in colors from paintings by George Wright.

The Frederick A. Stokes Company announces for early issue the Flower Series, by N. Hudson Moore, author of "Old Pewter, Copper, Brass, and Old Sheffield Plate," &c. The volumes will contain stories about the different flowers—lilies, roses, violets, lilacs, tulips, and chrysanthemums. There will be legends of Japan, Persia, India, the England of Chaucer and Shakespeare, and other countries. Each volume will be illustrated with two-color pictures of natural flowers.

Five volumes are being added by the John Lane Company to the New Pocket Library. They are Beaconsfield's "Coningsby," "Henrietta Temple," "The Young Duke," (which also includes "The Rise of Iskander" and "The Infernal Marriage,") and "Alroy," (in the same volume also being "Popanilla," "Count Alarcos," and "Ixion in Heaven," and Edward FitzGerald's "Euphranor: A Dialogue on Youth," with an introduction by Frederic Chapman, who places it beside Cicero's treatise on "Old Age.")

D. Appleton & Co. are bringing out this week "At the Emperor's Wish," by Oscar King Davis, with decorations in Japanese designs and colored pictures. Other books from this house are "Duke of Devil-May-Care," by Harrie Dickson, Senator Beveridge's "The Young Man and the World," and Kirk Monroe's "The Outcast Warrior."

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. announce for Autumn publication three new books in the Riverside Press Editions—"Love Poems of John Donne," edited by Prof. Charles Eliot Norton; "Sailors' Narratives of Voyages Along the New England Coast," edited by George Parker Winship, and Laurence Sterne's "A Sentimental Journey." The first two will appear this month, followed by the third in November.

Charles Scribner's Sons are bringing out a new edition, at a reduced price, of the late Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge's popular book for children, "Hans Brinker; or, The Silver Skates."

Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish Oct. 19 "The Country House," by E. C. Holtzoper. Advice is given in the book on the site, plans, and building of a house; the exterior finish, style of doors, windows, and fireplaces; plumbing, heating, lighting, ventilation, water supply, and drainage; the style, size, and equipment of the different rooms, with an additional chapter on contracts and specifications. For the same date is announced the book on "Life and Religion," by Max Müller.

Apropos of the present situation in Morocco, Aflalo's volume on "The Truth About Morocco," published by the John Lane Company, is timely. It is the work of an Englishman, who protests against the terms of the entente cordiale between France and Great Britain, and writes strongly about Kaiser Wilhelm's entrance into the problem.

The Fleming H. Revell Company publishes in this country "The World Without a Child," by Coulson Kernahan, which is reported to be attracting much attention in England. It is a picture of life in Anglo-Saxon cities where the race suicide theory is carried to its logical outcome. The author recently said that "In many ways, it is a book for women more than for men."

The Frederick A. Stokes Company will soon publish Mrs. Frank Learned's (Priscilla Wakefield's) new book, "Ideals for Girls," which contains articles originally published in The Delineator. She writes about the "secret of charm," manners, brides, friendship, books, pictures, letter writing, personal appearance, work, money spending, girlhood, &c.

D. Appleton & Co. have down for the middle of the month the new editions de luxe of Rudyard Kipling's "The Seven Seas" and Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Seats of the Mighty." Both will appear with colored illustrations, silk linings, gilt tops.

A series of articles on the young man and country life will appear in forthcoming numbers of The Century from the pen of Prof. Liberty H. Bailey, Director of the New York State School of Agriculture at Cornell and author of several books on outdoor life. The papers will give the reasons for the author's belief that the farm can be made attractive and better worth the young man's while. He will also show the cause of the farmer's migration to the city.

EASTERN CALIPHATE.

MODERN research is doing as much for the Arabs of the so-called Dark Ages as it has done for the people of Ur of the Chaldees. For what it has done for Abram and his forefathers and friends, one need merely turn to Dr. Sayce's edition of Genesis; for what it is doing for the Arabs of a thousand years ago, one should read Mr. G. Le Strange's "Lands of the Eastern Caliphate." The volume deals with Mesopotamia, Persia, and Central Asia, from about 650 to 1400 A. D. Those were the Dark Ages of Europe; in the Caliphate they were the Golden Age of the Arabs. Mr. Le Strange's book is nominally a geography, but it is more than that—it is a fairly close description of Western Central Asia during the time of its greatest prosperity, with especial reference, of course, to the geography of the country.

ARAB writers who lived between 864 and 1600 A. D. afford the material which Mr. Le Strange has worked into his book and into an earlier volume on the history of Bagdad. Twenty-four such writers are named by our author. His plan is that followed by many of them—to describe briefly the Caliphate as a whole, giving (in words as well as by an outline map) the relative positions of the provinces composing it, and then he describes at some length those provinces separately. Most important of them was Irak, the Babylonia of earlier times, the chief city of which, as well as the capital of the Caliphate, was Baghdad, the city of Haroun al-Raschid, Aaron the Orthodox. From Baghdad in every direction ran highways, leading to the uttermost parts of the Caliphate; this road system is described by contemporaries, and with Mr. Le Strange's help it becomes almost as well known to us as that of our own country a century ago, or even less. The most famous of the roads, and Mr. Le Strange says the best described, was the great Khurasan Road, which connected the capital with the frontier towns on the borders of China. "Leaving East Baghdad by the Khurasan gate, it went across the plain to Hulwan;" that might be a road of to-day, instead of one laid out more than twelve centuries ago. The accurate knowledge we have of the roads is due to four Road Books, one of them by the Postmaster of an important province, another by a revenue accountant. After this place, Alamut, had been taken, the other hundred castles of the old man and his assassins were quickly captured and destroyed.

MR. LE STRANGE'S volume is full of allusions to these and other tales of the East. It does not purport to be a history of the Caliphate—merely a geography; so none of the stories is told at length. But the book is extremely suggestive and provocative of thought; it tells such tales as it has to tell in an interesting way, and throws a strong side light on the civilization of the Arab "misbelievers" at a time when Christian Europe was groveling in outer darkness.

PHYSICIAN TO SOCIETY.

VITAL QUESTIONS. By Henry Dwight Chapin, M. D. 12mo. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.

WHY, asks the author of this little volume, may not the physician to the body be a proper person to offer his advice toward a prescription for the diseases of society? Society is, after all, but the sum of its individuals; its defects are conditioned upon the defects of those individuals, and all the individual defects spring from physiological causes, which it is the physician's business to observe. Obviously, a doctor of medicine is at least as competent to give sociological advice as a doctor of divinity or a doctor of laws or a doctor of polite letters.

Such is the gist of Dr. Chapin's very modest and very reasonable plea for a hearing. What he has to say upon "vital questions" is, as might be expected after such an introduction, neither new nor startling, but it is sane. In brief, he urges prevention instead of cure, a diversion of some, at least, of the organized energies for social betterment from the building of hospitals for the sick and almshouses for the inefficient, to the task of creating sanitary conditions alike in the dwellings and the minds of the poor.

The destruction and reconstruction of society, he says, will still leave in force those laws of nature which have produced the present social troubles, and like causes will produce like effects in any new system. Therefore the dreams of the communist are empty. All schemes of reform, to fact, which look to sweeping changes by force of law are foredoomed to failure. There remain only slow and gradual processes, and especially the substitution of healthful environment for unhealthful,

WIFE KILLED IN DUEL WITH HER HUSBAND

Quarrel Over Money Causes Separation and Shooting.

WOMAN FIRED FIRST SHOT

She Was a Relative of Timothy L. Woodruff — Son Grieves Over a Damaged Political Future.

Mrs. Jessie Hopkins, a relative of ex-Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, was killed yesterday morning in a pistol duel with her husband, from whom she was separated. The shooting occurred in the hallway of her apartments, at 46 Johnson Street, Brooklyn, which she was occupying with her son, Harry D. Hopkins. Hopkins is well known in Republican politics in Brooklyn.

Denton H. Hopkins, the husband, who is a steel engraver and steel letter manufacturer, was locked up, charged with homicide. He has a fortune estimated by his son at between $500,000 and $750,000, and has practically retired from business.

The duel was witnessed only by the husband's sister, Mrs. Jennie Bruyn of Walkill, N. Y. Mrs. Bruyn was locked up with her brother in the Adams Street Police Station. She is held as a material witness.

Hopkins says that his wife fired the first shot. The bullet passed through his left hand. His statement is corroborated by Mrs. Bruyn. That the wife fired only one shot was proved by the single empty chamber in the revolver found beside her. The husband fired three times, every shot taking effect. He was inclined to think that he had fired four times, but there were only three empty cartridges in his revolver.

The killing is traceable to a quarrel over money matters, in which the son sided with his mother. Mrs. Hopkins left her husband three months ago, thirty-three years after their marriage, and has not since lived with him. Six weeks ago her son rented the Johnson Street apartments for her, and made his home there with her.

After the separation Hopkins circulated numerous charges against his wife, claiming that he had deeded over much of his property to her and that she was trying to get rid of him. He told neighbors that she had put poison in his food. There was a family row, in which the husband asserted he was assaulted by both his wife and son.

Certain it is that the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins were so strained that they both went armed, and that when they met at the door of the wife's home they opened fire on each other without a word.

At 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning a man with blood dripping from a wound in his left hand ran into the Adams Street Police Station and up to Sergt. Kennedy's desk.

"I want help," he said. "My wife shot me and I shot her."

Capt. Shaw and Detectives Ticker, Mahon, and Carberry were in the station house at the time. They questioned the man. He gave his name and told where the shooting had occurred.

"I guess you'd better send around there," he said. "My wife may be badly hurt."

Capt. Shaw ordered the man locked up, and, with three detectives, hurried to the Johnson Street house, which is just around the corner. In the entrance was a woman, crying that her sister-in-law had been murdered. This woman was Mrs. Bruyn, who had run out into the street to summon help, and was unable to get back into the house.

Capt. Shaw gained entrance by ringing the bell to another apartment, and the policemen ran up to the third floor, on which were the apartments occupied by Mrs. Hopkins and her son. The door was open. In the private hall, about twenty feet from the entrance and directly in front of the bathroom door, they found Mrs. Hopkins. She was dead when they reached her. Near her was her revolver.

Mrs. Bruyn was asked by Capt. Shaw to tell what she knew of the tragedy. This is her story:

"Mrs. Hopkins left her husband about three months ago. They had quarreled over money matters. They were both money mad. She visited me in Wallkill for a few weeks, and then came back to Brooklyn to these apartments, which her son had leased for her. I came to Brooklyn a day or so ago and took rooms at 366 Greene Avenue. I called on Mrs. Hopkins yesterday afternoon, and we made an engagement to go shopping this morning. We were quite friendly. One of my objects in coming to Brooklyn was to see if I could not effect a reconciliation between her and my brother.

"When I got to the house we sat in the dining room and chatted for a while. I told her that it was foolish for a man and wife who had lived together so long to part, but she said she did not think she would ever return to her husband.

"We were just preparing to go out shopping when there was a knock at the door of the private hall. Mrs. Hopkins answered it. When she opened the door her husband was standing there. I heard her say, 'What are you doing here?' and then she drew a pistol and fired at him. He threw up one hand as she did so, and pulled his pistol with the other. He aimed at her and she backed away. As she did so he fired and she fell.

"Then there were several other shots. After she was down he shot at her again, and I caught him by the coat and pulled him back. Then he turned and ran out of the door and to the street. I ran down, too, to get help. I am sure she fired first."

While Capt. Shaw and his detectives were on their way to the house, Sergt. Kennedy sent in a call to the Cumberland Street Hospital for an ambulance. They were still questioning Mrs. Bruyn when the ambulance, in charge of Dr. Deyo, arrived. After examining Mrs. Hopkins's body, he said that death had been almost instantaneous. Coroner Flaherty was summoned, and soon arrived, accompanied by his physician, Dr. Hartung.

He said that one shot had struck Mrs. Hopkins in the left side and had been deflected by a rib. Another struck her in the arm. A third bullet had entered the left breast, above the heart, and passed clear through the lung. That caused death.

At the station house, Hopkins, before he was aware that his wife was dead, told this story:

"I am 53 years old, and my wife is about three years younger. We lived together until our separation at 257 Greene

ELEVATED TRAINS CRASH.

Car Catches Fire in Collision on Third Avenue—One Killed.

In a rear-end collision between two empty south-bound trains on the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad at 185th Street about 7:30 o'clock last evening the first car of the second train was telescoped and completely wrecked. The motorman of the second train was instantly killed. The wreckage of the car flew in every direction, splinters shattering the windows of several coaches of a north-bound train which was passing at the moment of the crash.

Traffic was tied up above 165th Street for three-quarters of an hour, and at midnight the line above 177th Street was still closed.

The first car of the second train caught fire immediately, and was blazing in several places when Roundsman McDermott of the Tremont Avenue Police Station ran in, at the risk of his life—for the power was still on—and dragged out the body of the motorman. The elevated structure took fire. An alarm was sent in, ladders were run up, and the flames were soon subdued.

The trains which collided were bound for the yards at 180th Street and had no passengers. They left Bronx Park about 7:15 o'clock, the second train running several blocks behind the first. At 187th Street there is a sharp curve. The first train, going at fair speed, rounded the curve and was stopped at 185th Street by a warning signal.

The motorman, Frank H. Jennings, with Conductor William E. Wait, walked back through the train to see that the train following was stopped, although this was the duty of the guard on the rear coach. They did not see the guard, and in an instant they saw the second train rounding the curve at a speed of twelve or fifteen miles an hour.

Realizing that a collision was inevitable, they ran forward, and had reached the forward end of the third car when the crash came. The motorman kept on going, followed by the conductor. At the 183d Street station the conductor telephoned the news of the accident to headquarters, with the result that all power above 165th Street was shut off. He also called for the police and turned in a fire alarm. Then he went back to the scene of the wreck. The motorman did not stop at the station, and had not been found up to midnight.

The police from the Tremont station and the firemen had reached the wreck when Wait got back to it. Roundsman McDermott was already in the telescoped car, which had completely mounted the last car of the first train. The Roundsman found the body of the motorman, Jacob Euery, about half the length of the car from his motor box. He had evidently been instantly killed.

The police were unable to find any member of the crew which was bringing the second train down to the yards. At 11 o'clock Abraham Bessler of 388 East Eighty-third Street was arrested by order of Coroner Berry on the charge of homicide and locked up in the Tremont Street Station.

Bessler was the guard on the last coach of the first train, whose duty it was, according to the Coroner, to run back and stop the train following. He was not at his post, the Coroner said, but was in the first car of the train talking to another guard.

None of the passengers on the northbound train was seriously hurt. According to the railroad officials they were pretty badly frightened, and a few were scratched by flying glass when the debris from the telescoped car shattered the windows.

The rear trucks of the last car of the first train and the front trucks of the first car of the second train were both thrown from the track, blocking traffic in both directions until after midnight.

FARMERS KILL A BANDIT.

Wound Two Others and Capture Fourth Member of a Gang.

Special to The New York Times.

WILDROSE, Wis., Oct. 7.—After they had robbed the Post Office here of $300 and made an unsuccessful attempt to loot the Wildrose State Bank, four safe blowers and burglars were surrounded by a posse of farmers in a forest eight miles from here this afternoon. One bandit was killed, two others wounded, and the fourth was captured and brought to jail here.

The burglars, who are believed to be members of the Eddy Fay organization, broke into the Post Office at 1 o'clock this morning and blew up the safe. They afterward went to the State Bank. They put a large quantity of nitro-glycerine into the safe lock, but before they could explode it they were frightened away.

An alarm was given in the village, and the Marshal, with an armed posse, made an investigation before daybreak. At the bank no one dared to go near the safe for fear of exploding the charge of nitroglycerine. An expert was summoned by telegraph from Milwaukee.

Search for the bandits was then begun. Milkmen who came to the village at daybreak reported having seen four rough-looking men along the north road. Fifty men armed with rifles and shotguns took up the trail.

At noon the suspicious men were surrounded in a forest. They were found hiding in underbrush and were told to surrender.

"Come and get us," mockingly shouted one.

A pistol shot from the brush showed that the bandits were ready for a fight. For an hour and a half the thieves and farmers kept up a continued firing, and one by one the bandits were brought down, in spite of their efforts to hide behind fallen logs.

MISHAPS AT BERKSHIRE HUNT.

Guy Ward Hurt, His Horse Killed—Miss Parsons Thrown.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Oct. 7.—The first accident of consequence in the drag runs of the Berkshire Hunt occurred this morning in Richmond, when Guy Ward, whip of the hunt, was thrown from his thoroughbred Emancipation and bruised. The mare was killed.

The run was approaching the first check, with Mr. Ward well up on the hounds, when the horse ran into a woodchuck's hole and plunged heavily forward, breaking her neck. Mr. Ward was thrown about twenty feet. He found another mount and finished the run. Emancipation was a well-known Meadow Brook hunter, and had taken blue ribbons in Lenox and New York.

Miss Gertrude Parsons, daughter of John E. Parsons, also was thrown in the run, but was unhurt. The drag, eight miles over rough bottom, stone walls, and wire fences, was the longest and hardest run of the year.

GAYNOR AND GREENE HERE ON THE WAY SOUTH

Fugitives Taken Across Town Under a Heavy Guard.

RUMOR OF PLOT TO ESCAPE

Prisoners Indicted for Savannah Harbor Swindle and Extradited from Canada After a Five Years' Fight.

Under guard of nine Secret Service men and United States Marshals, Capt. Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor, who were indicted for conspiracy to defraud the Government on harbor improvement contracts five years ago and fled to Canada, passed through this city last night on their way from Montreal to Savannah, Ga., where they are to be tried. Capt. Oberlin M. Carter has already served a term in prison for the same crime.

If the two men, both of whom are gray and not very robust, had been two lusty Wsstern desperadoes, they could not have been more closely guarded. The Secret Service men were silent when questioned regarding the reasons for what appeared to be exaggerated precaution.

It was learned, however, that two or three days before the men were to be brought back to this country reports reached the authorities at Washington that caused the extra guard to be rushed to Montreal to bring the prisoners across the Canadian border.

Secret Service men are not usually employed on such a mission, and in this case it had been intended to follow the ordinary custom. Accordingly United States Marshal George A. White of the Southern District of Georgia went to Montreal accompanied only by James Reilly, one of his deputies. This was about a week ago.

Before he had been in Montreal many hours, however, another of his deputies, Thomas Doyle, received orders to follow his chief in such hurry that he started on his trip before he had time to exchange his Southern straw hat for more suitable headgear.

About the same time an order reached Chief Flynn, who is in charge of the Secret Service Bureau in this city, to start for Montreal at once with a batch of men he could trust. So peremptory was the order that Chief Flynn lost no time in getting under way. He tumbled Agents Moser, Burke, and Ahearn of the New York office out of bed and took them along.

No Details of Rescue Plan.

It could not be learned last night what details had been discovered in connection with the plan to snatch the two fugitives from the hands of the United States authorities at the eleventh hour.

Passengers on the train that brought the prisoners and their guard to this city last night declared, however, that the parlor car in which the party traveled was closely guarded until the train was well over the Canadian frontier, as though an attempt to hold it up and free the prisoners had been expected every moment.

If an escape had been planned, however, it is likely that those concerned were scared off by the extra precautions that had been taken. That the two fugitives had powerful friends in Canada has been shown frequently during the bitter five years' fight of the two men to escape extradition.

The train bearing the prisoners and their guards arrived at the Grand Central Station at 8 o'clock. A squad of Secret Service men in charge of Chief Agent Henry was on hand to escort the party across town to the Pennsylvania ferry at the foot of West Twenty-third Street.

Capt. Greene and Gaynor did not alight from the parlor car at the rear of the Montreal special until all the other passengers had left the train. With Chief Flynn leading the way and closely surrounded by the Secret Service men and United States Marshals, the two prisoners were conducted to three waiting carriages which took them to the ferry.

The prisoners were nattily attired, but all who had seen them before their flight were shocked by the change in their appearance. Capt. Greene's hair and mustache were completely white and his erect military bearing had disappeared and given way to the stoop of an old man.

At the station the two men were met by Laflin L. Kellogg of Rose & Kellogg, who represented them in the criminal proceedings against them in this country. Mr. Kellogg drew back in surprise as Capt. Greene advanced and reached out his hand to greet him. He did not seem to know him at first.

Chief Flynn, with Agent Moser and Mr. Kellogg, got into an omnibus with the prisoners. The other Secret Service men and officers followed in two carriages.

Trip Across the River.

On the trip across the river Gaynor and Greene were so closely guarded that it was impossible for the reporters to get a word with them. Both left the cabin of the ferryboat and went out on deck, where they gazed with apparent enjoyment at the tall structures and the flaming electric signs on the Manhattan side of the North River. At the Pennsylvania terminal Chief Flynn, with the prisoners and Mr. Kellogg, had supper in the restaurant. Then they boarded a sleeper on the midnight train for Savannah.

Few passengers at the Grand Central Station, on the ferryboat, or at the Pennsylvania terminal recognized in the prisoners and their escort anything but ordinary travelers. The two fugitives seemed perfectly at ease and chatted with their guards. Chief Flynn, however, did not lose sight of them for a moment.

The party made the trip to New York in one of the regular parlor cars on the Delaware and Hudson train which left Montreal at 8:40 o'clock yesterday morning. A drawing room in the car had been reserved for Greene and Gaynor by John F. Gaynor, Jr., who accompanied his father on the trip.

Mr. Kellogg, who had a long talk with the two prisoners, said that they were reconciled to their fate, and would make no further effort to prevent the trial, which has been set for the November term of the United States District Court of Southern Georgia. He said they were prepared to give heavy bail, if it could be arranged.

"They left this country against my advice, and I know that by this time they realize their mistake," said Mr. Kellogg.

ROBBERY BY LONDON GANGS.

A Criminal from New York Turns King's Evidence.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Charles Fisher, an American convict now serving a ten years' sentence in England for burglary, was the principal witness for the Crown at the Westminster Police Court to-day in a case against Talbot Bridgewater, describing himself as a medical specialist: Lionel Peyton Holmes, William Edward Shackell, and Elizabeth Foster, said to be Bridgewater's wife, who are charged with conspiracy and with forging the name of Marshall Fox, an American resident in London, to a check for $4,095.

Fisher said he was born in New York and that he had served several sentences in America. He broke jail in Cincinnati in 1892 and escaped to England, but was rearrested and returned to the United States on an extradition warrant.

The case against the defendants dates back to the Summer of 1904. Bridgewater, it is charged, was the originator of the plot. He is alleged to have paid attentions to a woman, the secretary of Mr. Fox, and to have installed Fisher as a boarder in her house at Streatham, a suburb of London.

Fisher, it is said, secured wax impressions of the keys of Fox's safe, and the conspirators had a key made from this and got Fox's checkbook. Later Fisher was arrested in connection with an office-breaking affair and sentenced to ten years in jail. The case has attracted considerable attention from time to time, as the prisoners were brought up on remand. Fisher turned King's evidence and confessed his share in the Fox robbery to an Inspector of Police in the jail where he is working out his sentence.

Fisher's testimony to-day was an exhaustive disclosure of his alleged connection with the case on trial and his career of crime. Since coming to England he has been convicted three times, including his present sentence. He testified that he was the accomplice of a gang working in London and shadowing rich Americans, and it transpired that he was indirectly connected with the recent robbery of a pearl necklace from Christie's.

Fisher said he never moved about without carrying wax for the taking of impressions of locks, and, while not admitting that he was connected with other big robberies, it was evident that he knew much about them. He said he had turned King's evidence because he wished to lead a new life.

Bridgewater asserts that Fisher is hired by the police and that the whole of his alleged confession is a police plot.

MENACED BY VESUVIUS.

Villages in Peril—Pope Appeals for Aid for Earthquake Victims.

NAPLES, Oct. 7.—The northwest crater of Vesuvius is very active.

A great quantity of lava is flowing down the side of the mountain and columns of smoke are seen ascending to an immense height, scattering red-hot ashes over the district in the vicinity.

The stream of lava is assuming alarming proportions, and the eruption is accompanied by loud detonations, which shake the houses in surrounding villages.

It is believed that the eruption has some physical connection with the earthquake shocks which are continuing in Southern Italy, although their force is diminished.

ROME, Oct. 7.—According to the latest official reports 300 villages were destroyed by the earthquake in the Province of Calabria. Reconstruction work, it is estimated, will cost about $80,000,000. The funds contributed up to the present time amount to $400,000.

The Pope is much distressed because of the situation, especially now that the severity of the Autumn weather is felt among the inhabitants of the stricken district. His Holiness to-day received the Right Rev. Francis Bourne, Archbishop of Westminster, and thanked him warmly for opening a collection among the clergy of Westminster, adding: "All good Catholics throughout the world should imitate you."

NEW RAPID FIRER TESTED.

Three Hundred Shots a Minute from Latest Light Field Gun.

A new rapid-firing gun was tested off Sandy Hook yesterday. Rear Admiral Bowles, ex-Chief of the Bureau of Construction, United States Navy; Gen. Joseph Wheeler, several navy and army officers, and a number of civilians watched the test. They went to the proving grounds on the revenue cutter Manhattan yesterday morning.

The gun, which is much larger than a Gatling gun, and is said to be a great improvement on that weapon, is a three-pounder, capable of firing no fewer than 300 shots a minute.

The gun was placed on the cutter's forward deck, covered with canvas, and carefully guarded so far as the inspection by outsiders was concerned. In addition to firing 300 times a minute, it is fitted with an apparatus that completely eliminates all possibility of its becoming overheated through constant firing.

Neither Gen. Wheeler nor Admiral Bowles or any one else in the party, would discuss the merits or demerits of the new piece of ordnance. The tests, it was said, had been entirely satisfactory, and it was predicted as quite probable that the Government would give the gun a thorough trial.

EARL WOULD FIGHT DUEL.

Lord Kimberley Challenges Another County Council Member.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—A sensational scene occurred at the meeting of the Norfolk County Council to-day.

The Earl of Kimberley, son of the late distinguished Liberal statesman of that name, who held many Cabinet offices, is a member of the Council, and he accused a fellow-member named Sapwell of underhand methods, and challenged Sapwell to take a train for France, where "we can fight it out under proper conditions."

The challenge was received with laughter and treated as a joke by other members of the Council. After the meeting had closed the Earl renewed his challenge, and Sapwell proposed to fight in a room of a nearby hotel. The Earl insisted that they must fight abroad, and said that if Sapwell refused he was a coward.

At this point other members of the Council intervened, and later the incident was declared closed.

HUGHES GOES GOLFING; SILENT ABOUT MAYORALTY

Won't Say Till To-morrow Whether He Will Run or Not.

IF ONLY JEROME WOULD HELP!

There's a Republican Indorsement as Reward for the District Attorney's Good Offices.

Before the Notification Committee of the Republican City Convention calls on Charles E. Hughes to-morrow to inform him of his nomination for Mayor, nothing will have been left undone by the Republican leaders to bring to bear upon Mr. Hughes all possible pressure to induce him to accept.

Mr. Hughes went to Nassau yesterday to play golf on the grounds of the Nassau Country Club, of which he is a member. It is his custom to devote one day a week to outdoor recreation. He was accompanied yesterday by Mrs. Hughes and Col. W. C. Beecher.

He returned to the city last evening and was seen at his home, 570 West End Avenue. He appeared to be in excellent spirits, despite the face that he played his worst game of golf yesterday, according to his own statement. When asked if he had any information to give as to his intention to either accept or reject the Mayoralty nomination, Mr. Hughes said:

"I will say nothing further until the Notification Committee waits on me Monday. I feel that is the proper course to pursue."

"Have you seen any of the members of the Notification Committee to-day?"

"I have not."

Mr. Hughes was asked if Senators Armstrong and Tully had endeavored to persuade him not to accept the nomination. He replied that he did not think it would be proper for him to discuss what had been said to him on the subject by any of the members of the Insurance Investigating Committee.

Mrs. Hughes is evidently opposed to her husband accepting the nomination.

"I do not think Mr. Hughes wants it and I do not think it at all desirable," she said.

It was the prevailing impression among the Republican politicians yesterday that Mr. Hughes could not be persuaded to accept. There was all sorts of talk as to the inducements which were being held out to him by the Republican leaders to get him to run. An effort will be made, it was said, to have President Roosevelt express to Mr. Hughes his desire that Mr. Hughes allow his name to go on the ticket.

Senators Armstrong and Tully went to Albany yesterday afternoon for the purpose, it was said, of interesting Gov. Higgins in Mr. Hughes's candidacy. Senator Armstrong was reported as being opposed to Mr. Hughes's acceptance of the nomination, but Senator Tully was being relied upon by the Odell men to present to Gov. Higgins reasons why the Governor should use his best offices to have Mr. Hughes accept.

The Republicans in nominating Mr. Hughes without his consent took a desperate chance, and they were ready yesterday to make any sort of a pledge to him if he would not decline to make the race. Mr. Hughes was one of the Jerome nominators, and it was said that the Republicans in their desperation were even willing to promise Mr. Jerome that he would be nominated by the Republican County Convention without a pledge that he would not accept a Tammany indorsement provided he would use his influence with Mr. Hughes to have him take the Republican Mayoralty nomination.

The Republicans also opened up negotiations with the representatives of William R. Hearst looking to the indorsement of Mr. Hughes by the Hearst forces. Mr. Hearst delayed his letter to the Notification Committee of the municipal ownership forces, and it was given out that his reply to the offer of the Mayoralty nomination which they made to him would not be made public until after Mr. Hughes had given his final answer to the Republican Mayoralty nomination.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff was enthusiastic yesterday over the strength which Mr. Hughes would develop as a candidate if he would accept. Mr. Woodruff's opinion as to the vote-getting qualities of Mr. Hughes was shared by nearly all the Republican politicians who gathered at the Fifth Avenue Hotel to discuss the situation.

A possible embarrassment to Mr. Hughes if he concluded to accept the nomination and still continued to act as the counsel for the Insurance investigation was pointed out by some. It was recalled that one of the most interesting disclosures of the investigation was the payment of $235,000 by the New York Life to be used in legislative work. The inference has been that some, if not a considerable portion of that sum, was used in influencing legislation in Albany during the time that State Chairman Odell was Governor.

If Mr. Hughes became the candidate for Mayor, it was said, and was unable to bring to light what money of the life insurance companies was spent in Albany and who got it, his opponents would quite likely make the charge that he was not doing all that might be done in that direction.

When that suggestion was brought to the attention of Mr. Woodruff he denied indignantly that State Chairman Odell and he had agreed upon Mr. Hughes with any idea that by nominating him they would handicap him in any way in the insurance investigation.

"What Mr. Hughes has already accomplished in the insurance investigation," said Mr. Woodruff, "has so established him in the public confidence that no charge reflecting in any way on his integrity would carry any weight. We would be pleased if Tammany would make an issue on that point. The Republicans started the investigation and they want it to go on to the bitter end."

While the City Convention adjourned subject to the call of the Chair, in order to continue it, if necessary, under the primary law reconvening is not absolutely necessary. The Committee on Vacancies has full power to fill vacancies caused by death or resignation. If the committee should agree on a candidate it has the power to name such candidate. But if the committee should be divided it will be necessary to reconvene the convention.

BARNES ON THE NOMINATION.

Political William of Albany Says If Hughes Won't 'Twill Be Dreadful.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 7.—The Journal, State Committeeman William Barnes, Jr.'s, newspaper, says in an editorial to-night relative to the nomination of Charles E. Hughes for Mayor:

"He undoubtedly is placed in an embarrassing position. He will be charged with having been selected to handle the gas and insurance investigations purely for the purpose of making of himself a Mayoralty candidate, and it will further be held against him that he is required to continue the work he now has in hand and should not be diverted therefrom. He runs, of course, the further risk of defeat, which might remove him from the field of possible candidates for high office in the future.

"Whether an inquisitor would make a good Mayor has not apparently been given consideration, for the reason that a candidate is wanted who will get votes, and in this day of exposure of public officials and business concerns of a semi-public character the people apparently are looking for a Roman holiday and an amphitheatre filled with corpses.

"In case Mr. Hughes should decline the nomination for Mayor he would leave the Republican Party in New York in a deplorable condition."

MISSOURI DEMANDS THAT M'CALL RESIGN

New York Life President Also Told to Make Restitution.

MAY REVOKE ITS LICENSE

State Threatens to Do So Unless Political Contributions Are Replaced Within Thirty Days.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—Insurance Superintendent Vandiver addressed a letter to-day to President McCall of the New York Life demanding a reorganization of the company and the restitution of misappropriated funds, threatening unless this is done to revoke the license of the company to do business in Missouri. The letter says:

"Mr. J. A. McCall, President New York Life Insurance Company:

"Dear Sir: The recent startling disclosures in regard to the management of funds of the New York Life Insurance Company, and particularly the testimony of yourself and of other officers of the company given before the investigating committee of the New York Legislature, makes it my duty as Superintendent of Insurance for the State of Missouri to communicate to your company the views and requirements of this department, to the end that the policy holders in this State may not be defrauded of any portion of the dividends or surplus earnings that are justly due them on the premiums they have paid.

"The public has been very properly taught by yourself and other officials of great insurance companies that the funds of a mutual company constitute a fiduciary trust, held and administered for the sole use of those named as beneficiaries, many of whom will be widows and orphans, and many thousands of people have taken insurance in your company because of this very fact, and the assurance that every dollar of its assets belongs to the policy holders.

"That any portion of the policy holders' premiums or profits on premiums should be diverted to political purposes or other uses not contemplated when the premiums were paid in, and not consistent with the avowed purpose of a life insurance organization, must be considered by all right-thinking people as a gross violation of a sacred trust if not embezzlement, as defined by the statutes.

"This department holds therefore that all moneys taken by your order from the treasury of the New York Life Insurance Company and donated to any political campaign committee or to any legislative agent or lobbyist for aiding or defeating legislation, whether audited or unaudited, on the books of the company, were taken without warrant of law or morals, and without proper appreciation of your responsibility as the trustee of funds committed to your keeping.

"And therefore this department insists all funds so used by you or by your order, and particularly the sum of $148,702.50, which amount you confess to have contributed out of the funds of the company to the Republican National Campaign Committee for the years 1896, 1900, and 1904, must be replaced in the treasury of said New York Life Insurance Company within the next thirty days.

"Notice is hereby served upon the New York Life Insurance Company through you as its President that unless this requirement is met or assurance given that it will be met without necessary delay, I, as Superintendent of Insurance of Missouri, will proceed under the provisions of Section 8,022, Revised Statutes of Missouri, to cancel or revoke the license of the company to do business in this State.

"There are many other transactions disclosed by the investigation now in progress, particularly the payments of large sums of money to one 'Judge' Hamilton, without any accounting or auditing on the books of the company and the occupancy of costly real estate of the company by members of your family at rental so low as to be practically a gift of the property and also the protection of a subsidiary company from the loss of many thousands of dollars by the use of policy holders' money, as well as the immense and disproportionate expense of the company in its mad rush for new business, all of which indicate the grossest impropriety and recklessness in management, and may call for further investigation and official action.

"But from the facts already disclosed, it is evident that the interests of the policy holders of the New York Life Insurance Company, as well as of the public generally, demand a change in the management of the company. This department, therefore, will insist that a new President and Vice President and Finance Committee be put in charge of the affairs of the company as soon as its Board of Directors may be able to effect the change.

"Very respectfully,

"W. D. VANDIVER."

Section 8,022 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Missouri says:

"Expulsion of foreign companies: Wherever it shall appear to the Superintendent of the Insurance Department from an examination made by himself, or from the report of the person or persons appointed by him, or from the statements of the company, that the affairs of any insurance company not incorporated by the laws of this State, and doing, in this State, any business mentioned in this chapter, are in an unsound condition, or that such company is insolvent, or that its capital or fund is impaired; or whenever, from any knowledge or information in his possession, such Superintendent has reasonable cause to suspect that the further continuance by said company in business is hazardous to the public, or to those holding its policies, the Superintendent may suspend or revoke the certificate of authority granted to such company, and shall cause a notice of such suspension or revocation to be published once a week, or oftener, for at least four weeks in some newspaper published in the City of St. Louis, and such company and the agent or agents of such company are, after such suspension or revocation and notice, required to discontinue the issuing of any new policies, or the collection of any except renewal premiums.

TO SAVE HARRIMAN.

Odell Said to Have Nominated Hughes to Protect His Friend.

Certain members of the Armstrong Insurance Investigating Committee, it was learned yesterday, regard the nomination of Charles E. Hughes for Mayor by the Republicans as a move by Chairman Odell to tie up the chief inquisitor of the Armstrong Committee in such a way as to handicap him in his proposed inquiry into the relations that existed between Edward H. Harriman and the Hyde management of the Equitable. The committee has not forgotten that charges have been made—to which no authoritative denial has yet been given—that the settlement of what has been known as the Odell claim against the Mercantile Trust Company on account of the Governor's venture in the underwriting of the old Shipbuilding Trust, was made through one of the Equitable's so-called "yellow dog" funds.

Ex-Gov. Odell, it is alleged, received $75,000 directly or indirectly from the Mercantile Trust. Two of the Equitable's "yellow dog" funds—the J. W. Alexander account No. 3, better known as the $685,000 loan account, and the standing loan to the secretary of Gen. Louis Fitzgerald, formerly President of the Mercantile Trust—were carried in that company until taken up at the instance of Chairman Morton of the Equitable. Insurance men believe that the money necessary to settle with ex-Gov. Odell was taken from one of these funds. Mr. Hughes has made repeated efforts to get more light on this matter, but without material success so far on account of the continued absence from jurisdiction of the committee of James W. Alexander, ex-President of the Equitable, ex-Controller Thomas D. Jordan, and William H. McIntyre, former Fourth Vice President of the society. These three men, according to the testimony of witnesses, know what the mysterious loan accounts were intended for. Chairman Morton of the Equitable's board has been unable to find out in detail.

Hughes Asked Not to Accept.

With the knowledge of these facts, Assemblyman Tully of the committee visited Mr. Hughes on Friday night and urged him not to accept the nomination. It is understood that Senator Armstrong, Chairman of the committee, is equally anxious that Mr. Hughes shall continue the prosecution of the inquiry without alliances of any kind that might tend to hinder him from going to the bottom of the insurance scandals.

Assemblyman Rogers, it is believed, feels the same way. The ideas of the Democratic members of the committee need no canvassing to be understood.

It is regarded as significant that Attorney General Mayer, whom ex-Gov. Odell named for his present office, is a member of the committee appointed to urge Mr. Hughes to accept, particularly in view of the fact that Mr. Mayer, when E. H. Harriman sailed on his Far Eastern trip, refused to deny the assertion repeatedly made that he did not consider it necessary to put Mr. Harriman on the stand in the State's action for the recovery of moneys squandered—through the negligence of the old Board of Directors of the Equitable Life. Mr. Mayer would not discuss the matter yesterday.

Mr. Hughes being out of the city for his regular Saturday golf game yesterday, the nearest to an official statement in the matter came from James McKeen, his associate counsel. Mr. McKeen said:

"I have had no opportunity to confer with Mr. Hughes in the matter of his nomination to the Mayoralty by the Republican Convention last night. He expected to be out of town to-day, and I doubt if a conference with him on the subject can be had before to-morrow or Monday.

"Of course I cannot say what he may be impelled to do in such a situation. Personally I greatly regret that the nomination has been tendered to him. Of course it is a great personal compliment, and one which he richly deserves. No one appreciates better the splendid services he has rendered in this investigation than those associated with him.

"At the same time it may be truthfully said that he has clearly felt from the beginning that all political considerations and all partisan considerations must be absolutely eliminated. To him most especially is due the demonstration that the investigation is thorough; that, as far as possible, all practices of the insurance business that merit condemnation shall be exposed without fear or favor; that what ought to be revealed should be revealed, no matter what political organization or what individual be harmed thereby.

"I do not hesitate to say that it seems clear to me that it will be difficult if not impossible for the investigation to accomplish the best results if it be made to appear that the credit for the work of the committee is to be claimed for one of the parties in the municipal contest.

"If he accepts the nomination, whether he continue as counsel or retire from that position, the claim will certainly be made that the Republican organization has sought to turn to its own special advantage the results thus far accomplished. The party may, of course, claim credit for good accomplished by the committee, a majority of whose members happen to be Republican. It would, however, in my opinion, be a misfortune if the investigation should be made to appear in any way auxiliary to a municipal campaign."

The Armstrong Committee does not propose to allow the question of calling James H. Hyde and William H. McIntyre to the stand to rest where it was left after Mr. Hughes declined to accede to Samuel Untermyer's offer to permit his clients, Messrs. Hyde and McIntyre, to testify merely about matters which were not included in the allegation of the Attorney General's suit. If the committee took no action it would be possible for Mr. Hyde and Mr. McIntyre to remain away until the end of the hearing and then return, having escaped examination.

Realizing this, the committee has formulated a plan by which, if Messrs. Hyde and McIntyre, together with Thomas D. Jordan, do not return to testify before the Legislature meets next January, it will ask that its life be continued through the next session or from session to session thereafter until the three shall have appeared for examination. The committee does not believe that any one of the three men will choose to live in permanent exile rather than tell what he knows about the past management of the Equitable Life.

When the committee meets again on Tuesday one of the first witnesses will probably be President Richard A. McCurdy of the Mutual Life, from whom Mr. Hughes is anxious to learn many things. Chief among these will be how the salaries of President McCurdy, his various relatives in the Mutual's service, and other officers of the company and their relatives who are in the employ of the Mutual have been fixed in the past. The insurance law provides that every company must make an annual contract with all its officers and employes, but when Counsel Hughes asked young Mr. McCurdy on Friday about this law the witness not only said that he had never heard of it, but that he didn't remember ever hearing the matters discussed by the Finance Committee.

Who Fixes the Mutual's Salaries?

What Mr. Hughes would like most to know is whether President McCurdy has himself decreed the various increases of salary which he and his relatives and the other officers and their relatives have received from the Mutual year after year during the McCurdy administration. He wants to know, also, if Mr. McCurdy will assume the responsibility for the contracts made with C. H. Raymond & Co., in which his son and son-in-law successively were members, and with Chamberlain & Gillett, the Texas General Agents, of which the brother of Dr. Walter Gillett, one of the Mutual's Vice Presidents, is a member.

Many other interesting new leads were opened up in the testimony about the Mutual on Friday—so many, in fact, that the Armstrong committee is seriously considering whether it will not be obliged to sit four days a week instead of three, in order to hear all the testimony.

Among the phases of Mutual Life activity yet to be inquired into are the duties and powers of A. C. Fields, the head of the supply department, through whom upward of $1,300,000 was disbursed in 1904 for printing, advertising, posting, and stationery.

It happens that the committee which has this department under its immediate supervision is the Committee on Expenditure. Robert Oliphant is Chairman of this committee, and Counsel Hughes turned up in the course of his examination three payments of $25,000 each to Mr. Oliphant in the year 1904, which no witnesses then available could explain. President McCurdy, Mr. Oliphant, and as many other Mutual officials as may be necessary will be asked whether these payments were made to any political campaign fund.

INSURANCE CRASHES OF THE SEVENTIES

Thirty-nine of the Companies Failed in Ten Years.

STATE SUPERVISION COMES IN

The Business Till Then in the Hands of Speculators with Small Capital and Scant Knowledge.

What has State supervision of life insurance companies brought about, so far as it has gone?

When President McCall of the New York Life was on the stand before the Armstrong Committee several days ago he spoke of the many failures of life insurance companies, with the consequent enormous losses to policy holders. In the late sixties and early seventies the faith in life insurance companies was almost wholly destroyed. The effect was a tremendous decrease in business, so that even the companies that were thoroughly solvent felt the result of it. Many of these companies, as a result of this falling off in business, had much less insurance in force in 1880 than they had in 1870.

State supervision is regarded as having been one of the strongest factors in putting life insurance on a sound basis and in making the recurrence of such a condition as existed between 1870 and 1880 impossible. Other factors have worked to the same end, but supervision of the business of the companies by the State stands out as the strongest of all.

Prior to 1860 there were only a small number of life insurance companies, not more than ten or twelve of any note. The group now known as the "Big Three" were doing business, two of them dating back nearly twenty-five years before 1870. Immediately after the civil war a large number of companies was organized as a matter of speculation. Within a few years after the close of the war nearly sixty companies had been organized.

The organizers of these companies were persons who had no experience in life insurance. Nearly all the companies were organized as stock concerns, with very small capital, never more than $100,000, and were formed with the sole end in view of making money for their organizers.

Supervision in Only Two States.

At that time there was little supervision of life insurance companies. There was supervision in Massachusetts and New York, but it was neither effectual nor thorough. The result was that most of these companies were operated according to the notions and ideas of the management. There was practically no such thing then as valuation of assets and liabilities.

Between 1865 and 1880 the insurance laws of the various States were so deficient that the companies could do almost what they pleased in the matter of reserve. The assets of the companies were not scrutinized, and there was no such publicity as to their character as is required now. Many of the so-called securities which those companies listed in their assets would not be admitted as assets to-day. These included agents' balances, furniture, and fixtures.

It is also true that in most of the companies during the seventies the margin that they held in excess of the mathematical reserve consisted entirely of assets that would not be admitted to-day. In only a few States was there a law requiring the holding of what is known as a legal reserve—the net value of the outstanding policies. In many cases it was found that even the mathematical reserve was not held by the companies.

Panic in the Early Seventies.

There could be but one result of such supervision—failures—and the crash began in the early seventies. There was such a panic that the New York Insurance Department began an investigation. It was found that a large number of companies was insolvent. In many instances the assets were found to be inferior or entirely worthless. The surplus over the legal reserve was very small, and consisted largely of such securities as would not be admitted to-day.

Between 1870 and 1880 there were, all told, thirty-nine failures of life insurance companies. There were, in addition, a number of reinsurances—companies which for various reasons were merged into stronger companies. A few companies retired from business without loss to the policy holders. Most of these had, in fact, done no business. They simply organized and, finding the field occupied, retired.

Prior to 1870 there had been fifteen failures. Since 1880 there have been but seven failures in all. With but two exceptions, these companies failed as a result of the panic in the seventies.

Of the thirty-nine failures, the largest were the Asbury, Continental, Globe Mutual, Guardian Mutual, and Universal, all of New York; the Life Insurance Association of America of St. Louis, and the Republic Life of Chicago. These were large companies for that day, yet all of them combined would not make one large company as they are measured at present.

Failures Since 1880.

Since 1880 the principal failures have been the Knickerbocker of New York in 1882, Charter Oak of Connecticut in 1886, Continental of Hartford in 1887, Alabama Gold in 1888, American of Philadelphia in 1890, and the Commercial Alliance of New York in 1894. There has not been a life insurance failure in eleven years.

The failure of the Charter Oak was the biggest in the history of life insurance. It never recovered from the panic of the seventies. This was the case with the others, with the exception of the American and the Commercial Alliance. The American was not a large company, and its failure was attributable directly to the fact that it had been systematically looted by its officers. They afterward served terms in the Pennsylvania Penitentiary.

The Commercial Alliance was not a typical life insurance company, and had been mismanaged from the first. It had comparatively no assets because its business consisted of what is known as term insurance, which accumulates only a nominal reserve. It had also reinsured other organizations that were shaky.

It was following this period that the insurance laws of many States were made much more exacting. One feature of the insurance law of to-day that is little known to the public is the fact that the companies must make a sworn statement on Dec. 31 each year to the Insurance Department in which must be listed in detail their assets and liabilities. The securities of all kinds must be set out in detail. The bonds and stocks held by a company must be described in such a manner that they can be identified by any one, and their par value, their book or cost value to the company, and their market value, must be given.

NEW YORK LIFE IN NEVADA.

Its License Won't Be Revoked Until After the Investigations.

CARSON, Nev., Oct. 7.—The State Board of Revenue met yesterday to consider the request of Hawes & Harris, agents of the New York Life to postpone final action relative to revoking the license of the company in Nevada. Gov. Sparks said that he fully indorsed the act of the Commissioners of Insurance, but considered the agents' request reasonable.

Attorney General Sweeney maintained that a clear case of misuse of funds had been proved by the company's own admission that it contributed money to political committees. He was willing, however, to delay action. The board decided to wait until after the New York investigating committee had finished its work.

Avenue, in a house which I own. After she left me I got a room with a family on the second floor and leased the apartments we had occupied.

"I heard yesterday that my wife wanted a pair of glasses she had left at home, and went to her rooms to bring them to her. I knew that she could not do very well without them, and had no idea of trouble. My wife opened the door when I knocked, and as soon as she saw me shot at me.

"I raised my left hand to protect myself, and when I saw what she was doing I became so excited that I drew my own revolver and began firing. I do not know how many times I fired. I think I fired once or twice after she had fallen. I was crazy and did not know what I was doing."

"What were you doing with a revolver if you did not expect trouble?" he was asked.

"I must wait until I see my lawyer to answer that question," he replied.

About this time Capt. Shaw returned to the station house and told Hopkins that his wife was dead. The man began to cry. When he was searched, after the Captain had made a charge of homicide against him, he showed a lively interest in the fate of his pocketbook, which contained $24.

"I hope you are not going to rob me," he said to Sergt. Kennedy, and seemed much relieved when the money was handed back to him. The pistol was found in his right-hand overcoat pocket. A surgeon from the Brooklyn Hospital called and dressed his hand. He was then locked up, after asking that his lawyer, Walter A. Saxon of 346 Broadway, Manhattan, be called.

The lawyer arrived within an hour or so and was closeted with the prisoner for some time. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon he was back at the station house.

"My client acted in self-defense," he said. "He and his wife had a lot of trouble over money matters, and he says his physician told him he was being poisoned, and if he wanted to live he had better leave her. The physician prescribed a medicine, which he was taking at the time of the shooting, as an antidote for arsenical poisoning." The bottle was found on him by the police.

Mr. Saxon made charges against the dead Mrs. Hopkins, naming another physician in them. The troubles between the couple, he said, were not all over money. The lawyer's statements were warmly denied by the physician he named.

The son, after he had visited the rooms in which his mother lay, seemed to be greatly concerned lest his political future might be affected.

"Gov. Odell is a great friend of mine," he said. "Timothy Woodruff's mother was my mother's sister. I could have had anything for the asking. Now this thing has come up. Think what it means to my future. You know how people will talk about a murder."

Young Hopkins was the Republican candidate in 1902 against Senator McCabe in the Fifth District, and was defeated. He took part in the campaign which ousted Harry Hanbury from the leadership of the Seventh Assembly District last year. The police told him to quit mourning over his political future and make some arrangements for caring for his mother's body.

"What made your mother and father quarrel?" young Hopkins was asked.

"It was about my marriage."

"Are you married?"

"Yes, but don't say anything about it. I am not living with my wife, and am in love with another girl, whom I am going to marry as soon as I get a divorce."

Hopkins requested particularly that it be not mentioned that he was living with his mother on Johnson Street.

"I'm supposed to be living in the Seventh Assembly District," he pleaded, "and it would simply ruin me politically if it were known that I was not. I register from 211 Forty-sixth Street. Don't give it away that I have moved out of the district."

"If you want to know any more," he said, "go to Paul Grout. He's my friend. He'll tell you who I am."

Young Hopkins intimated that Mr. Grout was the custodian of his mother's will.

"There's a quarter of a million waiting for me in Paul Grout's safe," he said. "My mother was worth $250,000 herself."

Mr. Grout, a brother of the Controller, was given as reference by young Hopkins, who is a rubber stamp manufacturer in Nassau Street, Manhattan, when he bired the apartments in which his mother was killed. Mr. Grout was not at his office yesterday afternoon.

An occupant of the office said that he knew the Hopkins family well, and that Mrs. Hopkins had never expressed any desire to get a divorce from her husband. Mr. Grout represented Mrs. Hopkine in her business affairs.

While young Hopkins was very bitter against his father early in the day, he called at the Adams Street Station with a young woman last evening. He had an order from Inspector Cross admitting him and his companion to his father's cell, but declined to say who his companion was or what had been the purpose of his visit.

Dr. Edwin T. Randall of 139 Hancock Street, who is treating the elder Hopkins, and who was referred to by Attorney Saxon as having prescribed an antidote for arsenical poisoning for him, made this statement last night:

"About ten days ago Hopkins came to me and said his wife had been trying to get rid of him, and that he thought she had been giving him arsenic. I prescribed for him."

"What did you treat him for?" Dr. Randall was asked.

"For general disorders," he replied.

"Were there any symptoms of poison?"

"It is extremely hard to ascertain the symptoms of arsenical poisoning."

Further than this the physician refused to go.

LAWSON SAYS HE'LL FIX IT.

Forming a Committee to Seize Insurance Companies and Set 'Em Right.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 7.—Thomas W. Lawson has taken the burden of remedying the life insurance scandals upon his already heavily weighted shoulders. He sent this telegram yesterday to the Governors of many States and to many leading citizens:

Will you, with other Governors and strongest representative men of the country, serve on a Policy Holders' Protective Committee of Equitable, New York Life, and Mutual Companies? Committee unfettered except it is to take possession of New York and Mutual and select Directors and controllers who shall be pledged to obtain full restitution and full punishment of wrongdoers, also obtain restitution and punishment of Equitable wrongdoers. No expense to committee, nor need committee travel. Committee to represent no faction and obligated to no one except policy holders. It has been decided you should represent your section in this sacred duty. Kindly wire answer my expense. This is vital. You will not be bound until other members names submitted to you. THOMAS W. LAWSON.

The telegram was sent out yesterday. Mr. Lawson to-day declined to discuss the proposition. He said that the telegram outlined the plan sufficiently for present purposes. He declared that he considered it of vital interest to the public that something of the kind be done. He declined to make known the names of the persons to whom the telegram had been addressed, but he will announce the names of those who accept. As soon as the personnel of the committee is decided on, he said, organization would be effected and a definite plan of action adopted.

Dispatches received by THE TIMES last night said that Gov. Folk of Missouri had received one of Lawson's telegrams, but was very busy and probably would not be able to accept the job.

From St. Paul came news that Gov. Johnson of Minnesota had received another and had accepted the Lawson proposal. He said he believed that Lawson was in earnest.

YOU MUST REGISTER TO VOTE.

To-morrow and Tuesday will be the first days of registration. The polls will be open from 7 A. M. to 10 P. M. You can find the list of registration places in The Times to-day.

M'CLELLAN MAY NOT RUN FOR GOVERNOR AFTER ALL

His Friends Think McGowan's Nomination Spoiled That.

HE IS LIKELY TO SAY SO SOON

Independents Might Not Rally to Him in 1906, and He'd Need the Votes —His Campaign Plans.

Friends of Mayor McClellan expressed it as their belief yesterday that the Mayor would not consent to the use of his name next year as a candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket. They made it plain, however, that this was not because of any change in the ambition of the Mayor to become Governor, but because of the conditions surrounding the formation of the present Democratic city ticket.

Personal friends of the Mayor have known for a long time that he did not care to serve four years more as Mayor and that he was chagrined, in a way, when the Legislature last Winter passed the law lengthening the term. That the Governorship in 1906 was the Mayor's ambition was not concealed, and he made no secret of his pleasure at the frequent mention of his name in connection with the nomination for next year.

It was this situation, with the harmonious opinions held by Mayor McClellan and Charles F. Murphy on the subject, that led to all of the talk in Tammany Hall about the necessity of selecting a candidate for the Board of Aldermen who would size up to the office of Mayor in the event of the Mayor's nomination and election as Governor.

When finally Patrick F. McGowan was selected for this office friends of the Mayor felt that an irreparable blow had been struck at the McClellan Gubernatorial boom for 1906. They regarded Mr. McGowan as unknown, and felt that he would not be welcomed by the people at large as Mr. McClellan's successor for three-quarters of the Mayor's term. These friends have been impressing on the Mayor their conviction that a continuance of the talk of his nomination for Governor next year will hurt him politically, and it is said the Mayor has come to take much the same view of the situation.

The friends and advisers of the Mayor, it is said, are convinced that Mr. McGowan's candidacy for President of the Board of Aldermen will not hurt the ticket at all in the campaign, and may aid it in some circles if he is not to be Mayor, but they are sure that with Mr. McGowan as President of the board, many independents who otherwise would vote for McClellan next year for Governor would vote against him rather than have him give up control of the City Government at that time.

In other words, they believe that McGowan will not hurt Mr. McClellan's vote for Mayor, but that McGowan would deliver a body blow to McClellan's vote for Governor, making him run so badly in Manhattan and Brooklyn that his plurality here would be swept away by the big Republican vote up the State.

While Mayor McClellan is loath to mortgage his future for four years to the Mayor's chair, it is said on good authority that some sort of a declaration may be expected from him within a few days, taking him out of consideration for any higher political office, at least until 1908.

Mayor McClellan was not at the City Hall yesterday, but took the day off to prepare for the campaign. His headquarters, in the Bartholdi Hotel, will be opened to-morrow, with his secretary, John H. O'Brien, in charge as campaign manager. The Mayor will be at the headquarters late every afternoon and frequently in the evenings. In the mornings and early afternoons he will be at the City Hall, especially until the present heavy work of the Board of Estimate in making up the budget is finished.

This week and next week will probably bring forth scarcely a speech from the Mayor, but he expects to begin speaking on Oct. 23, and to close on Nov. 4, giving just two weeks to that part of the Mayoralty campaign.

NOVEL CAMPAIGN METHODS.

Westchester Men Will Use Autos and Trolley Cars, Woman a Carriage.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Candidates for office in Westchester County will carry on their campaigns in several characteristic ways. J. Mayhew Wainwright, renominated for the Assembly on the Republican ticket in the Second District, will travel over his district in an automobile. William Archer, the candidate for Mayor of Mount Vernon, will use an illuminated trolley car with a band aboard in going over the city every night.

Miss Bertha E. H. Berbert, who will run for School Commissioner on an independent ticket because she says she was shelved by the Republicans, will travel about her district with a horse and runabout and make stump speeches. A score of women, among them school teachers, are to-day getting signatures to a petition to have Miss Berbert's name placed on an independent ballot.

SIX FAT JOBS OVERLOOKED.

Tammany Almost Forgot That Coroners Were to be Elected.

Consternation reigned at Tammany Hall. Consternation in this particular case was represented in the person of Florence J. Sullivan—"Florrie" Sullivan—Tammany leader of the Eighth. The time of the reign was a day ago before the City Convention, when the faithful were wigwagging for the attention of the big chief.

"Say, shipmates," inquired Mr. Sullivan, entering the holy of holies, "who's goin' to be nominated for Coroners in this borough? Is any one a candidate? There is four of these places in Manhattan and two in the Bronx, and they pays $6,000 a year. Then there is all the doctors and the other per-quis-ites that goes with the jobs. Shipmates, are we forgettin' our business?"

It was too true. Promptly there was a mighty stir among the leaders. Each started to speak at once. Each had a candidate on tap.

But the big chief pondered. Then he reached for the city salary list.

"Not a word," he said. "Wait until Friday after the big city pow-wow is held. Then give me your men."

Mr. Murphy is now thinking over the names suggested for these $6,000 jobs. The present Manhattan incumbents, Coroners Goldenkranz, Scholer, Jackson, and Brown, and the two Bronx men, Coroners O'Gorman and Berry, were elected on Fusion tickets. Every district is sprouting candidates for Coroner, but John F. Cowen has brought out the biggest sprout on the south side of the Thirty-fourth District.

His name is George O'Shaunnessey. He is first in the field with real backing, and is believed to be entitled to a nomination.

WIFE STOPS NOMINATION.

W. C. Baker's Political Aim Thwarted by a Doctor's Certificate.

The Queens Borough Republican Convention, which failed to name a candidate for Borough President on Thursday night because half of the delegates favored a straight-out Republican while the other half wanted to nominate Joseph Bermel, the Jeffersonian Democrat, met last night at Jamaica and carried out the slate originally made by nominating Bermel.

When the convention was called to order last night the old-time Republicans had arranged to beat the Bermel followers by nominating William C. Baker, who had agreed to accept.

But Mr. Baker's wife had something to say about it. Fifteen minutes before the convention was called to order, after pleading in vain with her husband and telling him that Cassidy would surely defeat him if he accepted the nomination, Mrs. Baker hurried to her husband's physician and got a certificate to the effect that Mr. Baker would certainly injure his health if he went into the contest. Armed with this document, Mrs. Baker rushed into the convention hall and dug Mr. Baker out of the heap of delegates.

"Just read this," she said, thrusting this note into her husband's hand:

Dear Mrs. Baker—In answer to your questions I would say that, knowing Mr. Baker's condition for the last ten years, I consider it unsafe for him to enter into any political contest as a candidate. I do not wish to alarm you, but only to emphasize the fact that Mr. Baker's present comparative good health is dependent upon quiet and freedom from excitement. HERBERT NOBLE, M. D.

After reading what Dr. Noble had written, Mr. Baker withdrew from the convention, much to the disappointment of his following. After considerable wrangling among the delegates, Felix Fritsche, Lucien K. Knapp, and Bermel were placed in nomination. A vote was taken, resulting in Knapp getting 33, Fritsche 4, and Bermel 76 votes. A motion to make Bermel's nomination unanimous was defeated, but after the Chairman announced that he was the choice of the convention, the convention adjourned.

The Republican County Convention nominated Ira G. Barrin for District Attorney of Queens, and Dr. Samuel S. Nutt of Ozone Park and Dr. Alfred S. Ambler were nominated for the offices of Coroners.

STRASBOURGER FOR JUDGE.

Likely to Succeed Justice Barrett in Case He Resigns.

When Supreme Court Justice George C. Barrett resigns in the near future, as it has been semi-officially announced he intends to do, Tax Commissioner Samuel Strasbourger will be named by Gov. Higgins as his successor, according to information given out yesterday by Republican leaders. Justice Barrett's term does not expire until 1908, so his successor will have three years to serve.

Mr. Strasbourger is the Republican leader of the Thirty-first Assembly District. As Tax Commissioner he is receiving a salary of $7,500 a year. He is one of the few Republicans holding office under the present administration.

ALL ORGANIZATION MEN.

Brooklyn Republicans Nominate a Straight Party Ticket.

The Brooklyn Republicans pursued their plan for a straight party ticket in the county and borough convention yesterday afternoon, and nominated no one who was not known to be an organization man. A notable feature was the absence of Irish-American names, and this was the subject of comment in some quarters. The candidates are:

For Borough President—FREDERICK H. E. EBSTEIN.

For Sheriff—ALFRED T. HOBLEY.

For County Clerk—FREDERICK E. HEITMANN.

For Register—EDMUND W. VOORHIES.

For Coroners—PHILIP T. WILLIAMS and JACOB EILPRIN.

There were no contests, each candidate being elected by the vote of the Secretary of the convention after he had received the nomination from a representative of the district wherein he resided.

Major Ebstein, the candidate for Borough President, is of German birth and served in the United States Army with distinction in the civil war and the Spanish war. During Mayor Low's term of office he was Deputy Commissioner of Police for the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens.

Alfred T. Hobley, the candidate for Sheriff, is the leader of the Fifth Assembly District. He is employed in the office of the Register of Kings County.

Frederick E. Heitmann, the candidate for County Clerk, is a wealthy manufacturer. Mr. Voorhies is a lumber merchant with a large business. Philip T. Williams is already Coroner of the borough, and is the leader of the Thirteenth Assembly District. His associate on the ticket, Jacob Eilprin, is complaint clerk in the Adams Street Police Court.

POLICY HOLDERS BALK.

Chicagoans Refuse to Have Judge Pass on Merger Plan.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—The policy holders' committee of the Western Life Indemnity Company, of which H. B. Hicks is Chairman, will not agree to refer the controversy over a proposed merger to Judge Kohlsaat or any referee.

This change of attitude has come since yesterday. It is intimated that the dissatisfied policy holders had received an intimation that the court was likely to sustain the demurrer of the company's attorney, and feared the officials of the Western Life concern would forthwith conclude the deal with the Security Life and Annuity Company.

QUEENS NAMES CASSIDY.

Renominated Him by Acclamation for a Third Term as Borough President.

Borough President Cassidy of Queens was renominated for a third term yesterday afternoon by the Democratic Convention in Long Island City. The convention hall was crowded to the doors. Assistant Corporation Counsel Denis O'Leary was Chairman, and Mr. Cassidy was placed in nomination by William F. Hendrickson, stenographer of the Surrogate's Court in Queens County.

The convention empowered the Secretary to cast one ballot for Mr. Cassidy and the announcement was received with wild cheering.

District Attorney George A. Gregg was nominated for a second term. Chief Clerk Carl Vogel of the Queens Borough branch of the Bureau of Elections and Herbert S. Harvey, assistant clerk in the Flushing Court, were nominated for Coroners, and Magistrate Matthew J. Smith was nominated for City Magistrate at Large.

There were twenty aspirants for the two Coronerships.

The candidates were escorted before the convention, and there was great applause when the Chairman introduced President Cassidy. Mr. Cassidy reviewed his administration for the past four years and stated that the Borough of Queens had progressed more rapidly than any other section of the city, and that its assessed valuation had grown and the development had been general.

He said he believed that the voters of Queens would approve of his administration by giving the entire Democratic ticket a vote exceeding that cast for it at any previous election.

Fight for Ambler's Old Place.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Nominations of candidates for the State Senate to fill the vacancy in the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, caused by the death of Henry S. Ambler of Chatham, were made to-day. The Republicans nominated Sanford W. Smith of Columbia; the Democrats William E. Verplanck of Fishkill-on-Hudson, a wealthy lawyer.

Speaker Nixon Improves.

WESTFIELD, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Speaker Nixon spent a restless day but feels better to-night. His temperature remains at a fraction over 100, with pulse and respiration about normal. The attack of pleurisy yielded to treatment to-day, and the pain is less severe. Dr. MacDonald of Albany will come to Westfield again to-morrow. His call, it is said at Mr. Nixon's house, is not due to alarming developments.

GAYNOR AND GREENE HERE ON THE WAY SOUTH

"Their flight seems almost ridiculous in view of all that has happened, but I am confident that both Greene and Gaynor, despite the fact that Capt. Carter has been convicted, and that technically they are fugitives from justice, will be acquitted on this charge. They are innocent. The Government in order to prove their guilt must show that it has sustained a loss, and this would seem impossible in view of the fact that a Congressional committee which investigated the Savannah Harbor improvements found that the work had been so well done that after three years only $60,000 repairs were necessary to put in perfect condition improvements that originally had cost $2,500,000. The Government got dollar for dollar all that was coming to it."

The Five-Year Fight.

It took a stubborn and costly fight extending over five years on the part of the United States Government to obtain the extradition of Greene and Gaynor. The climax of this fight was an appeal to the Judiciary Committee of the Privy Council from a decision rendered by the highest court of Canada dismissing the extradition proceedings. The allegation made by the counsel of the United States in support of the appeal was that Canadian officials had been influenced to defeat the ends of justice.

Greene and Gaynor, who had plenty of money and lived in luxury though socially ostracized in Quebec during the greater part of their exile, employed a law firm in that city composed of the Premier of the Province of Quebec, a son of the Deputy Attorney General, the Canadian Minister of Justice, and a son of the Extradition Commissioner of Quebec.

The indictment against Greene and Gaynor was found in December, 1899, and they fled a year later, forfeiting $40,000 each. The indictment grew out of charges made in connection with the work done by the Atlantic Construction Company, of which they were the active heads, in the harbor of Savannah. Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, then of the United States Engineering Corps, who had charge of the work, was condemned by court-martial to five years' imprisonment and a fine of $5,000, and has served his sentence. In a general way it was charged that through the conspiracy the Government lost $1,400,000, which was divided between Carter, Greene, and Gaynor.

The Sensational Kidnapping.

After their flight several efforts were made by the Government to have them extradited. In May, 1902, Extradition Commissioner Lafontaine of Montreal issued warrants for the fugitives on the application of the Federal authorities. Greene and Gaynor were then living at the Chateau Frontenac, the leading hotel of Quebec. The Commissioner with several Montreal detectives went to Quebec, seized the two men in their rooms, and took them in closed carriages on board the tug Spray, the fastest craft on the St. Lawrence River.

Gaynor succeeded in getting word to his friends in Quebec that he had been kidnapped. They set to work and with writs issued by the same Judge who finally dismissed the extradition proceedings, detectives from Quebec after a sensational chase by river and rail took the two men back to Quebec on a special train. On the train the detectives were wined and dined at the expense of Greene and Gaynor. After their return to Quebec the two fugitives again were installed in their luxurious quarters at the exclusive Château Frontenac. The wives of both men, who shared their exile, have preceded them to Savannah.

PRISONERS LEAVE MONTREAL.

Big Crowd at Station to See Them Off —Glad to Go, Gaynor Says.

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.—The last chapter so far as Canada is concerned in the celebrated Gaynor and Greene case was closed this morning, when the two men left the Bonaventure Station of the Grand Trunk Railway on a Delaware and Hudson train at 8:40 o'clock. A large crowd was present to see them off.

On behalf of the Government, Silas H. Carpenter, Chief of the Montreal detective force, who kidnapped the two men from Quebec and Inspector McMahon went with the party as far as Rouse's Point, N. Y.

The two prisoners had been notified that they would probably be removed this morning, and were all ready when Detective Boyd of the United States Secret Service called for them in the debtors' ward of the jail. The United States officers came in three cabs and the party left the jail a little after 7 o'clock. They drove immediately to the Bonaventure station and went into the dining room where the two prisoners had breakfast.

Messrs. Boyd and White of the United States Secret Service remained with the prisoners, while Chief Flynn and his other men stood outside, keeping an eye on the various doors leading in and out of the station. At 8:30 o'clock the prisoners were taken on board the train.

First came Greene, accompanied by Detective White and Inspector McMahon, and next Gaynor, accompanied by Detective Boyd and Chief Carpenter. Around these two small groups the other United States Secret Service men rallied until the parlor car of the train was reached. The prisoners were taken into the smoking compartment.

Asked if they had anything to say before leaving, Gaynor replied that they were glad to go back at last and that they would have nothing but the kindest remembrances of their treatment in Canada.

Mrs. Gaynor, Jr., was on board the train when the prisoners arrived, and Mr. Gaynor, Jr., arrived just before the train left.

OSBORNE LEADS RACE FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Not Likely That Tammany Will Indorse Jerome.

SLATE FOR SUPREME COURT

Ingraham, Gildersleeve, and Newburger to be Named—Magistrate Mayo for General Sessions.

All the attention of the Tammany leaders is now being directed to the selection of a candidate for District Attorney. From Tammany sources it was learned last night that there was no new movement in favor of an indorsement of Mr. Jerome. Ten days ago it was said that Mr. Jerome was not likely to be indorsed, and the events of the last three days have in no way changed this situation. Serious attention is being given to ex-Assistant District Attorney James W. Osborne, and a decision will be reached early in the week.

M. Warley Platzek had a small boom yesterday, but it passed away. Mr. Platzek's chief claim was for recognition of the Jewish vote, but if Judge Newburger finally goes on the Supreme Court ticket this claim even will vanish. As Mr. Murphy is at his country home at Good Ground, and will remain there until to-morrow, there will be nothing more definite on the county ticket until then.

As a result of the conferences which Charles F. Murphy and his advisers in Tammany Hall have been holding since the Democratic City Convention, both Justices Ingraham and Gildersleeve of the Supreme Court will be renominated next Thursday night to succeed themselves on the bench. Judge Joseph E. Newburger of General Sessions is slated for the third place, although the friends of Corporation Counsel John J. Delany were insistent last night in declaring that he had received an absolute promise of the nomination.

Careful consideration has been given to the Supreme Court situation for more than a week, and Mr. Murphy has taken counsel repeatedly with Mayor McClellan and also with Presiding Justice Morgan J. O'Brien of the Appellate Division. Even before the meeting of the Bar Association on Wednesday night, both Mayor McClellan and Justice O'Brien advised that Justices Ingraham and Gildersleeve be renominated, and the entire judicial situation taken out of the campaign.

It was for this reason that Justices Ingraham and Gildersleeve tried on Wednesday to have the Bar Association halt its proceedings, feeling that its action might be of such a nature as to stir up resentment in Tammany, and thus militate against favorable action in their behalf by the leaders.

It was reported last night that Judge Newburger would resign his place on the General Sessions bench to-morrow, just thirty calendar days before election, so that his successor in General Sessions can be elected next month. It was also reported from the same source that Police Magistrate Mayo would receive the nomination to succeed Judge Newburger.

Fire Commissioner Nicholas J. Hayes is still understood to be slated for Sheriff, although Patrick H. Keahon, leader of the Seventh District, may be nominated, as he has strong backing, including the Sullivan influences. If Mr. Hayes is named for Sheriff, Mr. Keahon will be named for County Clerk, and vice versa. J. H. J. Ronner will be renominated for Register. All of the Coroners nominations are still regarded as open. The borough conventions will renominate John F. Ahearn in Manhattan and Louis F. Haffen in the Bronx.

CONVICT AND ANOTHER MAY HAVE KILLED THREE

Middletown's Search for Slayers of Girl and Aged Brothers.

BODIES FOUND IN THE WOODS

Several Persons Tell of Strangers Seen About Lonely Farm Where Murders Were Committed.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Search has been made through the surrounding country all day for a short man who limps and a tall companion. They are wanted in connection with the murder of Willis C. Olney, 58 years old; Fred R. Olney, 62 years old, and Alice Ingerick, 6 years old, and an assault on Mrs. Ingerick on Friday afternoon on the farm of Fred R. Olney, on the Swamp Road, four miles northwest of this place.

The bodies of the aged brothers were found in the woods this morning. Mrs. Ingerick has been unconscious since she was found last night, suffering from a terrible beating. There is little hope that she will recover sufficiently to tell of the tragedy.

The District Attorney of Orange County, A. H. Seeger, late this afternoon posted a reward of $500 for the arrest of the murderer or murderers. This reward will probably be increased the first of the week by $1,000. Search is being made particularly for two men, one of whom is a convict recently liberated from State Prison. They are known to have been near the scene of the murder Friday afternoon.

After the discovery on Friday night of the murder of the girl and the assault on her mother a search was made of the premises by Fred Olney, son of one of the slain men; Chief of Police Brinkerhoff, and Deputy Sheriff Homer Herman. They believed that the bodies of the aged brothers would be found somewhere about, but in the darkness they could find nothing.

All stayed at the farm during the night, and at daylight renewed their search. In the pasture over the hill back of the house a fresh wagon track was found. The men followed this, and were led to a corner of the field next to the Addie Derby wods, about a quarter of a mile west of the house. Signs here showed that a team of horses had been tied to a sapling and that afterward the wagon had been turned and driven away.

BODIES OF BROTHERS FOUND.

The men then began a systematic search of the thick woods. Soon the barking of a dog attracted their attention, and they worked their way through the thick undergrowth in the direction whence it came. They found that the dog was a handsome collie that had belonged to Fred C. Olney. It was guarding the body of its master. Five bullet holes in the body showed how he had met his death.

About fifty feet away was found the body of his brother, with a bullet hole in the head.

Gold watches which the brothers always carried were gone. No money was found on their persons, although it was their habit to carry comfortable sums with them. Their pockets were turned inside out. On a line back toward the pasture, where the horses had been tied, were found scattered papers that had belonged to the brothers and had been cast aside by the murderers.

The bodies were brought to a morgue in this city and placed with the body of the murdered girl. A crowd hung about the morgue all day and discussed the tragedy. Hundreds of persons drove to the Olney farm and went over the place and into the woods.

There was no evidence of a struggle where the bodies lay. It has not been determined whether the men were murdered in the woods or on the farm, but it is difficult to believe that the bodies could have been carried through the underbrush.

Men who were working near the Olney farm yesterday afternoon heard six shots in the woods. They thought some one was out shooting squirrels, and remarked on the bad aim evident from the six shots. John Papp, foreman of the Frank Fish celery farm, says he heard a rack on the Olney farm at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, and six shots were fired about the same time, whether before or after he could not say.

One theory is that the brothers were enticed into the woods by men who represented that they were identified with a proposed new railway line, which was to pass through the Olney and Derby farms. Stakes marking the route were found near the place where the bodies lay. It is believed that William was first shot, and that his brother attempted to run away and was shot in flight.

CLUE TO THE MURDERERS.

Dewitt Corwin, who lives half way between this city and Howells, gave a clue to Assistant District Attorney Rogers that may be valuable. While engaged in cutting brush he saw two men along the Erie tracks near his home, cleaning a pistol. One was tall and the other limping when he walked.

A limping man was seen going westward up the Erie tracks late Friday afternoon by the towerman. The fact that the same man was also seen to pass down the tracks during the afternoon shows that he was about the locality for some time.

Frank Cosner, bookkeeper at the First National Bank, while on his way home Friday night at 11 o'clock, met two men at the Van Pursonville schoolhouse answering the description of the two seen by Corwin. He says they stopped him and inquired where the Swamp road led to.

Daniel Davis says he saw a man on Thursday on the hill just above the Olney place standing under a tree. The fellow was a stranger.

Robert Wengatz, proprietor of a hotel at Howells, two miles from where the crime was committed, says two strange men called at his place early to-day; that they were too much excited to remain long, and drove away at a rapid rate toward Bloomingburg. One was lame. County Detective Wood, in an automobile, is trying to find some trace of them.

A milk wagon owned by the Olneys bears some blood marks, and this may have been used to take the party out to the woods. The police, however, are trying to trace a wagon seen by several persons yesterday in the vicinity of the Olney place. Two strangers were in it, and they drove into an old back woods road about half a mile away. It disappeared in the woods which border the road about 3 P. M. At 11 o'clock at night this wagon was seen on the same road driving toward the Shawangunk Mountains.

The Olney brothers were in fairly good circumstances. Fred, the bachelor, being the better off. It was he who owned the farm of 191 acres, the fine dairy, the blooded stock, and good cash investments. He usually had two or three hundred dollars in his pocket, and on several occasions had shown such a sum when out among friends.

The fact that an attempt was made to kill every person known to have been in the Olney house has caused some belief that the crime had other motives than robbery. There is no evidence of thievery in the house.

Mrs. Ingerick seems to be quite well known in this city, where she has been employed by a number of different families. She is spoken of as a hard-working and deserving woman. She left her husband while they were members of the Salvation Army. He lives at Wurtsborough, twelve miles away, and was about the place during the day and evening.

PEORIA BANK IS CLOSED.

Indictment of Former President Makes Trouble for It.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 7.—The Peoria National Bank did not open its doors today. C. H. Bosworth has been appointed receiver, and will take charge of the bank's affairs pending liquidation.

This is the result of action taken by the board of Directors at a midnight meeting, which considered the run on the institution in consequence of the indictments for forgery and embezzlement of N. C. Dougherty, its former President. The capital stock of the bank is $200,000, the deposits $1,159,104.

When the news spread depositors began to flock into the Dime Savings Bank, in which Dougherty is a heavy stockholder, and by 12 o'clock, when it was experiencing a heavy run, the officials posted the sixty-day notice sign, but announced that the institution will be kept open until all depositors are satisfied. It has $500,000 cash on hand.

During the day Mr. Dougherty was at the Dime Savings Bank, closeted with O. J. Bailey and others concerning securities which he had deposited.

"Putting the securities I have in Mr. Bailey's hands," he said afterward, "was not for the purpose of extenuating anything, but simply that I believe things will be shown to be right and that the amount thus deposited is much more than any one claims the shortage to be. It has no reference whatever to guilt or innocence, and it was furthest from my idea in so doing that I was in any way putting myself or any one else in a compromising position. It does mean, however, that neither the School Board nor the Peoria National Bank will lose one penny."

The Grand Jury is still in session, and is grinding out indictments by the wholesale. A partial report is looked for on Monday.

"We are grinding out indictments as fast as the printers can print them," said State's Attorney Scholes to-day.

SENDS FOR DALY'S WIFE.

Greenwich Deputy Wants Toronto Woman to Identify His Prisoner.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 7.—Deputy Sheriff Ritch of Greenwich has sent to Toronto, asking that Mrs. John J. Daly of 122 Boswell Avenue come here in an effort to identify as her husband the prisoner known as J. J. Daly, whom Ritch arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses. The Canadian address was obtained from among the papers found in Daly's possession.

In a prospectus of the Canadian Album, printed in Brantford, Ontario, fifteen years ago, appears a picture and sketch of which the prisoner says he is the subject. In the sketch wherever the name of Guelph, his place of residence in Ontario, was mentioned, an effort has been made to scratch it out.

The sketch says Daly was born in Durham, Ontario, in 1855, and describes him as a dealer in real estate and publisher of The Canadian Farm Advertiser. It says that he married, in February, 1888, Mae A. Halley, only daughter of William Halley of Chicago. Ritch has gained the idea that Mrs. Daly has, for three years, believed her husband dead.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—Mrs. Daly left here at 2 o'clock this afternoon. She believed that her husband was murdered at Binghamton, N. Y. Daly, she said, had speculated heavily in real estate and was caught by the crash in the nineties.

She believes this reverse unhinged his mind and caused him to be an aimless wanderer through the United States. She professed joy at the possibility of his being alive and determined to see him immediately.

DOUBLE SHOOTING MYSTERY.

Brother of Dead Man Believes That He Was Murdered.

FAYETTE, Me., Oct. 7.—James Dunn is dead and Mrs. Laura Smith is seriously wounded as the result of a shooting affray at the Smith farm early to-day. Dunn is alleged to have become involved in a dispute with Mrs. Smith, who is his cousin, over the disposition of some property and shot her, the bullet taking effect in her right arm and shoulder. Dunn, it is supposed, then turned the revolver on himself and inflicted mortal wounds.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—Benedict J. Dunn, a brother of James B. Dunn, who is supposed to have committed suicide to-day after having shot Mrs. Charles Smith, said this evening that he believed his brother had been the victim of foul play. Mr. Dunn left for Fayette to-night to demand an investigation.

The brother stated that he received letters from James Dunn within a week, in which the writer said he feared his life was in danger, and that an attempt had been made to choke him to death.

ARRESTS ON CUP COURSE.

Eight Automobilists Pay Speed Fines in Long Island Court.

MINEOLA, Oct. 7.—Automobilists who are traveling daily over the Vanderbilt Cup course are being closedly watched, and the deputies who have been ordered to arrest violators of the speed law are having a busy time. To-day nine automobilists were arrested, and all except one paid the fine without protest. The exception was Bertram Gardner, a lawyer of Garden City, who was a candidate for Assembly at the last election. Mr. Gardner pleaded not guilty, and his trial was set for Oct. 16.

The eight others who were arrested and their fines were: Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., $25; J. F. D. Lanier, banker, of New York, $25; W. H. Maxwell of Glen Cove, $25; Arthur Iselin, $25; Le Grand Clark, $15; Howard T. Whitney, $15; R. Dowling of Glen Cove, $15, and R. C. Carroll, $25.

SAYS HE PAID FOR CAMPAIGN.

"Cyclone" Gale Sued by Boss Mara for a Loan of $200.

Cyrus B. Gale, better and more familiarly known as "Cyclone" Gale, because of the impetuosity of his campaign utterances, is being sued for $200 in the Queens County Supreme Court by Patrick Mara, Democratic boss of the Third Ward of Queens. Mara alleges that he lent the money to Gale to help him in his canvass when he was running for the Assembly some time ago.

Gale denies in his answer that he ever borrowed the money from Mara. He has retired from politics and is living at 230 Hancock Street, Brooklyn.

TAKES PLACE OF RECTOR WHO TRIED TO OUST HIM

Associate Rector Vindicated by East New York Churchmen.

BIG PETITION TO THE VESTRY

After the Rev. Mr. Russell, Resigning to Become Archdeacon, Had Also Put in Mr. Hathaway's Resignation.

Members of St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church, at 67 Moffat Street, East New York, have been greatly stirred this week over what they regarded as an attempt on the part of the Rev. James Townsend Russell, the rector, to snub his associate, the Rev. Harry St. Clair Hathaway. As a result Mr. Hathaway has been called to the rectorship of the church in succession to Mr. Russell.

The rector at the services last Sunday surprised the congregation with the announcement that on Oct. 15 he would sever his connection with the parish, having been appointed archdeacon of the diocese, and that Mr. Hathaway would also retire on that day. This announcement came as a surprise also to Mr. Hathaway, who came to East New York from Cleveland about three years ago by arrangement with Mr. Russell, to assist him in the church work.

There had been a feeling among members of the congregation for some time that all was not harmony between the rector and his associate. It was declared that Mr. Hathaway had taken too active a part in some of the church work to give entire satisfaction. Consequently the action of Mr. Russell was taken as an endeavor to show that he was not exactly pleased with the results of the arrangement he had made.

Mr. Hathaway's friends determined, however, that the parish should show that it did not wish to have him leave so unceremoniously. The meeting of the vestry to decide upon a call for a new rector was to be held Friday evening, and quick action was necessary. A committee was formed and visits were paid to all members of the church who could be reached. As a result a petition, having 400 signatures, was presented to the vestry when it met. This petition said:

"In view of the resignation of the Rev. James Townsend Russell as rector of our church, and the necessary resignation of his associate, the Rev. Harry St. C. Hathaway, the undersigned request that a call be extended to the latter.

"Mr. Hathaway has been connected within this church for the past two and one-half years, and by his sterling qualities has endeared himself to the majority of its members. He has been fearless in defense of every high principle, charitable to all those in need of counsel and consolation, and in practice and doctrine consistent with the strictest rules of the Church.

"Mr. Hathaway as a gentleman has earned the respect and esteem of all, and, as he is familiar with the various religious and other activities of the church, we are satisfied that the work planned for the season on which we have just entered would be seriously embarrassed and the cause of the kingdom delayed if a man be chosen not familiar with its nature and requirements."

A request was made that a unanimous call be extended to Mr. Hathaway. This petition was presented to the meeting of the Vestrymen on Friday night and brought quick results, a resolution calling Mr. Hathaway being quickly adopted.

It is expected that an announcement of his acceptance will be made to the congregation at this morning's services.

RAID CASES GO OVER.

Magistrate Pool Harkens to Clamor for a Continuance to Nov. 10.

Thirty prisoners arrested by Capt. Eggers and his men in their raids on Friday in alleged poolrooms at 27 Barclay Street, 43 Fulton Street, 86 Cortlandt Street, and 6 Bond Street, were arraigned before Magistrate Pool in the Tombs Court yesterday. All the prisoners bore the appearance of prosperity and none of them seemed annoyed by the situation. They rather took it as a lark, and so did their friends, who, to the number of about 300, crowded the court room.

Ten lawyers appeared for as many groups of prisoners. Assistant District Attorney Corrigan alone appeared for the prosecution. He wanted to go right on with the cases. His opponents promptly raised a clamor for a continuance, which was heeded by the Magistrate. But it had to be till some day in November, Magistrate Pool explained, as he was about to start on his vacation. The cases were set for Nov. 10.

"I'll then be sitting in the new Court House at Westchester," remarked the Magistrate jovially. "It will do you all good to get out in the country for a day. I'll have the place well heated and carriages waiting for you at the station."

ALLEE THE DISPENSER OF DELAWARE OFFICES

Denial at White House That a Man Was Appointed for Ball.

ACTION ELIMINATES ADDICKS

President Inclined to Treat the Party in Delaware as Reunited — Gas Man's Opponents Gain.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Senator Allee is formally recognized at the White House as the man through whom the Federal patronage in Delaware is to be distributed. While this comes about in regular course from the fact that he is sitting regularly elected by the Legislature of his State, and the other Delaware seat in the Senate is vacant, the effect is likely to be of greatest importance in the campaign against Addicks.

The following announcement was made at the White House to-day:

"The appointment of J. W. Burgess to be an assistant appraiser in the New York Custom House was made on the indorsement of Senator Allee of Delaware and not on that of ex-Senator Ball of that State."

Burgess is a Delaware man. The statement had been made in Delaware papers that he got his place through the influence of Dr. Ball, whose Senatorial term expired last March. Senator Allee protested against allowing this misstatement to go uncontradicted. He asked that, as he was the only Senator from the State whose appointment had been made on the recommendation, the fact should be announced from the White House to set the matter right before the country and with the party following in the State.

Senator Allee was at the White House in conference with the President this morning. Allee would not make any statement when he came out. It was only a short time after his call that the official announcement was made.

It is assumed that the President decided to treat the Republican Party in Delaware as reunited. As long as Addicks controls the vote in the present Legislature it will hardly be possible, however, to elect a Senator in Ball's place. Allee, as expected, will use his control of patronage to build up the wing of the party in opposition to Addicks.

BAY STATE DEMOCRATS NOMINATE BARTLETT

Ex-Mayor McNamee Decides Not to Fight to Head the Ticket.

TARIFF ISSUE IS PARAMOUNT

National Control of Insurance Companies Opposed — Bryan Platform Rejected—Fight Over Committee.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—Gen. Charles W. Bartlett of Boston was to-day nominated by the Massachusetts Democrats as their candidate for Governor at the convention in Faneuil Hall. The others nominated were:

For Lieutenant Governor—Henry M. Whitney of Brookline.

For Secretary of State—Henry B. Little of Newburyport.

For Treasurer and Receiver General—Daniel J. Doherty of Westfield.

For Auditor—P. J. Ashe of North Adams.

For Attorney General—John T. Leahy of Boston.

The only discord of the day came upon the nomination by the convention of eighteen members at large of the State Committee. Daniel Y. Toomey of Springfield made an unsuccessful attempt to have the convention decree that hereafter the members of the State Committee be elected directly by the people at the Senatorial and Congressional Conventions. Mr. Toomey charged that the Democratic State Committee, as at present constituted, does not represent the Democratic voters, but is a close corporation that dictates party policy and candidates.

Several delegates, including Watson of Boston, Donahue of Lowell, and Holmes and Sheehan of Malden, spoke in support of Mr. Toomey's proposition, but the convention voted it down.

Up to the time that James E. Cotter of Hyde Park arose to place before the convention the name of Gen. Bartlett as the Gubernatorial candidate, it was believed that there would be a contest. John H. H. McNamee, ex-Mayor of Cambridge, had announced that he would make a struggle for the nomination.

To the surprise of the convention, Mr. McNamee did not make any contest, but seconded Gen. Bartlett's nomination, saying that if Gen. Bartlett should be victorious at the polls he would not forget the Democrats who elected him.

The platform contains these planks:

"The paramount issue at this time before the people of Massachusetts is relief from tariff restrictions. The effect of this policy, forced upon the dominant Republican Party by the greed of great and selfish interests, has been to cut Massachusetts off from its natural markets of sale and purchase and to push the State toward the danger line of industrial decline.

"We believe that a sensible relief from these evils could be obtained without disturbance to business by placing upon the free list a number of the raw materials of our industries, such as coal, iron, lumber, hides, wood pulp, and by the immediate enactment of a dual tariff law which, while having the present tariff as its maximum, would give liberal reductions in duty rates to those nations that will accord to us favorable trade opportunities.

"We believe that the revelations of life insurance corruption, brought out by the investigation now going on in New York City, make it evident that there cannot be for these corporations too much or too close official oversight, and we protest against substituting a system of National control of more than questionable constitutionality for the existence of State supervision.

"We heartily commend the diplomatic courage and sagacity of President Roosevelt in exerting the great influence of his office to bring to an end the terrible and bloody war in the Far East."

Jeremiah Watson of Boston offered a substitute platform, which was overwhelmingly voted down. During the reading of it the convention was in an uproar, many of the delegates endeavoring to drown the sound of Mr. Watson's voice. He several times announced that he would read the substitute if it took all night, and was finally allowed to proceed.

Asked from the gallery who was the author of the platform, he replied, "William J. Bryan."

Just before adjournment Gen. Bartlett and Mr. Whitney entered the hall, and received a great ovation. Both made brief addresses.

"When the votes have been counted somebody will learn that there has been a fight," said Gen. Bartlett.

Andrew G. Webster, Chairman of the Republican committee which says it represents 40,000 Massachusetts Republicans who believe in free coal and iron, said to-night that, while he intends to vote for Guild and the rest of the Republican State ticket, he will substitute Whitney's name for Draper's when marking for Lieutenant Governor.

Mr. Webster is expected by the Democrats to lead a stampede which will result in Mr. Whitney's election.

DALZELL SAYS IT'S A BLUFF.

Treats the Massachusetts Republican Platform with Contempt.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania is a stand-patter who is not scared by the Massachusetts Republican platform. He expressed his opinion of it as he was leaving the White House to-day after a call on the President.

"It is a straddle and a bluff," said Mr. Dalzell, contemptuously, "and is not intended to mean anything more than what all Republicans, in convention and elsewhere, have declared at all times—that is, that the tariff will be revised by its own friends at the proper time."

BRONX FUSION FORCES MEET.

A Committee of Seven Named to Hunt Up Candidates.

A conference of Fusionists was held at the Union Republican Club of the Thirty-fifth Assembly District, the Bronx, last night, to consider names for borough offices. Representatives from the Citizens' Union, the Municipal Ownership League, the Business Men's Committee, and the Republicans of the Bronx were present. The conference resulted in the appointment of a committee of seven which will consider names and report to the main body at 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Several names were considered, but Chairman Healy refused to make them public, saying he did not want the names known until the main body had heard what action would be taken by the Committee of Seven.

The chief purpose of the conference was to get a formidable candidate to oppose Borough President Louis F. Haffen.

DEFEAT FOR PAPER TRUST.

Judge Vandeventer Orders Various Officers to Produce Books.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 7.—Judge Vandeventer, in the United States District Court, late this afternoon decided that the case of the United States against the General Paper Company was not appealable.

This decision was based on a motion for stay of a previous order of the court, pending an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. The court to-day ordered officers of the Hennepin Paper Company, the Itasca Paper Company, and the Northwestern Paper Company to answer the questions asked before Special Examiner Taylor and produce the books of the company.

The prima donna sang a number from "Romeo and Juliet," the grand aria from "La Tosca," and, supported by a chorus of 400, the Inflammatus from "Stabat Mater," and encores.

The attendance at the five concerts and two rehearsals of the festival aggregated about 12,000, and financial success was attained for the first time.

HARLEM FIRE LOSS, $100,000.

J. Reeber & Sons Lose $50,000, with No Insurance.

The big fire in Harlem, which started early yesterday morning in a ragpicker's shop, at 434 East 108th Street, was not really under control till 6 o'clock in the morning, five hours after it started. The damage was $100,000, which is only partially covered by insurance. The fire destroyed two-thirds of the block between 107th and 108th Streets, First Avenue and Pleasant Avenue. Then it crossed 107th Street and burned through stables owned by Meyer Brothers, and back to 106th Street. The progress of the flames southward was checked by the vacant lot at the rear of the stables.

The office of Lingenbach's stone works was destroyed, and also a large shed where a number of coffins were stored, which had been saved from the fire at Stolls Brothers' coffin factory in 106th Street. Four alarms were sent in, and before 2 o'clock twenty-five fire companies, three fireboats, and a half dozen tugboats were working hard to get the fire under control.

The centre of the fire was in the lumber yards of J. Reeber & Sons, in Pleasant Avenue, between 107th and 108th Streets. More than 200 horses were taken out of the Meyer stables and another stable owned by Ruddin & Smith, in the rear of the lumber yard, but the flames spread so rapidly and the heat was so intense that it was impossible to get all the animals out of the last-named stable; and thirteen perished. No lives were lost, but Michael Neher and his wife had a narrow escape from death in the two-story building which they occupied on the river bank. The Nehers did not wake until the flames had entered their kitchen, when they were aroused by the barking of their two dogs. The firemen got a ladder to the side of the house, and Mrs. Neher was carried down, but her husband did not manage to escape until his hands and face had been severely burned. The house was destroyed, and Neher lost $1,000 in money, two gold watches, and a collection of coins worth $500.

The heaviest losers by the fire are J. Reeber & Sons, who estimate their loss at $50,000, and have none of it covered by insurance.

The neighborhood is densely populated by Italians, and hundreds of scantily clad tenants, alarmed by the flames, rushed into the streets. The cries of the Italians in the streets, mingled with the noise of the stampeding horses which had been released from the burning stables, created great excitement.

MITCHELL STIRS UP UNIONS.

Speech Calls Out Strike Talk—A Basis for Agreement, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, Penn., Oct. 7.—John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers, spoke to 5,000 miners in the open air here to-day. His entire speech was an effort to hold the miners firm to their union views.

"Every reduction in the wages of coal miners made in the last fifty years started in Pittsburg and swept westward," he said. "You are the important men, beware."

"What are we going to do next Spring?" he asked of the crowd.

"Stay out for the price!" yelled a hundred or more men.

"I am going to reiterate a statement I made at the last National Convention," Mitchell resumed. "As far as I am concerned there will never again be a reduction in wages by agreement, at least.

"I told the President of the Pittsburg Coal Company two years ago that reducing the miners' wages would prove an injury to his company. It did. In his last report to his stockholders he announced that the company had to pass its dividend.

"I believe there is a basis for an agreement by the labor unions and capitalists without having to resort to strikes and lockouts."

PITTSBURG, Oct. 7.—John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers, on his way to Elizabeth, Penn., said to-day:

"As far as I can judge, after having been in the anthracite field for some time, I can see no reason why there should be a general coal strike next Spring. In three months we have added to our rolls more than 50,000 anthracite miners."

KILLS HIS BEST FRIEND.

Bank Clerk Says He Was Playing with Pistol When It Exploded.

The police of the Hamburg Avenue Station, Brooklyn, are conducting an investigation into the death of George Hague, 18 years old, of 260 Cornelia Street, Williamsburg, who was shot and killed last night by Charles Elchorn, 19 years old, of 448 Hamburg Avenue.

Young Hague was a bookkeeper employed in the dry goods store of Charles Broadway Rouss. Charles Elchorn is a clerk in the Produce Exchange Bank. The two young men had been almost inseparable companions for a number of years. They met at Elchorn's house last night and were preparing to go to the theatre. A brother, Peter Elchorn, and the mother, Mrs. Elchorn, were in other parts of the house when a shot was heard.

Hague was found lying on the floor in a bedroom upstairs with a bullet hole in the back of his skull. He died in about a minute. At the same time the two Elchorn brothers ran out of the house in search of a doctor. The police were also summoned.

Both of the Elchorn brothers were locked up in the Hamburg Avenue Station after their stories had been heard by the Captain. They said at first that they had not been near Hague when the shot was fired.

Later, Charles broke down under cross-examination and admitted that he had been playing with a revolver in the room with Hague, when it exploded accidentally, the ball striking his companion.

"Are your people holding? South Carolina will stand."

Mr. Smith replied: "Depend upon it, Texas will stand firm."

When seen to-day Mr. Smith said: "Truly, the fight is on. My word has gone forth that Texas will stand firm. It is the duty of every Texan and of every loyal citizen of the South to lend every possible aid to the association at this critical period."

ANTI-BOSS CAMPAIGN STIRS UP NEW JERSEY

Every County Has Named Candidates on That Platform.

SLOGAN OF BOTH PARTIES

Nominating Conventions Declare for Fagan's Equal Tax and Colby's Limited Franchise Policies.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Oct. 7.—Morris is the last county heard from in the phenomenal anti-boss and anti-monopoly campaign that is being waged in the ranks of both parties in all parts of the State. The Democrats there named W. B. Gillen as their candidate for Sheriff Thursday night, and in accepting the nomination Mr. Gillen made a declaration of independence.

"The better elements in the county, encouraged by the downfall of Lentz in Essex," he said, "have determined to down the ring—and every man who hears these words knows there is a ring in Morris County. Tell your people that if I am elected I will be the Sheriff. I will stand for no dictation."

In the adjoining county of Middlesex, Republican independents are making things uncomfortable for Theodore Strong. Gloucester Republicans have raised the "boss" issue against Speaker Avis, their candidate for State Senator, and are preparing to aid the re-election of ex-Congressman Ferrell, the Democratic candidate against him.

In Monmouth the fight of the anti-gambling element against the election of ex-Senator Francis to the Shrievalty has been given fresh impetus by the charge of Supreme Court Justice Hendrickson to the Grand Jury in which he referred to the prevalence of gambling resorts at Long Branch last Summer and told the Grand Jurors not to hesitate to make presentments.

The marked feature of the new movement throughout the State is, however, the unanimity with which the local nominating conventions of both parties are declaring for Mayor Fagan's equal tax policy, and for the limited franchise policy of Mr. Colby. Both parties have now pledged themselves in every county to the enactment of laws that will force the railroads to the payment of full local taxes on all they own, and prevent the gift of perpetual street rights to the trolley syndicate.

If both parties mean what they say, the railroad lobby may as well stay at home during next Winter's legislative session.

Already the anti-monopoly flames have been fed by the sale to some of the railroads last week by the State Riparian Commission of large stretches of the valuable Hudson River shore front off Weehawken.

The grant in perpetuity of the State's under-water lands is against the lately proclaimed policy of the State administration for the leasing only, for short terms, of these valuable State holdings. The Riparian Board was appointed by Gov. Stokes, and it was only last Winter that he decried the large loss the State had sustained in making sales instead of leases of its riparian properties. The board's sale of another strip of water front at Camden for $5 per front foot to the Public Service Corporation is criticised particularly because of the contest being made in Essex and Hudson against the aggressions of that very syndicate.

Mayor Fagan's campaign in Jersey City reached a sensational climax last week in the open break between himself and Col. Dickinson, the Republican leader in the county. Mr. Fagan's open letter charging that the Colonel is using the party organization to beat him, at the behest of the corporations, and Col. Dickinson's retort that he is against Fagan because he is the most expensive Mayor Jersey City has ever had, were the visible manifestations of the rupture.

Col. Dickinson summoned the voting machine to his aid in his anti-Fagan campaign to-day. As Secretary of State, the Colonel has the say as to where the voting machines shall be placed, in whatever county. The experience in past campaigns had been that the machines are a serious obstruction to the voting of split tickets. Col. Dickinson has ordered one set up at every voting place in the Second Ward of Jersey City. The Second Ward is the Democratic stronghold, and there lies the bulk of the Democratic following with which the Mayor has, in his two campaigns, pieced out the Republican minority into a winning majority. The voting machines will prevent his Democratic friends there from voting for him unless they want to lose their votes for other Democratic candidates.

In Essex, the break between Colby and Lentz has been made as acute as that between Fagan and Dickinson by Major Lentz's refusal to surrender the management of the campaign to Colby and in the arrangements of the Colby contingent to run their own campaign without the aid of the organization.

The Colby forces say that the Major has a County Committee at his back to keep him in power only as the result of frauds at the primary polls, and are somewhat disturbed by Supreme Court Justice Gummere's refusal to allow the recount through which they hoped to prove it and gain enough seats in the committee to give them the control.

Major Lentz gives out a statement to-night of his reasons for refusing to step down and out. He says that when Mr. Colby first came to Essex County, mutual friends introduced them and asked the Major to advance him politically. That, the Major says, he gladly did, only to be repaid now with the ingratitude of this demand for his sceptre. He says he owes a duty to other candidates on the ticket, and that he must stay.

SAVED DOG, SUES FOR FEE.

Physician Brings Action Against Marshall Sternes, New York Lawyer.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 7.—Marshall Sternes, a lawyer of New York, is defendant in a suit to recover $5, brought in behalf of Dr. Charles B. Keeler of New Canaan, who attended a prize Boston bulldog.

Mr. Sternes, who occupied a cottage at New Canaan this Summer, went away on a short vacation and left the dog in care of Miss Rose Rogers, a daughter of the late Henry B. Rogers, a wealthy manufacturer. The bulldog got into a fight with two curs, and one of its ears was chewed.

About midnight Miss Rogers routed Dr. Keeler out of bed, and he sewed up the ear. He says the dog would have bled to death had he not done so. He sent in a bill for $10 for his services, and Mr. Sternes paid no attention to it. He placed the matter in the hands of an attorney. Mr. Sternes paid $5, and said that was all he would give. Then the doctor ordered suit brought.

BULL MOVEMENT WAS REAL.

Three of Them Hit by a Lackawanna Engine.

The Lackawanna Railroad suffered considerably yesterday from a bull movement, but the movement was not of the usual type. It tended to the benefit of the butcher shop rather than the broker's office.

Trains on the Morris and Essex Division of the road were delayed for almost three hours in the morning on account of a freight wreck caused by three young bulls who got on the track, and with bovine insistency declined to move until persuaded by a cowcatcher moving at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

But the bulls got their revenge; without knowing much about it, however, by forcing the engine off the track. It turned turtle, and it took a wrecking crew three hours to clear the track. In the meantime thousands of commuters were tied up.

WHITES AT RING'S MERCY.

Bonaparte Says That Would Be Effect of Proposed Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 7.—Secretary Bonaparte, in a speech here to-night, denounced the Poe amendment as a scheme to turn over Maryland to the Gorman ring. He said in part:

"Four weeks from next Tuesday the people of Maryland will decide whether, for the time whereof no man can now see the end, they shall belong to themselves or belong to the Democratic ring.

"Some time since, one of the Democrats in Baltimore who are working with all their strength to defeat the amendment, showed me a letter from a respectable Democratic lawyer of a county adjoining this, in which the writer said he and his neighbors were but little interested in the amendment because in his part of the State there were but very few negro voters. It is on such a careless or stupid misunderstanding of the vital facts of the situation that the ring relies to make the amendment law.

"Let each one of you now think how he could clearly prove by evidence which is not hearsay, or in anywise imperfect, that his grandfather was a legal voter of some American State, and he will understand how completely the rights of those even most favored by the terms of the amendment will be at the ring's mercy if it be adopted; how thoroughly, even for them, its pretended safeguards against the disfranchisement of white men are a mockery, a delusion, and a snare."

MACFADDEN HELD FOR TRIAL.

Physical Culture Show Will Go On—Comstock to be There.

The examination in the case of Bernarr Macfadden on the charge of exhibiting and having in his possession obscene pictures, namely, the posters advertising a physical culture show in Madison Square Garden, was concluded yesterday before Justice Wyatt in Special Sessions. Macfadden was held in $500 for trial. Despite the arrest, drugstores, barbershops, and many other places are exhibiting the union-suited poster girls bravely in their windows.

Mr. Comstock said yesterday that the holding of Macfadden would not necessarily interfere with the physical culture show. But Mr. Comstock said he would be at the show to see that it was within the bounds of the law.

Justice Wyatt said the advertising was absolutely within the statute, but he believed it was not needed in this city.

National Strike to Aid Locked-Out Men

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers announced yesterday that it has decided on a National strike against members of the New York Electrical Contractors' Association until the lock-out of Electrical Workers' Union No. 3 is declared off. The lock-out of the local union by the Electrical Contractors' Association has lasted fourteen months.

OLD WAR TAX ON BEER TO STOP THE DEFICIT

Republican Leaders Plan to Increase the Levy $1 a Barrel.

WOULD BALK TARIFF REVISION

Promoters of Tax Estimate That $45,000,000 Would Be Raised—Brewers to Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—From Republican leaders in both branches of Congress it was learned to-day that it has been practically decided to revive the old war tax of $1 per barrel on beer in order to raise a sufficient amount of new revenue to make up the present deficit.

During the last two months several quiet conferences have been held on this subject, and the programme is understood to be settled. Such a tax would meet the deficit, and probably would result in a surplus. It would yield the Government a revenue estimated at $45,000,000 annually, and the deficit is not estimated at more than $30,000,000.

There is no question that the "stand-patters" are willing to grasp at anything to avoid the necessity of revising the tariff and the reimposition of the beer tax has found especial favor in their eyes.

In addition to the beer tax, Representative Burton of Ohio, Chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee and prominently mentioned for Chairman of Appropriations, is fathering a scheme to impose an additional duty on coffee. His plan is to tax coffee imports 3 cents a pound, which would raise $30,000,000 a year. As his plan would be in the nature of tariff revision, and might open the door in that direction, the leaders are inclined to oppose it. Their preference so far is to revive the beer tax.

During the Spanish-American war the brewers consented to the beer tax without much of a fight, but strong opposition is being brought to bear to any reimposition at this time. Various representatives of the brewing interests have been in consultation with the Republican leaders recently, but it is said by the latter that their arguments are specious and that the brewing industry can well afford to contribute this share to the running expenses of the country.

Of the Senators and Representatives who have indicated opposition to the plan practically every one comes from a district where the brewing interests are exceptionally strong. None of the inner coterie which will have the final settlement of the question is affected by these interests in any way, and one of the leading Senators said to-night that the tax was a practical certainty.

DR. BEHRING CONFIDENT OF CONSUMPTION CURE

His New Principle Already Successful with Animals.

NEXT CONGRESS IN AMERICA

Delegates Decide to Meet in Washington in 1908—Dine with President Loubet.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—At the closing session of the International Tuberculosis Congress to-day, Prof. Behring made a statement relative to his new curative principle for tuberculosis.

The statement attracted much attention. Distinguished medical men from many countries occupied the platform and filled the salon of the Grand Palace. The professor said:

"In the course of the last two years I recognized with certainty the existence of a curative principle completely different from the antitoxic principle. This new curative principle plays an essential rôle in the operation of the immunity derived from my bovo-vaccine, which has proved effective against animal tuberculosis during the past four years. This curative principle reposes upon the impregnation of the living cells of the organism with a substance originating from tuberculose virus, which substance I designate 'T. C.'"

Prof. Behring then gave a lengthy technical description of how "T. C." was introduced into the cellular organism, and said it had already given marked results in the treatment of animals. He expressed the confident belief that his researches would permit similar curative results in humans.

He added that he was unable to say how soon positive results would be obtainable, but he felt as certain that these results would be attained as when he first announced his discovery of a new method for treating diphtheria.

The American delegates were interested listeners to Prof. Behring's statement. Later they were asked whether the present state of medical science held out the hope of a permanent cure of tuberculosis. Dr. Lawrence F. Flick of Philadelphia, on behalf of the American delegation, said:

"The present state of medical science holds out a good prospect of a permanent cure for tuberculosis when the disease is taken in its early stages. This, however, is not through a specific remedy, but by proper alimentation and open-air life, with exercise duly restricted. If the present knowledge concerning the means of preventing tuberculosis were generally applied it is safe to say that tuberculosis would be stamped out of civilized countries within twenty-five years."

It was decided to-day to hold the next Tuberculosis Congress in Washington in 1908. The American delegates say that the meeting at Washington will be a notable gathering and probably give an opportunity for a definite determination of the question of curative specifics. It is the intention to organize for the delegates excursions and visits to the hospitals throughout the leading cities of the United States.

The members of the congress dined with President Loubet at the Elysée Palace to-night. M. Loubet in proposing the health of the chiefs of the States represented said he hoped that the congress to be held in the United States in 1908 would add a fresh contribution to the civilizing and humanitarian work in which the members were engaged.

Dr. Darlington, the New York Health Commissioner, when asked yesterday what he thought of Prof. Behring's reported cure for tuberculosis, said:

"I question the efficacy of any such cure until it has been proved. I recognize Dr. Behring's high standing, but do not like the way he is introducing his discovery. Why does he hold it back?"

Dr. Walter Bensel of 135 West Eighty-seventh Street, the Superintendent of the Sanitary Department, was less skeptical than the Commissioner. He said:

"I have so much respect for anything Dr. Behring says that I am sure his cure will prove of some value to the profession. I cannot believe the reports that he is not going to give the public his secret as soon as possible."

In 1901, Prof. Behring won the Nobel prize for medicine, amounting to about $40,000, for his method of rendering cattle immune from tuberculosis by inoculation. It is understood that he has devoted the whole of the money he received to the conduct of further investigations along the same lines, with a view to finding a cure for tuberculosis in humans. In a lecture delivered in Stockholm he declared his intention of doing this. In 1902 he published a book giving the results of six years of experimentation.

The professor's anti-diphtheria serum has saved thousands of lives. The death rate in Berlin from diphtheria was cut from 2,000 to 500 a year in a short time by the use of the serum.

Prof. Behring has all along been confident that he was on the right track in his tuberculosis experiments. As early as the Spring of 1903 he made a public announcement to this effect.

SOON TO HAVE A KING.

It Is Expected Norway Will Elect Prince Charles This Month.

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 7.—In the Storthing to-day the debate was opened on the Karlstad agreement concerning the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden. The Republican minority, which is opposed to the agreement and which is supposed to number twenty votes, profited by the occasion to attack Premier Michelsen, Foreign Minister Loevland, and the other Norwegian negotiators. The discussion began in the morning, and was adjourned late to-night.

It will be continued on Monday, and will undoubtedly result in the acceptance by an overwhelming majority of the Government's proposals. Norway then will await a corresponding decision by the Swedish Riksdag and the notification to the powers of the dissolution of the union before electing as King Prince Charles of Denmark.

This, it is expected, will take place in the last week in October.

The Baroness will sail Nov. 28.

A GERMAN WARNING TO US.

Herr Schippel Says We Will Have to Make Trade Agreements.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—The commercial treaty negotiations between Germany and the United States, which were to begin this month, have been postponed until November.

Considerable attention has been attracted here by a book entitled "America and the Commercial Treaty Policy," by Max Schippel, one of the best-informed of the Socialist members of the Reichstag, who, unlike other Socialists in that body, is a protectionist. Herr Schippel says in the last chapter of his book:

"The United States is now less than ever in possession of a monopoly for providing foodstuffs for countries in which there is a scarcity of grain and meats. Younger and dangerous competitors have arisen, and every tariff discrimination hits the people of the United States to a greater degree than before. The home markets have become too narrow for many American industries, and, in fact, the extension of foreign markets has become necessary to the existence of thousands of commercial enterprises. In view of these facts, hundreds of thousands of workmen in the United States believe that tariff agreements with foreign countries are necessary.

"Can the high protectionists at Washington continue to ignore the signs of warning?"

HUNGARIANS MAKE ADVANCES.

Two Leaders of the Coalition Propose a Plan to End the Crisis.

VIENNA, Oct. 7.—For the first time since the beginning of the Hungarian crisis two prominent coalitionists, Francis Kossuth and Gezade Polonyi, have taken an active step with a view to an adjustment of the situation. This morning they wired to Herr von Szögyény-Marich, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador at Berlin, who is at present on his estate in Hungary, asking him to receive them.

The Ambassador answered in the affirmative and MM. Kossuth and Polonyi hastened to Csor and had a long discussion with the diplomat. M. Kossuth submitted a plan to appease Hungarian feelings and simultaneously to remove Emperor Francis Joseph's scruples. Herr von Szögyény-Marich promised to act as mediator between the crown and the coalitionists by requesting the King Emperor to grant an audience for an explanation of M. Kossuth's plans. At the same time he warned his visitors of the risk of not informing the other leaders of the coalition and said that if the effort failed it would probably be construed as an attempt to cover the retreat of the coalition.

Austrian circles are not hopeful of a peaceful solution of the question.

The Hungarian Diet reopens on Oct. 10 and Count Julius Andrassy, ex-Hungarian Premier, was to-day intrusted by the coalition with the task of moving the impeachment of the Cabinet of Baron Fejervary.

BOER PLOT EXAGGERATED.

Teamsters from Cape Colony Intended to Steal Cattle.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—The Government has received an answer from Gen. von Trotha, commanding the German forces in Southwest Africa, to a cabled request for information concerning the reported Boer plot to overthrow German rule in Southwest Africa.

Gen. von Trotha represents the newspaper reports of the incident as much exaggerated. He says a certain young Boer informed the Windhoek police that a number of teamsters from Cape Colony who were in the German service had formed a plan to attack a German wagon train accompanied by a herd of cattle, which they meant to steal and drive across the British frontier. The police arrested four of the ringleaders of the plot and detained them, pending an investigation. There was no evidence, Gen. von Trotha says, that they were conspiring with the natives.

The dispatch makes no mention of Andrew de Wet, a nephew of the famous Boer General, who was previously reported as having been arrested, with four other Boers, accused of plotting the overthrow of German rule in Southwest Africa. The date of Gen. von Trotha's dispatch is not made public.

FAMINE THREATENS MOSCOW.

Bakers Join the Strike—Three Officers Killed by Mobs.

MOSCOW, Oct. 7.—The strike here has spread to the bakers. There is only sufficient white bread to last two days.

The large crowds of strikers in the streets are assuming a threatening attitude.

The employes of the street railroads, who have joined the strike, have rendered many of the cars useless.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 7.—The strike movement at Moscow is causing uneasiness among the authorities here, not only on account of the threatening nature of the demonstrations at Moscow, but also owing to the probability of their extending to St. Petersburg and other cities and starting a wave of labor troubles similar to that which followed in the wake of the January disorders.

The press dispatches report that a gendarme, an officer, and a policeman have been killed by Moscow mobs.

There is a strong strike sentiment among the St. Petersburg printers, and revolutionary proclamations are being distributed among the workmen, declaring that the Moscow events are the tocsin for another phase of the revolution.

PERIL IN MOROCCO DISPUTE

British Agreement with Russia Regarding Afghanistan Likely—Paris Views Situation with Alarm.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The Matin reviews the circumstances of M. Delcassé's retirement from the Foreign Office, alleging that a number of sensational events occurred in connection with the change. M. Delcassé is represented as making a speech to the other Ministers warning them that if they yielded to the German demands concerning Morocco the Ministry thereafter would always be subject to German dictation.

The Matin further asserts that Great Britain conveyed definite assurances to France of her readiness to mobilize the British fleet with a view to adopting aggressive measures if Germany attacked France.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Matin's disclosures in connection with the resignation of M. Delcassé and the Moroccan crisis created much talk in diplomatic circles here to-day.

The Matin not only makes the sensational statement that Great Britain communicated to France her intention of supporting France in the event of war with Germany, but it actually gives alleged details of England's intentions regarding the place for the landing of troops and the seizure of the Kiel Canal.

The Matin's statement is published at length in all the afternoon newspapers. In official quarters, however, no expression of opinion is obtainable. Foreign Minister Lansdowne is absent from the city, and it is impossible to secure a definite statement regarding the actual lengths to which Great Britain went at the time of the crisis.

It will be remembered that at that time The Associated Press obtained a statement from a high official of the British Foreign Office which, to a certain extent, supports the assertions of the Matin.

The negotiations respecting their spheres of influence in Afghanistan, which were pending between Great Britain and Russia when the Russo-Japanese war began, will be resumed should Russia be willing, of which there seems to be no doubt. The British Government is anxious that questions which caused uneasiness in the past should again be the subject of friendly discussion between the diplomats of the two Governments. Great Britain has already taken steps to this end.

An official of the Foreign Office said to-day that it was rather premature to speak of the negotiations, but he intimated that the Government had taken the initiative in looking to a resumption of the exchange of views. The Government had always hoped, the official added, to resume the negotiations, and it realized that the present was the most opportune time, as the peoples of the two countries recognized that it was to their mutual benefit that the questions in dispute be amicably settled.

The negotiations which are about to be resumed have particular reference to Afghanistan, where each party desires that the other give guarantees not to extend its sphere of influence. Russia has shown a desire to reach an understanding by curbing the aggressive policies of her border Governors. This has created a good impression in Great Britain.

Respecting the report that Great Britain is willing to recognize Russia's special privileges in South Turkey in return for Russian assurances of a non-aggressive policy on the Indian frontier, it is stated that the question has not been discussed officially. It is possible, however, that Great Britain is waiting for such a suggestion to come from Russia, when it might receive favorable consideration. Great Britain's policy in regard to Constantinople is dominated by consideration for the security of the highway to India.

With the safety of India guaranteed by the Anglo-Japanese treaty and an understanding with Russia, there would be no reason to fear the presence of Russia on the Bosphorus. Great Britain has also to offer in exchange for the further security of her Indian possessions her support in obtaining for Russia free commercial access to the Persian Gulf.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—Prince von Bülow's declarations are generally discussed here, but neither in official nor public spheres have they aroused sympathy.

At the Quai d'Orsay it is felt that the German Chancellor would have been wiser had he been less expansive, and that all that France needs to say is that she has one ally and one excellent friend in Europe, and that she does not propose to extend her relations for the time being, more especially as the result of the recent negotiations on the subject of Morocco has practically left her in the same position as before, without any material gain or loss.

It is noticeable, however, that in French official circles there is a strong feeling of pessimism in regard to the present situation, which is declared to be menacing from more quarters than one. This feeling is not shared by British diplomats, who consider that Emperor William has been beaten all along the line, and note with amusement the frankly expressed disgust of their German colleagues over the part which they have been made to play.

Kirke La Shelle, the theatrical manager, according to an appraisal of his estate filed in the Surrogates' office yesterday, left about $155,026. He had an equity of $69,552 in realty and a gross personal estate of $75,784. His debts amounted to $59,724, which with charges for administering the estate made deductions amounting to $64,806. WELCOME FOR TOGO A TRIUMPHAL ENTRY Planned to Divert Japanese Attention from the Treaty.

A GRAND NAVAL REVIEW

British Squadron and American Warships It Is Expected Will Be Present.

TOKIO, Oct. 7.—The visit to Japanese waters of the British squadron commanded by Vice Admiral Sir Gerard Noel, Commander in Chief of the China Station, will, it is expected, be made the occasion soon after the ratification of the peace treaty, of a grand naval review, which, with Admiral Togo's triumphal entry into this city, will offer a splendid occasion for diverting the people's attention from the unsatisfactory terms of the treaty.

It is believed that the authorities will do everything possible to utilize these events as demonstrations of the fact that the peace of Asia is guarded by the two powerful allies.

American warships will, it is expected, be present at the naval review.

Many of those who allowed themselves to be carried away by the tide of dissatisfaction which set in when the peace terms became known here are gradually becoming reconciled to the situation.

SIBERIAN HOMESTEAD PLAN.

Ministries Considering a Bill Providing Farms and Bonuses.

PETERSBURG, Oct. 7.—Realizing the advantage of retaining in the Far East a stock of sturdy and energetic colonists, and at the same time desiring to reward veterans of the war, the Ministries of the Interior and Agriculture have worked out a draft of a homesteading law. Under it officers and soldiers are entitled to pre-empt free within two years farms ranging from 135 acres, with a bonus of $50 for enlisted men, to 1,000 acres for the higher officers and a loan of from $250 to $2,500. They are to be exempt from taxes for five years.

The law will affect all the unoccupied lands in Siberia, a large amount of which is now valueless on account of the lack of communication, but which will be opened to settlement if the railroad connecting the Trans-Caspian and Trans-Siberian systems, for which private companies are now seeking concessions, is built.

GALLAGHER'S POLICE ATTACK FOUR HOTELS

Arrests at the Gerard, Dunlop, and Cambridge Court.

THEIR REGISTERS SEIZED

Charge That They Are Disorderly Resorts—Proprietors to Fight in Court.

Capt. Gallagher of the West Forty-seventh Street Station arrested last night on warrants issued by Magistrate Baker, in the West Side Court, the clerks of four well-known hotels and apartment houses, charging them with maintaining disorderly resorts. The warrants were obtained by Detectives McGrath and Marx, who testified that they had been solicited in front of these places and taken into the hotels.

The prisoners were Charles Buckley, clerk of the Cambridge Court Hotel in West Forty-ninth Street; Henry Richwell, clerk of the Hamilton Hotel in West Forty-fifth Street; Henry Willis, clerk of the Hotel Dunlop in West Forty-fourth Street, and Manchester Pitman, clerk of the Hotel Gerard in West Forty-fourth Street. The registers of all four were confiscated. The guests were not disturbed.

Capt. Gallagher says that for several weeks complaints have been made to him that the apartment houses have been conducted on a basis contrary to the moral interests of the community. Accordingly he planned a campaign to get facts on which to act in court. A few days ago he detailed Detectives Curry, McGraw, and Donahue of his staff to work up the evidence. Last night they reported that they were ready to act in the cases of the four apartment houses, and were told to proceed.

No sooner were the arrests made than the managers of the hotels communicated with their attorneys and advised them of the facts. They will be prepared to offer a determined fight when the cases are tried this morning.

Manager Roland Macurdy of the Cambridge Court said to a TIMES reporter:

"This is an outrage, and some one will suffer for it. We have been imposed upon by an overzealous Police Captain, and will seek vindication in court to-morrow. The alleged evidence was obtained by accident merely through a change in clerks.

"No case can be made against us. We are running a respectable family hotel. The persons who registered were to all appearances legitimate guests."

The management of the Hotel Gerard said last night that to accuse them of conducting a disorderly resort was preposterous. They have many men well known in New York as guests. Mrs. Jefferson M. Davis has been a guest there for ten years.

SMOOT AGAINST APOSTLES.

Refuses to Vote for Two Colleagues Accused of Polygamy.

SALT LAKE, Oct. 7.—United States Senator Reed Smoot, an apostle of the Mormon Church, in conference yesterday, refrained from voting to sustain the quorum of apostles and other authorities of the church. He gave out a statement to-day, explaining his position, saying:

"I will not vote to sustain as members of the quorum of twelve apostles in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, John W. Taylor and Matthias F. Cowley, until they have had some hearing by some competent authority in the church. I do not think it proper for me to vote to sustain them."

Apostle Smoot defined "competent authority" as a bishop's ecclesiastical court.

Apostles Taylor and Cowley are reported to have taken plural wives since the promulgation of the Woodruff manifesto and for months past their whereabouts have not been definitely known. All efforts to subpoena them as witnesses in the Smoot hearing at Washington failed. At that time it was reported that one of them was in Mexico and the other in Canada, but recently both were reported to be in Utah.

In the hearing at Washington before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, Senator Smoot declared that he would not vote to sustain them in the General Conference of the church. Senator Smoot did not attend the conference in April last. Yesterday he refrained from voting, but he did not vote in the negative or offer any protest.

ASSISTANT CANAL ENGINEER.

John G. Sullivan Appointed—Three Paymasters Recalled.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—John G. Sullivan has been appointed Assistant Chief Engineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, according to a dispatch received to-day from Chief Engineer Stevens at Panama.

Mr. Sullivan is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was Division Engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, with headquarters at Winnipeg.

PANAMA, Oct. 7.—The entire Panama Canal Commission held a session this morning in the Administration Building and ratified all the acts of the Executive Committee.

To-morrow the Board of Consulting Engineers will rest.

As a result of an order of the Secretary of the Navy recalling Paymasters Eugene C. Tobey, George C. Schafer, and Victor S. Jackson, who have been on duty in connection with the Canal Commission, Paymaster Schafer has resigned. It is reported that civilians will replace the recalled officers.

FREDERIC RANKEN ILL.

Librettist Prostrated Since the Production of "Happyland."

Frederick Ranken, the librettist, author of the book of "Happyland," now playing at the Lyric, is seriously ill at his home, 311 West Ninety-seventh Street. What the exact nature of his illness is the physicians have not been able to decide, further than to pronounce it a form of nervousness.

On Monday evening, at the first presentation of "Happyland" in New York, Mr. Ranken complained of being ill. The following day he was very much worse. At first it was thought that his ailment was typhoid fever, but as symptoms did not develop, the collapse was attributed to nervous exhaustion.

Although Mr. Ranken's condition is not critical, it will necessitate a prolonged rest, and he probably will go to some health resort.

Ban Off Boxing in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Boxing contests were resumed in Chicago to-night, after being under the ban of the police for many months. Five contests of six rounds each were carded at the Chicago Athletic Club. Mr. Belmont Still Improving.

At the General Memorial Hospital late last night Mr. Belmont's condition was reported to be very favorable. Only members of his family were allowed to visit him yesterday. August Belmont, Jr., was with his father for awhile in the afternoon.

The commission will visit Baltimore, Boston, and other cities with a view to gathering knowledge as to the more economical conduct of institutions for the care of epileptics and the feeble minded. They are at the Holland oHuse.

DR. HART HELD FOR MURDER.

Admits Giving Large Quantity of Drugs to Young Girl.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Dr. Oliver B. Hart was charged to-day with the murder of ten-year-old Irene Kiokow, who was found dying from drugs in his home yesterday. The case was continued to Oct. 17 and the doctor taken to the county jail hospital.

The doctor, who is said to be addicted to morphine, gazed stupidly at the walls of the courtroom when arraigned and did not speak. He was represented by an eminent lawyer. The prisoner's father and father-in-law have come from St. Louis to aid him.

Hart admitted to-day that he gave the child bromidia-chloral. He gave at least forty-five drops, he said, in an effort to resuscitate her after she had swallowed a large number of sugar-coated morphine tablets, thinking that they were saccharine pills. He followed up the bromidia with at least eight hypodermic injections of strychnia sulphate. According to a physician, the bromide given the child by Hart was a substance known as "knock-out drops."

FOOD.

FOOD AGAIN.

A Mighty Important Subject to Everyone.

A Boston lady talks entertainingly of food and the changes that can be made in health by some knowledge on that line. She says:

"An injury to my spine in early womanhood left me subject to severe sick headaches, which would last three or four days at a time, and a violent course of drugging at the hands of old-fashioned physicians brought on constipation, with all the ills that follow.

"My appetite was always light and uncertain, and many kinds of food distressed me.

"I began to eat Grape-Nuts food two or three years ago, because I liked the taste of it, and I kept on because I soon found it was doing me good.

"I eat it always at breakfast, frequently at luncheon, and again before going to bed—and have no trouble in sleeping on it. It has cured my constipation, my headaches have practically ceased, and I am in better physical condition at the age of 63 than I was at 40.

"I give Grape-Nuts credit for restoring my health, if not saving my life, and you can make no claim for it too strong for me to endorse." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

JEFFERSON PARK OPENS WITH A FIELD DAY

Speeches, Music, and Games at the New East Side Playground.

THE MAYOR NOT PRESENT

Flag Drill of a Thousand or More Italian Children—Jewish Boys Win in Most of the Contests.

Thomas Jefferson Park was formally opened yesterday afternoon by as many of the rising generation as could crowd anywhere near the pavilion and as many public dignitaries as could find seats or stand up on the temporary platform overlooking the big breathing space on the upper east side. There was also a band that frequently returned from patriotic music to the strains of "Tammany," which set the crowd to singing, for the words were far more familiar to many of them than those of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "America."

Thomas Jefferson Park extends from 111th Street to 114th Street and from First Avenue to the East River. The park site cost $2,748,122, and the cost of improvements, exclusive of the equipment of the gymnasium was $266,212. The park has two running tracks, one for boys and one for girls. There is also a gymnasium for the boys and one for the girls. There are also spacious baths provided with showers and all modern equipment.

Not the least interesting fact in connection with the opening of the park were the methods of Park Commissioner Pallas in notifying the neighborhood of the benefits to come to them through the big playground. Some of the Italian colonists had an idea that it was to give the police a rallying spot in case of trouble, others thought that the tearing down of the tenements that once stood there was instigated by landlords eager for higher rents. The Commissioner prepared a circular in Italian setting forth the history of the park, its cost, and the benefits to be derived from it. Copies of the circular were distributed throughout the neighborhood.

There were some persons in the neighborhood, who could speak more or less English, who thought the recognition of a foreign people in the heart of New York was officially indiscreet, but when they saw the throngs of youngsters moving with American flags in their hands to the park, they stopped to consider. Then they changed their minds entirely a little later when they heard the 1,000 small boys and girls in the flag drill, in perfect English say, as the flags were held before them:

"I pledge by allegiance to this my flag and to this my country, for which it stands, one Union indivisible with liberty and justice for all."

Dr. Darlington, President of the Board of Health, on behalf of Mayor McClellan, accepted the park for the city. In his address Dr. Darlington said, in part:

"I desire to express the regrets of the Mayor that he could not be with you to-day. No man is more interested in the welfare and the well-being of the city than he. Through his interest and efforts there has been appropriated more money than ever before for public parks. More than $4,000,000 has been set aside this year for small parks, and over $1,000,000 for just such playgrounds as the one we are opening to-day. In these days parks can no longer be considered a luxury. I speak from the standpoint of a sanitarian in saying that they are a necessity for health."

John J. Pallas presided over the games that followed the exercises. Others who watched them were Charles V. Fornes, Nicholas J. Hayes, John F. Ahearn, Isaac A. Hopper, and Gustavo Tosti, the acting Consul General of Italy, with a delegation from the Italian Chamber of Commerce.

The athletic contests were from the start of the closest sort, the boys struggling for the honor of their separate playgrounds with the enthusiasm of college students.

That the big boys might not have the best of the little ones, the runners and other athletes were placed in the senior and junior classes, the juniors being boys weighing ninety-five pounds and less, the seniors not being compelled to weigh in.

The young athletes came of the poorer class, but most of them had saved money enough to buy sweaters, running trousers, and spiked shoes. It was only now and then that a youngster ran in shirt sleeves, and all such were so heavily handicapped that they scarcely figured in the contests.

For years there has been a passion for athletics among the Jewish boys of the downtown playgrounds, and the way they left the little fellows of the new playgrounds behind in the sprinting was disheartening, but they are planning revenge, and with practice they doubtless will hold their own with the downtown lads.

The winners—the first receiving a gold, the second a silver, and the third a bronze medal—were:

100-Yard Dash.—Senior Finals—First, J. Friedman, Hamilton Fish Park; second, M. Solomon, Hamilton Fish Park; third, W. Arnold, John Jay Park. Time—11 4-5 seconds.

A SUGGESTION.

Why Not Have a Texas Lynching Reproduced by Kinetoscope?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After reading the account of the burning of that "nigger" at Howard, Texas, I am moved to make a suggestion. It was stated that "2,000 persons gathered to see the burning," and that "the roofs of prairie farm houses and farm buildings for miles around were covered with people." With those facts in mind permit me to say that it would be good business enterprise to organize a stock company, and send a kinetoscope to the next lynching of the kind in order to secure a complete series of photographs of the event.

As every one knows, this photographic material can then be used to portray to people elsewhere just how such work is done. The show would lack the zest given by the screams and prayers of the "nigger," but in spite of this lack it is fair to suppose that if 2,000 people will gather in a small community like Howard to see the real thing, at least 1,000 would pay 25 cents each, in an average show town, for an evening with a series of photographs showing vividly the "nigger's" contortions.

I did not fail to note that in the case of the Howard "nigger" his struggles ceased in five minutes after the match had been applied. Five minutes of struggling, as any one can see, might seem too short an entertainment to a gathering who were viewing photographs only, but it will occur to any man of business instincts that that is a defect easy to remedy when it is known, in advance of the burning, that a kinetoscope man is to attend in the interest of public entertainment and, I may add, public instruction. A slower fire—one with only half a barn of it, or without kerosene—will prolong the struggles to any length necessary to meet the public demand.

But knowing, as we all do, how our people demand variety in their entertainments I beg to remind any one going into this show business that the Indians living on the banks of Trinity River, Texas, in former days, were in the habit, when they had no human enemies to burn, of capturing an alligator alive for a substitute. It will seem that I am recommending a waste of good material, for an alligator skin is worth 50 cents, but this proposed moving-picture company would have an alligator captured and burned in the old style while the kinetoscope was doing its work, the series of pictures so obtained would serve admirably for a pictorial prelude to the main entertainment of burning a "nigger."

The one series would show how the original Texans did such work and the other the work of the modern Texans.

If such a show as that would make were accompanied by a lecturer from the Texas Bureau of Immigration I am sure its drawing power would excel anything that has ever been offered to the American people.

Of course, such a show as this might cause a few fanatics to protest, but it need only be said that such people don't know the "nigger," and they have no adequate idea of the present state of American civilization.

MENZEL SHOW AT THE LEN

Exhibition by the Public Library His Etchings and Engravings.

"His Little Excellency" was an a of Prussia, who did much by his pe and brush to make the Hohenzol house popular in Germany, for which present incumbent of the Prussian thr has shown himself duly grateful. Ka Wilhelm seemed to cherish a real fri ship for the odd-looking little man an enormous bulbous head scar fringed with white hair, a funny s nose, large ears, and a sour expressio his thin-lipped, straight mouth. One some years ago Menzel was summo to Sans Souci, the palace in Pots which he has drawn and painted so o in his illustrations to the life of Frede the Great, and found the courtyard c pied by a company of the very ts soldiers dressed like the old Prussian fantry, wearing those absurd hats pyramidal fronts of tin which Frederi father, or some other equally foolish son, invented for the purpose of mal his tall grenadiers look taller. The Ka met the artist as if he were in ranl least a King, and caused him to re these young giants, beside whom dwarfish man with the big head loc comical enough. The Kaiser raised to the hereditary nobility, and during Court functions at which by virtue his patent Seine kleine Excellenz A von Menzel was present he took spe care to single him out.

It is Menzel's etched and lithograp ed work, a small part of it, that the int department of the New York Public Li- brary is showing at the Lenox Libr ry, Fifth Avenue and Seventieth Street. The recent death of the artist and the post- umous honors he is receiving in Berlin make the exhibition timely. Just now the Berlin National Gallery is reported to have bought Menzel's large "Supper at the Ball"—a painting of the interior of an opera house with a vast number of figures—for the sum of $50,000. This price marks high water in the recorded sales of paintings by modern artists in Germany.

Menzel called attention to himself in 1834 by publishing a set of seven designs in black and white representing the seven stages of an artist from the time he "gets a licking" from parental hands for scrawling up the woodwork until he falls asleep surrounded by his own sons and daughters. After this he issued original and re-edited old lithographs of a pretty terrible sort, and then took to etching in a very clear, fine, and neat style. At no time can it be said that he worked beyond his surroundings. After his return from Paris he surprised the steady-going classicals by the cleverness of his drawing and the natural poses he gave to figures in complicated pictures of out-door life in German and French cities. At this little show one perceives the development of his uncommon talent. It has no examples of his paintings, but among the elaborate works he illustrated are some, shown here, which have colored plates, notably those which deal with the brilliantly clad hussars, guardsmen, cavalry officers, and aides-de-camps of the Prussian Army as it was from A. D. 1700 to A. D. 1848.

Menzel was not only a brilliant draughtsman, but a man of relentless industry, so that his output in drawings, etchings, and lithographs was immense. He had a clever hand at mezzotint. Owing to the finish and perfection of his small pictures in black and white he has been termed the German Meissonier, although the term does not really fit him. He never approached Meissonier in the technical mastery of oil colors, but in compositions where color was not needed he had a large grasp. Some of the Generals he has revived for modern historical books are capital individuals; they live again. This, one can see here, although the wood engraver has stood between the original drawing and the print. He made more than 400 drawings of soldiers of the time of Frederick the Great, with the strictest regard to colors of uniforms and accoutrements in every detail. This was the era when certain troopers wore love-locks carefully trained to fall over one cheek. It was the period of Zopf, or queue, and of "Gamaschen Dienst," when every attention was bestowed on the spotlessness and shape of the warrior's gaiters, but nothing was done to teach him how to kill and not be killed.

Not the least amusing are the diplomas and cards of invitation Menzel drew for clubs and guilds in his early days—there is one for the masons, containing scenes from the life of stonemason and bricklayer; another for a club of marksmen consisting of officers. The latter shows considerable humor, as if the artist saw the absurd side of such organizations more readily than their civic value.

Menzel was essentially a realist, and belonged to the latter rather than the former part of the last century. His big Court paintings in Berlin do not represent what was best in him, they are wooden and their color is poor. His small work, the rapid thumb-nail sketch, and occasionally the larger work carried forward by the wave of inspiration that from observation of the city life about him, are the pictures through which he will live. His artistic estate includes thousands of sketches of this sort. Efforts are being made in Germany to secure as many of them as possible for the national museums.

The Unusual Store

Silks at Prices That Defy Competition.

There are things to be told about this Silk Sale that are worth telling—things that should be told.

When our Wholesale Silk Department entered into the "JOBBING SILK" business, and purchased from several manufacturers their output, we were entitled to, and we did receive from the Mills, a JOBBING PRICE which is 10% better than quote to RETAIL STORES. Therefore our offering of these NEW SILKS at RETAIL at less than ACTUAL COST, means, to the woman who would need silk for any purpose, a saving of the 10%—our JOBBER'S PRICE—and a saving of the RETAIL STORE PROFIT of from 25 to 50% at least.

The humbug of some retailers' prices—recently asked at "Special Silk Sales"—will be obvious by a comparison of the silks offered at Vantine's.

The surprises of this Silk Sale are: Unusually Low Prices, unusually large and varied collection of new Seasonable Silks. Popular Fall Colors and Designs.

NEW WORKS AND SINGERS FOR THE OPERA SEASON

Mr. Conried Makes Formal Announcement of His Plans.

FAMOUS COMPOSERS TO COME

Many Important Changes Have Been Made in the Stage Equipment of the Metropolitan.

The prospectus of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House adds little to what Mr. Conried has already made known of his plans. The season will open on Nov. 20, and extend over seventeen weeks, with sixty-eight regular subscription performances and seventeen Saturday evening performances and the usual Sunday night affairs. The list of revivals and new productions already announced is confirmed, as follows:

Goldmark's "Königin von Saba," ("The Queen of Sheba,") Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," Humperdinck's "Hänsel und Gretel," Flotow's "Marta," Wagner's "Fliegender Holländer," ("The Flying Dutchman,") Strauss's "Zigeuner-Baron," ("The Gypsy Baron,") Donizetti's "La Favorita," Bellini's "La Sonnambula," Verdi's "Il Trovatore," and Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

Engelbert Humperdinck, composer of "Hänsel und Gretel," has promised to come to the first performance of it, and Puccini, it is hoped, will come over to hear "Manon Leseaut." The list of artists includes the following:

Sopranos—Mmes. Lina Abarbanell, Bella Alten, Mathilde Bauermeister, Emma Eames, Jeanne Jomelli, Bertha Morena, Lillian Nordica, Paula Ralph, Marcella Sembrich, Luisa Tetrazzini, and Marion Weed.

Mezzo Sopranos and Contraltos—Mmes. Olive Fremstad, Louise Homer, Josephine Jacoby, Helen Mapleson, Florence Mulford, Johanna Poehlmann, and Edyth Walker.

Tenors—Messrs. Jacques Bars, Alois Burgstaller, Enrico Caruso, Andreas Dippel, Heinrich Knote, Giovanni Paroli, and Albert Reiss.

Baritones—Messrs. Bernard Bégué, Gustave Bell-Resky, Eugène Dufriche, Tony Franke, Otto Goritz, Adolph Mühlmann, Taurino Parvis, Antonio Scotti, and Anton Van Rooy.

Basses—Messrs. Robert Blass, Marcel Journet, Pol Plançon, and Arcangelo Rossi.

Messrs. Hertz, Vigna, and Franko will again be the conductors.

Attention is called to the further improvement in the equipment of the stage by the installation of the counterweight system and of new electrical machinery. There are also a new cork drop and curtains. The cork drop is intended to deaden the noise made by the stage hands in changes of scene.

"It has been found unnecessary," the prospectus optimistically goes on, "to make any important changes in the excellent orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera House. It will be under the direction of the distinguished conductors seen there last season." Mr. Conried has told about his futile efforts to persuade some of the great German conductors to come. But it is unfortunate that he takes the position he does about the need of making no changes in the "excellent orchestra." One very important change is sorely needed, and that is the restoration of the sixteen or eighteen stringed instrument players who were dropped last season because the audience "cares only about the great singers" and doesn't care anything about a proper orchestral performance of the modern works, especially the Wagnerian dramas—and to save expense. The orchestra as it was constituted last season was lamentably deficient in the string, and the very large proportion of the audiences at the Wagnerian performances—who do understand what the orchestra should sound like and who do not limit their interest to the great singers—felt the deficiency very keenly.

PHILHARMONIC'S PROGRAMME.

Soloists Engaged for This Season—New Works to be Given.

The Philharmonic Society of New York has issued its prospectus for the present season—the sixty-fourth in its history—containing the names of the soloists to appear at the concerts this year. They include Otie Chew, a young English violinist of reputation in Europe, who is to be heard for the first time in this country with the Philharmonic Orchestra, when she will play the Brahms Violin Concerto in D major, and Henri Marteau, Raoul Pugno, and Alfred Reisenauer, Jean Gérardy, and Mme. Kirkby-Lunn.

The programmes of the season will contain Symphonies, No. 4, D minor, and No. 2, C major, by Schumann; the "Pastoral" and the C minor by Beethoven, "Manfred" and the "Pathetic" by Tschaikowsky; the C major by Schubert, and No. 2, D major, by Brahms.

Symphonic poems, "Ein Heldenleben" and "Don Juan," by Richard Strauss; "Francesca da Rimini," by Tschaikowsky; "Scheherezade," by Rimsky Korsakoff.

Overtures: "A Midsummer Night's Dream," by Mendelssohn; "King Lear," by Berlioz; "Egmont," by Beethoven, and "A Faust Overture," by Wagner.

Variations for orchestra by Edward Elgar.

For string orchestra, theme and variations from quartet in D minor by Schubert and serenade in G major by Tschaikowsky.

Subscribers of last season may renew their subscriptions at the box office of the Philharmonic Society, at Carnegie Hall, for one week, from Monday, Oct. 16, until Saturday, Oct. 21, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 5 P. M.

AN INTERESTING DEBUT.

Miss Vera F. Mellish to Appear in "The Prodigal Son."

Rather more than the usual amount of interest attaches to the appearance tomorrow night of Miss Vera Fuller Mellish, who has been engaged to play the part of Elin, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Thora, in the last act of "The Prodigal Son." Miss Mellish is the youngest member of what is possibly the oldest theatrical family in England. Her father is Fuller Mellish, at present a member of Richard Mansfield's company. Her grandmother was Rose Le Clercq, and her grand-aunt was Carlotta Le Clerc, who was a great favorite here with Charles Fechter. Her great-uncle, Charles Le Clerc, was a member of Augustin Daly's company for many years.

A THEATRICAL SHIPLOAD.

Many Professionals in List of Arrivals on the St. Louis.

The American liner St. Louis, in yesterday from Southampton, brought many theatrical persons, among them Elizabeth Marbury, Elsie De Wolfe, and Olga Nethersole's company.

Amherst Webber, the pianist, who will accompany Mme. Eames in her concert tour, was another arrival.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Freuhlingsluft," (Spring Breezes,) the German comic opera, by Joseph Strauss, remains at the Irving Place Theatre, with matinées Wednesday and Saturday.

George Edwards will sail for America on Oct. 18 to be present at the opening performance of his production, "Veronique," which will be seen for the first time in New York at the Broadway Theatre Monday, the 30th.

At the Murray Hill Theatre this evening Franc V. Le Moné and Mme. de Colbe will appear in a sketch by Joseph Grasheim, entitled "A Pair of French Heels."

MARY ANDERSON TO MODJESKA

Sends Her Good Wishes for Polish Actress's Farewell Tour.

Glimpses of Mary Anderson de Navarro, her two children, especially the baby girl, which arrived recently, are given in two brief letters which have just been received here. She writes from British Camp, Malvern, England, where she is at present with her baby.

"We are here next to Jenny Lind's old home," she explains, "for a little mountain air."

One of the letters is to Mme. Modjeska, expressing her good wishes for the success of the Polish actress's farewell tour. It says:

Dear Mme. Modjeska:

May I send my heartfelt good wishes for the greatest success? How I wish I could again witness your inimitable impersonations. I shall look forward to reading of your new triumphs among the scenes of your past ones.

Yours, with admiration and affectionate greetings,

MARY ANDERSON DE NAVARRO.

The other letter is addressed to James W. Morrissey, who, with Joseph Brooks, managed Miss Anderson's last engagements at Booth's Theatre in this city and is to be business manager of Mme. Modjeska's coming tour. It says:

Let me thank you and your dear wife for your kind message of congratulation. Our little girl is a miniature of her mamma, only with dark hair and deep blue eyes. Your little friend "Tony" is entirely in love with her! She is a very bright and winsome young lady!

"Your little friend Tony" referred to in Mme. de Navarro's letter is her nine-year-old son.

SEEK WORK CHARGE FRAUD.

Alleged Insurance Agent Arrested for Swindling Two Applicants.

Charles Sanford, who described himself as a special agent of the Columbia National Life Insurance Company, of 54 West 125th Street, was locked up in the West 126th Street Station last night on a charge of swindling Albert V. Harrington of 837 Lexington Avenue and Adolph Thiessen.

Harrington and Thiessen answered an advertisement calling for a young man to take charge of a supposed stockbroker's office at Freehold, N. J. Sanford employed both, but required a deposit as security. Harrington paid $100 and Theissen, it is said, gave up a similar amount. Detective Sergeant Walsh recognized Sanford as an old offender.

THREE COLUMBIA HAZERS.

Students Suspended Are Daniel Beck, Louis Brown, and Henry Bijur.

The names of the three Sophomores who were suspended on Friday for a year by the Columbia University Faculty for participation in the hazing of a week ago were learned yesterday. They were Daniel Beck, Louis Brown, and Henry Bijur. Bijur is the son of an alumnus of the university.

The Columbia Spectator, the organ of the undergraduates, expressed the opinion that the punishment was more severe than the offenses warranted.

DROPS DEAD AT A DINNER.

Brooklyn Man Was About to Respond to a Toast When He Collapsed.

Justin Tretz of 910 Willoughby Avenue dropped dead early last evening at a dinner at the Imperial Hotel, Fulton Street and Red Hook Lane, Brooklyn. The banquet was given by a German society of which Mr. Tretz was a member.

About 1 o'clock he arose to respond to a toast. As he attempted to rise from his chair he fell to the floor. Four physicians were present, but before they could reach him Mr. Tretz was dead. He was an agent of the Frank Ibert Brewing Company.

Dropped Dead in a Synagogue.

Isidor Steinman, 49 years old, a bookkeeper, of 153 Broome Street, died suddenly in a synagogue at 169 Clinton Street at 10 o'clock last night. He was the Secretary of the Independent Hebrew Committee of New York, and was attending a meeting at the synagogue. After the prayers had been read he fell dead as the committee were about to leave the building.

WOMAN KILLED BY A CENTRAL TRAIN

Mrs. Petrie Escaped from Her Guards Hit by Engine.

THREE OTHERS WERE HURT

Mrs. Jenson Knocked Down by Wind Made by a Passing Train—Her Arm Broken.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, Oct. 7.—One woman was killed and three persons seriously injured in different ways on the New York Central Railroad to-day. Mrs. Louisa Petrie, who was brought home recently from the Poughkeepsie Asylum, preparatory to being taken abroad for her health, escaped from her guard this morning and started to walk along the railroad track. When opposite the country estate of William Rockefeller, near Scarborough, she was run down by an express train. Six other trains passed over her body before it was found.

Mrs. James Jenson of Tarrytown, while standing on the platform at the Tarrytown station watching the Twentieth Century express, which runs through that place at fifty miles an hour, was knocked down by the wind made by the train and her right arm fractured in two places.

Frank Dowd of Tarrytown was brushed from the top of a box car by a bridge beneath which the train was passing near Ardsley, and seriously injured. A young man who was stealing a ride on the same train was also knocked from the train by the bridge and his skull fractured.

SEA GAVE BACK A BABY.

Lost in Storm Five Years Ago Boy Found by Parents.

Special to The New York Times.

GALVESTON, Oct. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Alexander M. Wright have found their son, Alexander, Jr., whom they have mourned as dead for five years.

The child, then three years old, was swept from its mother's arms in the great storm of Sept. 8, 1900, and carried out to sea. The Wright family had been living at Virginia Point, across the bay from Galveston Island, on the mainland.

The sea returned the child to land, and the following morning it was found twenty-five miles from Virginia Point.

It was sent to an asylum at Luling, Texas, and was later adopted by a wealthy childless couple. By accident a friend heard of the child's history, and the Wrights investigated and by birthmarks proved their rights as parents.

BROKE COMPANION'S SKULL.

Customs Inspectors Fight—One in a Hospital, the Other in Jail.

With a fractured skull which, the surgeons say, is likely to cause death, Joseph Hare, 50 years old, a Custom House inspector, of 488 Columbus Avenue, is in St. Vincent's Hospital, while a brother Inspector, Daniel House, 55 years old, of 938 First Avenue, is under arrest, charged with assault.

According to the police, Hare and House got into a dispute while they were at work on the White Star Line pier on Friday night. They were wrangling for about fifteen minutes when, it is alleged, House picked up a heavy iron ring and struck Hare on the head.

Hare thought he had only a scalp wound, but other Inspectors insisted that he go to the hospital. He walked to St. Vincent's Hospital, where Dr. Black found that his skull was broken.

Hare's condition became so serious last night that House was arrested.

YOU MUST REGISTER TO VOTE.

To-morrow and Tuesday will be the first days of registration. The polls will be open from 7 A. M. to 10 P. M. You can find the list of registration places in The Times to-day.

CALLS REALTY MAN BURGLAR.

Tenant of William I. Roe Causes His Arrest—Mistake Asserted.

Accused of stealing $142 from a tenant, William I. Roe, a real estate dealer, who is reputed to be worth $250,000, was locked in the West Thirty-seventh Street Station last night on a charge of burglary. Roe lives at 220 West 122d Street.

John Glotes of 282 Eighth Avenue, who has an office at 346 Eighth Avenue, declares that he found Roe in his room and $142 missing from a bureau drawer. He immediately accused Roe of having taken the money and summoned a policeman.

Roe said he went to see Glotes last night to collect rents. He went into his room, and finding Glotes out, decided to sit there and wait until he came in. He had not been there more than three minutes, he said, when Glotes entered. Glotes immediately went to a bureau drawer and finding his money missing accused Roe. Roe thought the man joking, but Glotes called a policeman.

Richard Cummings of 12 West Eighty-seventh Street, a real estate dealer, furnished a bond of $2,000. He said the charge against Roe was entirely without foundation.

FIFTH AVENUE TANGLED UP.

Collision, Runaway, Smashed Electroller, Electric Display.

A brewery wagon collided with an American Express wagon driven by J. M. Lane yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in front of the Holland House, at Fifth Avenue and Thirtieth Street. The brewery wagon wasn't damaged, but the express wagon was smashed up a bit and the horses dashed down Fifth Avenue.

Drivers of the many vehicles in the avenue tried to turn to get out of the way of the runaway horses. Then the two streams of vehicles got tangled up, so that it needed six traffic squad men to straighten out things.

Meanwhile J. M. Lane and his horses were racing down Fifth Avenue with Policeman Conlon of the Traffic Squad after them on foot. He caught one of the horses at Twenty-eighth Street, but he couldn't stop the team right away.

Then the express wagon was hurled sidewise against a Fifth Avenue electrolier, snapping it in half and dragging the upper part diagonally across the avenue. The barbed wires sputtered and zizzed with green flames. The team was then brought to a halt by Conlon. One of the horses was badly cut up.

BROOKLYN TICKET NAMED.

Democrats Nominate J. W. Ridgway for Borough President.

Notwithstanding rumors that there would be a hitch, the slate made up by Senator McCarren went through without a hitch at the Brooklyn Borough and Kings County Democratic Convention held last night in Jefferson Hall. James W. Ridgway, who was District Attorney of Kings County for twelve years, was nominated for Borough President. Gottfried Westernacher, who was appointed Deputy Bridge Commissioner at the beginning of Mayor McClellan's term and resigned when McCarren and Leader Murphy fell out, was nominated for Sheriff.

Dennis J. Donovan, now Assistant Superintendent of Buildings, was nominated for County Register. This was said to be a concession on the part of Senator McCarren to the Shevlin-Farrell faction. Edward Kaufman, who has served two years as County Clerk, was renominated. In the caucus held before the convention he was opposed by Henry J. Cochrane, the newly elected leader of the Seventeenth Assembly District, in which Kaufman lives. This also was said to be a concession to the anti-McCarren men.

Alderman Andrew M. Gillen, who is a son-in-law of Patrick H. Quinn, leader of the First Assembly District, was nominated for Coroner from the Western District of Brooklyn. The nominee from the Eastern District was Thomas M. Lavey, a labor leader. Mr. Lavey is a member of the Iron Workers' Union, and his nomination was brought about by the labor organizations of Brooklyn.

Mr. Ridgway was Mayor McClellan's law partner.

PARTED FROM WIFE'S BODY.

Joseph T. McCaddon Arrested in England—Woman's Corpse Arrives.

The body of Mrs. Joseph T. McCaddon, wife of the circus proprietor, whose show was stranded recently in Grenoble, France, arrived here on the American liner St. Louis yesterday.

Mr. McCaddon, with his two little sons, had booked to sail on the St. Louis, but just before the vessel left Southampton, a week ago yesterday, he was arrested on the complaint of the French authorities, charged with fraudulent bankruptcy in connection with the failure of his circus.

Mr. McCaddon and his sons boarded the St. Louis with Whiting Allen, a representative of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. Returning passengers said that he would have been safe from arrest had he not ventured on to the dock just before the vessel sailed. No sooner had he stepped from the steamer's gangway than he was taken into custody. Extradition proceedings are now under way.

Mr. Allen and the two McCaddon boys remained in England to see Mr McCaddon through his troubles.

MISTRIAL FOR HOLY GHOSTER.

The Rev. F. W. Sandford Escapes Verdict for Causing Boy's Death.

AUBURN, Me., Oct. 7.—The jury of the Androscoggin County Supreme Court, which has been hearing the evidence at the third trial of the Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Society of Shiloh, on a charge of manslaughter in causing the death by neglect of Leander Bartlett, reported a disagreement at 11 o'clock to-night. The jury was discharged by Judge Emery.

Eight of the jurors favored conviction and four voted for acquittal. The first trial, which was held here, resulted in a disagreement, and in the second, which was held at Farmington, in Franklin County, on a change of venue, a verdict of guilty was returned. The State Supreme Court granted a new trial. Next week, it is expected, Sandford will be sentenced for neglecting his own child, of which he was convicted recently.

MR. ODELL AND MR. HUGHES.

We admire the robust loyalty of our neighbor The Tribune, which describes the list of nominations put forth by the Republican City Convention on Friday night as a "winning ticket." The devotion of a newspaper to its party and its party's cause that could withstand unshaken such a test as is involved in taking seriously the convention's work would pass through cyclones and earthquakes without a tremor. Everyhody except the gentlemen who face him on the witness stand wishes Mr. HUGHES well. But we think his friends will regret that he missed the fine opportunity that was presented to him late Friday night. He should, of course, have said at once that he would not accept the nomination—not even if BENJAMIN B. ODELL and the entire Republican organization of the city came with banners and brass bands bearing it to him upon a golden platter. By hesitating, by waiting until to-morrow, he has missed the chance to show himself to be possessed of quick and sure judgment.

There is no possible plea save that of duty to the party which can be addressed to Mr. HUGHES by those who would persuade him to accept this nomination. He has not been in politics, and so has incurred no obligations of which such unconscionably dear payment can be demanded. Since there is not the faintest hope of his election his personal inclination would doubtless move him, not to accept, but to decline the proffered honor. But a controlling reason is to be found in the fact that the acceptance of Mr. ODELL'S nomination would embarrass Mr. HUGHES in the performance of his duty to the Armstrong committee. The suspicion that Mr. ODELL has nominated Mr. HUGHES for Mayor in order to withdraw him from the insurance investigation is unreasonable and unnecessary. If Mr. HUGHES were withdrawn other able counsel would take his place. Mr. ODELL put Mr. HUGHES upon his ticket because he has just come into an honorable prominence in the community, and because Mr. ODELL after many efforts has almost despaired of getting any respectable Republican to take his nomination. This is a circumstance which should still further constrain Mr. HUGHES to decline.

Mr. ODELL ought to seek for his candidate lower down in the organization. It is not a year when he can decently ask a man of standing to head his hopeless cause. Some district leader with no particular reputation to lose, no dignity to sacrifice, and no occupation to be compromised or interfered with would fill the bill exactly.

THE REAL WRONG OF NEPOTISM.

The real wrong inflicted on the policy holders of the Mutual Life Insurance Company when its President distributes their money by millions among his relatives and connections is, obviously, that the policy holders do not get the worth of their money.

It is quite conceivable that a man in a position of great responsibility might select for his immediate associates and subordinates men of his own family because he knew them more thoroughly than he could know others and thought them more trustworthy and efficient than others. If his judgment were sound and sustained by the facts of their service, the persons for whom he acted as trustee would have no reason for complaint, would in truth be benefited. There are two sources of risk in following such a course. One is that a man is not as a rule an impartial and correct judge of the character and capabilities of his own immediate relatives. He may underrate them, and often does. But also he may overrate them, or he may be tempted to "take care" of them to an extent beyond what the interests of business warrant. The second source of risk is in the fact that it is not easy to hold relatives to the close, strict, cool accounting that would be enforced on others. A partial guard against error in such cases would be strict economy in the payment of services from relatives. If they were consistently paid lower salaries and were accorded less opportunity for profits "on the side," the conditions of trusteeship would not so readily be violated.

We are bound to admit that in the case of the McCurdy family this line of discussion seems somewhat abstract; it is like debating the superior safety of vegetarianism with a habitual anthropophagite. But the distinction to which we have referred exists all the same.

THE MOSCOW STUDENTS' STRIKE.

Technically, the closing of the University of Moscow is not a strike, but a lock-out. The Rector of the university, formerly the President of the Zemstvo Congress, with the advice and consent of the Faculty, has closed the institution because the students allowed agitators from outside the university to attend and take part in their meetings.

It is impossible to blame Prince TROBETSKOY for this decision. Academic discipline could not be maintained anywhere if persons not subject to its pains and penalties were allowed to share its immunities. The question of "academic liberty" is of the utmost importance. According to well-informed Russians, it even takes precedence, in the actual circumstances of Russia, of the liberty of speech or of the press or of the liberty of public meeting in general. German political institutions by no means seem to an American to give a proper share of individual freedom. Yet the freedom of teaching in Germany has been maintained with tenacity and success when the other guarantees of civil liberty were denied.

The University of Moscow is the oldest and perhaps the most important of the Russian universities. It was founded, by the way, only a year after our own Columbia received its charter as King's College. Most of our own colleges—all our older colleges—were primarily intended as the seminaries of a "learned ministry." The necessity of an educated priesthood has never impressed itself upon the Orthodox Church in Russia. But the necessity of the other learned professions, of educated lawyers and educated doctors, is perfectly well recognized. If doctors and lawyers could be relied upon to practice their several professions without troubling themselves with public affairs, the universities would have been permitted to do their work without interference, and their graduates would have taken rank next after the recipients of that technical military education which Russia, as a military Power, has found it necessary to impart to the chosen corps of her army. Unhappily for the Russian autocracy, but happily for Russia and for mankind, it is not possible thus to limit the scope of a man's intellectual curiosity. And one of the first things that an educated Russian learns is that his country is in an abnormal political position, that it is in many respects as much an anomaly among modern nations as China. His efforts, if he be a man of conscience and of courage, must be to bring it more into line with modern civilization.

Hence the normal relation of a Russian university toward the Russian "institution" is and must be one of opposition. A curious instance of this was not long ago furnished by the official of a foreign country resident in Russia, who was also a specialist in certain branches of learning which the Russian universities have special facilities for teaching. Being congratulated upon his opportunities, he answered that the opportunities did not exist, since to have relations with a Russian university was to be "suspect" by the Russian Government. It seems to follow that the greater the exigencies of the Russian Government, the greater the opportunities of the Russian universities. At any rate, that result has actually followed the victories of Japan. The lifelong observer of Russian affairs has been struck with wonder, these last few months, at the increased toleration by the Government of free thought, as expressed by free speech, in the meetings of the students of the universities. The most remarkable instance of this has perhaps been furnished in this same University of Moscow. Out of 6,000 students of that institution, 1,814 attended a meeting during the third week in September. Two hundred and thirty-one of these subscribed a declaration that they returned "exclusively for the purpose of conducting a revolutionary agitation and propaganda among numerous classes of the population." But 1,202 out of the 1,814 signed a declaration that it was their purpose to make of the university "a revolutionary centre and to turn the lecture rooms into political schools." And it does not appear that any one, either of the 231 who announced themselves as agitators, or of the 1,202 who took the measure of which the superior mildness seems to consist merely in the proposal to confine agitation to the undergraduate body, has suffered or is in danger of suffering, by reason of his boldness.

The observer may well rub his eyes in astonished question whether it is of Russia that he reads these things. But in any view that may be taken of it, it appears that Prince TROBETSKOY is entirely within his rights and his duties in endeavoring to confine the agitation of the student body to that body and in excluding from it "the man in the street." And in any case such things are very ominous for the existing Government of Russia.

THE FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

Although the result of it, in the nomination of a "dark horse" from Herkimer, is not wholly satisfactory, the convention of the Fifth Judicial District which has named Mr. DIEFENDORF has been a noteworthy and encouraging occasion. It has cleared the air. It has shown that the bar and the public of the district entertained higher standards of judicial ethics than those which the candidate for renomination had exemplified. The plain fact was that the delegations which had received instructions to vote for the renomination of Judge WRIGHT, and which constituted, numerically, just one-half of the convention, were so instructed before the nature of Judge WRIGHT'S offense was generally understood throughout the district. On the other hand, the delegations opposed to the renomination were chosen after the nature of that offense was fully understood and expressly in view of it. The result in Onondaga and Oneida has been a moral revolt. Men who ordinarily would never be seen at such a convention found it a duty to attend this one. The venerable ex-Judge ANDREWS headed the Onondaga delegation. Col. WILLIAM CARY SANGER headed the Oneida delegation. The protest against the degradation of the judiciary was most emphatic.

There was no logic in the suggestion of a "compromise candidate"—no logic, but only politics. The issue represented by Mr. DE ANGELIS was one on which there can be no compromise. Without any procurement of his own he had been chosen as the most fit lawyer in the district to represent the opposition to the judicial practices of the incumbent and candidate. It was a question betweeen the manipulation for WRIGHT and the sentiment against him. But of course Justice WRIGHT and his friends preferred to evade the direct issue of his official misbehavior rather than to submit to a defeat upon it, and they secured such an evasion.

It is to be hoped there is no truth in the report that the Democrats of the district are prepared to take up the candidate who has been dropped by the Republicans for cause. Not that there is any probability of their succeeding. The district is overwhelmingly Republican. Commonly a Republican nomination is equivalent to an election. And commonly a renomination would have been a matter of course for a Republican Judge already on the bench. It is because the better element of the Republican Party could not stomach the performances of Judge WRIGHT that he has failed of a renomination. For the Democrats to take him up after the Republicans have dropped him, on the chance of getting more votes from the baser sort of Republicans, would be for the Democrats avowedly to degrade their standards to those which the better Republicans had rejected and resisted. It is impossible to imagine a more contemptible showing for the Democratic Party than that would be.

THE BASEBALL SEASON.

It is all very well for seniors to deplore or denounce the professionalism into which baseball has fallen, and to sigh for the days when they themselves played the game, or more likely its rudimentary form of "one old cat" on a simple village green. As a matter of fact, there is no reason to doubt that baseball is played more than ever on the simple village greens, and that the prosperity of professional baseball has rather stimulated than retarded amateur baseball. Certainly the Saturday Summer voyager from New York, in whatever direction his occasions may lead him, is apt to observe more than one contest, if he be going a two hours' journey, between village nines.

And, in any case, there is "no future" for the deprecators of the present and praisers of the past in this particular. The plain fact is that the art and mystery of professional baseball have never taken so strong a hold on so large a public as they are taking now. The final criterion of "the gate" would show this. Unfortunately, managers are shy of showing the exact figures, taking pattern, possibly, by the managers of life insurance companies. But the "record" crowds of this city have been assembled at baseball games this year. Thirty thousand is a conservative estimate for the largest attendance at the Polo Grounds on an exciting and eligible day, whereas 20,000 was the wildest dream of managers ten years ago. And there have been as many assembled at Philadelphia to look at the leading local team, which is the "American" champion, as there have been in New York to look at the local team which is the "National" champion. At critical moments Chicago and Boston have similarly emptied themselves of their leisured populations.

Locally, the finish is not so exciting as that of last season, when at one time it looked as if New York were to play off New York. New York is now to play off Philadelphia. And it is to be expected that the final series, which begins to-morrow in the Quaker City, will be of an exciting and crowd-compelling character. One thing the spectators of these games may expect with great confidence. We do not mean merely or mainly the bad manners of McGRAW, though that may be true too, and pity 'tis 'tis true. We mean the exhibition of a perfection of skill which would have been quite out of the question twenty or even ten years ago.

SAD LEVITY IN SCULPTORS.

Every now and then we get into slovenly ways of talking and thinking, when along comes a person with a severely rectangular mind to put dots on the i's and make us sit up plumb. Artists especially, those easy-going fellows, have a fatal habit of following curves instead of bee lines; and so it happened to a sculptor the other day that he was confounded by the book and shown up to an amused public as a man capable of mixing the gender in angels.

If Mr. BORGLUM had taken the trouble to read his New Testament in Greek before putting hand to clay on his commission for angels he would have avoided this shocking error in sex. He would have noted that AGGELOS is neither feminine nor neuter, but masculine, and so your angel must show in some fashion that he belongs to the tyrant sex. Bootless the plea that HOMER makes the lovely Iris a messenger of the goddess, and the Edda introduces the Valkyrs, who are tomboys, if you will, but maidens ever fair, as messengers of Wotan. These be pagan toys with which a properly Christian sculptor has naught to do. It is not a question of what he wishes or finds convenient. Let him not plead that women are more pleasing objects than men and that any masculine person would prefer a visit from a she to one from a he angel. All that is beside the mark. The book—what does the book say? Well, it says that angels are masculine. There you are.

We are sorry to perceive a vein of levity in the remarks of editors and correspondents concerning this matter. We fear that artists are only too apt to lean to frivolity and fail to see the dangers of ignoring facts like the masculine termination in "angelos." Especially in this country is it unwise to go any further in turning the heads of women by flattery. For all we know, Sorosis may be planning to keep those men out of Paradise who do not grant women the vote on earth. It is well to have Sorosis and her fellow-guilds understand that the only angels of record are nice young men, who will, without doubt, rise up from their couches of asphodel and offer them the downiest clouds, but are too many and too brave to permit woman-righters to wrong them in their old-established home.

Of course there must be women angels in heaven, for even MOHAMMED stocks his Paradise with houris, but they never come down. We have Biblical, Old Testament testimony that male angels came down at an early period and flirted in a shocking way with the daughters of men. Very likely the sensibilities of lady angels are too fragile to stand the coarseness of human life. Suppose one of them should light upon a wife heater, or see a car on the Brooklyn Bridge with forty men seated and thirty women standing! Suppose a delicate lady angel should encounter ELIJAH A. DOWIE! We believe that with the astuteness of the fair sex raised to a heavenly degree these lady angels leave such chores to the males.

A SALE OF THOROUGHBREDS.

A singular and striking instance of how New York is coming to be the market in this country for "fancy products" of all kinds is furnished by the coming sale here of Mr. JAMES B. HAGGIN'S stud. The ranch in California which has been Mr. HAGGIN'S breeding farm he now designs for other uses, and he finds himself with some seven hundred thoroughbreds on his hands. That number would glut the Californian market. In fact, it is questionable whether there is "loose money" enough in California to buy them at remunerative prices. It is true that the owner has another breeding farm in Kentucky, a little patch of blue grass 5,000 acres in extent. But its dimensions are evidently inadequate to the proper development of the equine population of Ranche del Paso, and besides, when you are moving horses from California to Kentucky, you may as well move them to New York and be done with it.

Accordingly, Mr. HAGGIN has adopted the heroic measure of shipping all of his stock, except the few head which he reserves from sentimental or other considerations, for sale in New York, where the buyers already are or will readily come who cannot equally be tempted to California or to Kentucky. The shipment is nearly equal to that of a regiment of cavalry. And these animals are both more valuable than so many troop horses, and, by reason of their higher nervous organization, more liable to injury in transit. The standard for the transportation of cavalry, of twenty or so to a freight car, will not do here at all, neither for the thirty-five stallions, of which the imported nine are of the best blood of England, nor for the brood mares, colts, fillies, and geldings which make up the sum. Every one must be protected against accidental or willful injury at the hoofs or teeth of any other, and the only sure way of attaining this result is to keep each out of the reach of every other. They must be watched and tended and fed and watered all the way across the continent, to insure their arrival in good condition. It will be seen that their owner will have a considerable bill for transportation to pay, to be added to the actual value of the animals, if race horses can be said to have any "actual" value, on their arrival and sale, and if the sale is not to be a sacrifice. When a man takes all this trouble to market his produce it may safely be inferred that he has chosen his market with great circumspection. In fact, Mr. HAGGIN has decided, just as if he were a dealer in diamonds or old masters or any other fancy article, that his only market is New York.

A Descendant Complains.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Do the Levinskys, Lowenskys, Polinskys, Sinwhiskys, and other foreigners with similar names have the right, when they come to this country, to change their names to Lee, Poe, Lowell, Sumner, Bryant, Montgomery, &c.? If they will take the names of our revered Americans, should they not apply to the Legislature? Why do not the Skijinskys found honored and distinguished families of their own names?

AS TO DEFERRED DIVIDENDS.

This Plan of Life Insurance Analyzed by a Hostile Critic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of Oct. 4 I notice that you give considerable space to a letter from "an insurance man" on the subject of deferred dividends in life insurance. I trust, therefore, that you will grant sufficient space for a reply from another insurance man. Your correspondent's defense of the deferred dividend plan rests substantially upon four points, which he presents with some elaboration. Briefly, they are as follows:

First—That the savings derived from the premium payments made by a policy holder, if accumulated upon the tontine plan for, say, twenty years, will amount to a much larger sum than the aggregate of twenty annual dividends, by reason of deaths and lapses during the twenty years.

Second—That this large sum comes at a time and in an amount large enough to be of material service to the policy holder, while the annual dividend, received each year, is an amount too small to be of any great use to the policy holder or to be invested profitably.

Third—That up to a recent date tontine dividends only were paid by the English insurance companies, to the perfect satisfaction of the policy holders.

Fourth—That deferred dividend accumulations afford an extra protection to the company, by adding to the amount of its legal reserve, thus giving it a greater margin of safety.

As to the first point, while theoretically it is plausible and has been used many times to induce insurants to take deferred dividend policies, in practice it has not held true. To use a concrete example, select at random from the published settlements of two policies, one issued by a well-known and long-established company upon the annual dividend plan and the other issued by an equally well-known and long-established company upon the twenty-year semi-tontine accumulation plan. Both were issued in 1884 at the age of 41, and were twenty-year endowment policies for $5,000, the annual premium being $257.40 on the annual dividend policy and $261.55 on the deferred dividend policy. The average annual dividend received on the former amounted to $64.66, while the twenty-year dividend accumulation received in 1904 on the latter amounted to $1,889.05, which is exactly equivalent to $64.56 invested annually for twenty years at 3½ per cent. interest compounded.

These figures demonstrate that the policy holder who chose the deferred rather than the annual dividend policy gained nothing from either deaths or lapses, and as for the compounded interest, the rate of 3½ per cent. is less than he could have obtained on his money during most of these twenty years in any savings bank in the country. Inasmuch as practically every policy holder, in paying his premium, withdraws the amount from some savings bank or other investment, it is hard to figure out any advantage in allowing the annual savings to remain with an insurance company for twenty years at the hazard of absolute forfeiture should the policy holder fail to survive the period, only to receive them back with 3½ per cent. interest compounded at the end.

As to the second point, it is obvious that the argument is purely sentimental and cannot be maintained as a business proposition.

As to his third point, it is not an argument which will appeal to the average American as being particularly convincing. I am not familiar with the actual results of deferred dividends on English policies, but if they are satisfactory to the English policy holder, either he must be easy to satisfy or the English companies must have been managed much better than our own.

As to the fourth point, there can be no question that the retention of a large unapportioned surplus adds greatly to the margin of safety, supposed to be ample provided for in the legal reserve. This argument applies equally to saving banks and other institutions holding trust funds, where, as a matter of fact, there is much more reason for an undivided surplus as a margin of safety, owing to the possibility of a "run" on the latter in times of panic. Such an event as a "run" on a life insurance company is not possible. Where, then lies the necessity for the tremendous "margin of safety" afforded by the large unapportioned surplus of the deferred dividend companies? If the facts regarding some of these companies recently brought to light, demonstrate anything, they show that this "margin of safety" has been such for the Directors of the company only, and not for the policy holders.

ANOTHER INSURANCE MAN.

New York, Oct. 5, 1905.

A WORD FOR THE M'CURDYS.

An Attempt to Draw a Parallel Between Their Incomes and Carnegie's.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I happened to be present at the insurances investigation yesterday when Mr. Hughes read the salary lists of the Mr. Curdy family from 1877. The interest of the spectators was keen from the start and with the reading the tension seemed to grow with every increase, and when finally the announcement was made that the President was drawing $150,000 per year a sort of smothered groan went up. It seemed to be a groan akin to a curse, not loud, but deep, and one man said "That is the climax."

Can you tell me why people feel differently about a man like Mr. McCurdy getting $150,000 per year than about Mr. Carnegie, who profits several times that amount? It seems strange, but no one seems to think Carnegie is getting too much, while they regard the McCurdy money as excessive.

M. Loubet's Visit to Spain.

From The London Standard.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The programme of Loubet's visit to Spain has now been drawn up. The President of the republic will leave Paris on Oct. 22, in company with M. Rouvier, with his Secretaries-General, M. Combarieu and Gen. Dubois, and several officers. The party will arrive at Madrid at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the following day, and a grand dinner will be given by the King that evening. On the next evening M. Loubet will entertain his Majesty at dinner at the French Embassy, and on the following night there will be a gala performance at the Opera House. A bull fight and a review will be among the other features of the visit, which will conclude with the departure of the President of the republic from Madrid at 6 P. M. on Oct. 26. Although no official announcement to that effect has yet been made, it may be regarded as virtually settled that M. Loubet will go on direct to Lisbon, where he will remain a couple of days, proceeding thence by sea to Bordeaux.

Oh, Pshaw!

From The London Globe.

George Bernard Shaw's works may be right, says the chief of the New York Public Libraries, "to tickle the fancy of people of mature age, but they are unsuited to healthy and thoughtless young Americans. They might have the awful effect of making the thoughtless young people think."

"AL" ADAMS HAS QUIT.

Says He's Dropped Policy Forever, and Would Forget Past Troubles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My attention has been called to the fact that my name has been extensively coupled with the recent policy raids in Brooklyn. I wish to ask your indulgence in denying the truth of such allegations. Let me say once and for all time, I am absolutely and forever out of politics, gambling policy and all kinds of lotteries. The reformers who were after me sought office; and although I had been entirely out of the policy business and all other kinds of gambling for several years, appearances were against me, and "I took my medicine." My future activities will be spent in Wall Street and in real estate and mining investments, in which the bulk of my fortune is now placed.

Notoriety seekers have used my name for years to suit their own purposes. Heretofore I have never objected, but now, being engaged in enterprises in which such talk is harmful, I respectfully ask fair play. My past troubles are an incident in my life which I am trying to forget, and which I hope in the light of later events to make the world forget.

Richelieu once said to Louis, King of France: "My Liege, I ask but justice, the right of every man. The meanest artisan that crawls the earth, the very leper shrinking from the sun, may stand erect before Almighty Heaven and boldly ask for—Justice."

Those Morningside Rats Explained.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer of the letter signed "Precautious," who saw five rats in Morningside Park, one of them of leviathan dimensions, is of course not the same gentleman whom I met in that vicinity at the time specified. When he told me the tale I at first thought that what he had taken for a gigantic rat was a capybara escaped from the Zoo, for this enormous South American rodent greatly resembles a rat. But I noticed that the gentleman was in a profuse perspiration, and his hands trembled violently. Then his excited assertion that the leviathan rat had green fur, and bore attached to its neck a large tag with the letters "D. T.," caused me to smell a rat—figuratively, not literally.

There is a difference of opinion among the medical fraternity as to whether in these cases it is better to shut the patient off from alcohol altogether. In my own practice I favor the popular theory that it is wiser to administer small doses, so I took the gentleman to the nearest bacchanalian resort, and made him take a mild highball. His nerves being much steadied, he then borrowed some money from me and a quantity of stationery from the white-coated dispenser. When I left him he was writing a communication to The Herald on "Ophidian Perils Lurking in Public Places," wherein he averred that in walking through Central Park he had counted thirteen pink boa constrictors and five blue pythons.

Brutality of College Students.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When will our civilization put an end to pugilism in our university and college grounds? The day before the Japanese peace envoy left our shores a brutal fight took place between two classes of students of Columbia University, proud, ancestrally proud, Columbia! resulting in the breaking of three ribs of one boy. If I were the mother of that boy I would hold the university, its President, and Faculty responsible for my son's health, time, and medical attendance. What is to be the cost to that boy of the loss of time in waiting for three broken ribs to heal in order for him to begin again a college career?

Mme. Ackte, Heroine.

From The London Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Mme. Aino Ackte of the Paris Opera has accomplished an act of heroism which entitles her to the notice of the academicians who distribute annually the Montyon Prix de Vertu. Summering recently in her native Finland, she was walking by the sea in her grounds near Helsingfors, when she saw her steward's little girl perched on a rock over the seething waves. Mme. Ackte cried out to the child to leave the spot, but hardly had she spoken when the little one tumbled into the sea. The cantatrice did not hesitate. Being an excellent swimmer, she went after the child, which was being carried out by the tide, seized her by the hair, and was returning to shore when her strength failed and she swooned. Fortunately, boatmen were near and reached Mme. Ackte and the child in time to prevent both from being drowned. The interesting heroine of this thrilling adventure was born in Helsingfors in 1876. She entered the Paris Conservatoire in 1894, and three years later obtained the first prize for operatic singing. On Oct. 8, 1897, the young vocalist made her debut at the Opera as Marguerite in "Faust," soon afterward appearing in "Romeo and Juliet," "Lohengrin," and "Tannhaeuser." She is a great favorite, and her courageous deed at Helsingfors cannot but add to the popularity which she already enjoys.

British Crown £175,000 Richer.

As the late Capt. George Lindsay Anthony Wilson, the Folkstone recluse, died without making a will the whole of his fortune goes to the British Crown. Several persons in his service had expected handsome legacies. Capt. Wilson, who was the illegitimate son of Sir John Wilson, Bart., at one time commander of the forces in Ceylon, was a bachelor, and left no legal heirs. The estate reverting to the Crown under this intestacy has been valued by the authorities at £150,209. To this has to be added £25,663 left by Capt. Wilson's father, Sir John Wilson, died in 1856, but Capt. Wilson refused to touch a penny of it, with the result that the estate has remained for forty-nine years unadministered. Now the Crown inherits both fortunes.

Says The London Chronicle: "It has very rarely happened that so large an estate as Capt. Wilson's falls to the Crown. Queen Victoria, during her long life, had only one or two as large. Although the aggregate amount which annually reverts to the Crown in the case of persons dying intestate, without known heirs, is considerable, it is chiefly made up of a number of very small estates, and there are usually many claimants. Persons entitled to money are seldom far to seek when wanted, but the number of claimants of money who cannot show any title to it is very large indeed."

Tapeworms Make Pearls.

From The London Globe.

Prof. Herdman's recent investigations on the subject of pearl formation have yielded some interesting conclusions. In the great majority of cases it appears that the pearl is due to the presence in the oyster of a marine tapeworm. When the spherical larva of the worm dies nacreous matter is deposited round it, and the resulting mass is known as a pearl. The life history of the tapeworm is continued in the bodies of certain species of file fish which prey on the oysters. These file fish, again, are devoured by fisheating rays or sharks. In these latter the tapeworm becomes mature, and sets free numerous embryos into the sea. These finally enter the oysters, and so complete the life cycle.

The small so-called "seed" pearls are caused by the deposition of nacreous matter round small crystals formed in certain muscles of the oyster. Perhaps the most important result of Prof. Herdman's work from the scientific standpoint is the establishment of a marine biological station at Galle for further research.

VALUE OF LANGUAGE STUDY.

Foreign Tongues Not Necessarily Indispensable in Elementary Schools.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Robert P. Green's letter in to-day's TIMES on "Languages in the Schools" is of some interest, and is suggestive for three reasons: (1) Judging by his name, he is not a German, (2) he has pedagogical views concerning the value of what he calls a second language in the schools, and (3) he attributes certain views to me which I do not hold concerning common Germans.

Mr. Green says the ability of the child to read words or phrases of any other language than his own is a distinct acquisition. Generally speaking, no one will deny that. But the main question to be considered concerning the studies of a child from ten or twelve to fourteen years of age is not the distinctness of any acquirement, but its training and cultural value, and the cost of its acquisition. When I was a public school pupil it seemed to me that everybody, the teachers as well as the pupils, thought the study of German an obstacle in the regular course of the other studies; and, I am sure, our German teacher and our regular teachers never referred from one language to the other so as to make the one a help to understanding the other.

Mr. Green, I believe, is a teacher at the present time, and he testifies against his main contention by saying specifically, just what one might expect to be a fact, "To many of the pupils who get instruction (in German) the subject remains entirely unknown by reason of inability to grasp even the merest rudiments, or from prejudice against it as 'Dutch.'"

All languages besides English should have a place in a system of education; but foreign languages are not necessarily indispensable in the curricula of elementary schools. The common school in this country should teach all those common things which best develop the common needs of the community. The most common need of the community is an impartial Americanism. And this Americanism cannot be fostered if elementary schools are to be made the battle ground for prejudices in favor of this or that foreign language. If the higher class of the elementary schools are to be the transition grades to high schools, then the languages taught should be those that fit in with the system of education, and not elected to please mere prejudices imported from Europe, or to satisfy the clamorings of those who cater to those who would straddle the ocean.

In the public schools of this city and country no child should be given cause to feel ashamed of his extraction, whatever that may be, nor should any child be given cause to rejoice at being anything better than an American.

The adjective "common" applied to American citizens of German birth is no more a term of reproach than the adjective applied to American people by the greatest American of the nineteenth century. "The garden variety of German children" may be a poetic invention of Mr. Green's. The common German is the laborer, the artisan, and the small tradesman, in contradistinction to the merchant, banker, and professional classes. The common German is not distinct in any political sense. Socially, he is the peer of the common people of any nation. He is a child of God's, with the others.

How to Down Tammany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is a general desire to defeat Tammany Hall at the next November election. This sentiment prevails among the great mass of independent voters of both Democratic and Republican proclivities, as well as of reformers. This fact is easily ascertained by asking any of your neighbors' opinions. There is no serious opposition to Mayor McClellan. It is against Tammany and its dominating one-man methods. If the opposition would only, and sensibly, exercise the spirit of abnegation as to particular men, and concentrate itself upon one object—success, it would overwhelm completely Tammany Hall.

Nominate George B. McClellan for Mayor, William Travers Jerome for District Attorney, renominate Justices Ingraham and Gildersleeve, with some well-known lawyer as third candidate, with first-class business men for Controller and President of the Board of Aldermen, and the ticket will be elected by an astounding majority. This would absolutely absolve Mayor McClellan from the alleged charge of Murphyism and make him a free and independent Mayor, as he really desires to be, for he would then be in reality the Mayor of all the people of Greater New York.

AN OLD POLITICIAN.

New York, Oct. 3, 1905.

"Patents for Export Goods."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue Sept. 12 is the above title urging American inventors to procure patents on their goods designed for the German trade. If Germany desires to foster the interests of American inventors and patentees let her reform the methods regarding the rights of inventors. As a matter of fact not one inventor in a hundred who receives patents in the United States, England, Canada, France, Australia, &c., ever gets a German patent. In fact, German examiners in patent cases studiously avoid giving any inventor a patent, if they can prevent it. In our experience during the last thirty years we have taken out scores of patents in the United States, England, and France, but although similar applications for patents were made in Germany in no case did we ever obtain a favorable result. On the contrary, not one application was granted. In fact, we began to avoid any application for a German patent. German manufacturers generally wait for American inventors to perfect the American goods, and then deliberately manufacture German imitations of American machines, and imitate all forms of manufactured articles.

It is true that a German patent is protected by the Government, and it may be a crime to infringe a German patent in Germany. The rigidity of patent laws in Germany is quite in contrast with those of England, where any inventor can get all the patents he applies for—provided the nominal fees are paid.

The patent laws of the United States may be lax, but they should never be prohibitive, as in Germany.

TO Q.

Now, "Q," by all that's queer,
Why don't you hide your tongue
And lay aside that leer?
It doesn't please me hung
Out so upon your chin.
Pray do, do, take it in!

I know you're short and fat.
But will you tell me why
You hang it out like that
In weather wet and dry—
In cold as well as heat?
It really isn't neat.

I do not wonder, now,
That "queer" begins with "Q,"
But tell me, please, just how
It is that little "u"
Must always be at hand,
Or else you cannot stand.

A Humpty-Dumpty face
Is not so bad to own,
"O" often takes first place,
And sometimes all alone;
He's quite as round as you,
And twice as useful, too.

Rather than play the clown
And make myself absurd,
I'd turn me upside down,
I would, upon my word—
And, in a corner, hook
Myself up by that crook.

E. BARNES.

JEROME K. JEROME HERE AND HAS A LIVELY DAY

Dodges the Cameras Only to Get Lost in a Hotel.

HIS NAME TANGLED, TOO

Willing to Drop "Jerumky Jerum"—Asks If This Mr. Comstock Is a Friend of G. B. Shaw.

Jerome K. Jerome, author of "Three Men in a Boat, to Say Nothing of the Dog," and other humorous sketches, came to the United States yesterday morning for the first time. He is here to lecture, and he arrived on the American liner St. Louis.

So warm was the reception he had at the pier from photographers, artists, and reporters, who wished to ask him "what he thought of America," that Mr. Jerome was glad to get away in a cab with the manager of his lecture tour.

"You see," said he, "they asked me how I thought I was going to like America even before I left Southampton. I said, of course, that I loved America."

Mr. Jerome went to the Everett House. A TIMES reporter called to see him there just before the dinner hour. The bellboy who bore the reporter's card presently returned, and, flinging his chin over his left shoulder in the direction of a corridor on the ground floor, said:

"Go straight through till you come to it."

The reporter started through the winding halls of the old Everett House, and suddenly, at a sharp bend where three ways met, he came upon a man debating with himself. He was short and slight, with a great head partly covered with light-brown hair. His face beamed with good humor; his mouth twitched at the corners, and his eyes sparkled behind a pair of eyeglasses.

"Mr. Jerome?" said the reporter. The man who had been peering along the corridors started slightly.

"Bless me!" he gasped. "I came over in the same steamer with him. Poor Jerome! He's very sick—poor fellow. So am I, for that matter. I've got lost in this corridor. But I don't half mind it."

The lost one paused and chuckled.

"There's a certain charm about those devious alleys," he continued. "We're building 'em the same way in London. Nothing like the romance of being lost in a hotel corridor. You never know what you may run into—the laundry or the servants' quarters. I got into the kitchen a minute ago. They are doing a steak in there—I declare it was a steak."

"Is Mr. Jerome really sick?"

"Awfully bad. This is how it happened—ah—here's a glimmer of daylight ahead. Let's go there. When he arrived on the pier kodaks to right of him, artists to left of him, reporters all over him—scratched, clicked, and questioned. Really, I had to open my umbrella—that is—"

"Then you are Jerome K. Jerome," said the reporter.

"I am not."

"Then," persisted the reporter, remembering some question of pronunciation, "you are 'Jerum K. Jerum.'"

"I am not," was the grave reply. "I am both. In England my name is pronounced Jérum K. Jérum. On the way over I met Col. Jero-o-oam, a brother, I believe, of some illustrious man in this country. When any one hailed 'Jero-o-oam' on the deck of the St. Louis we both turned around, for people would insist—you understand. But when it was made clear that the Colonel was 'Jero-o-oam' and I was 'Jerumky Jerum' there was no more confusion. I intended to be pronounced correctly in this country—in fact, I explained that to the reporters this afternoon, but, since then I have changed my mind, having heard what a great man this Jero-o-oam is. As Ben Jonson said:

'Twill be well to lean upon their fames
For they are strong supporters.

So I am going to be known here as 'Jero-o-oam K. Jero-o-oam.'"

The "light ahead" in the corridor proved to be an entrance to the café. Mr. Jerome was astonished.

"Then I have traveled in a circle," said he. "Really, I must have been straying."

Having been fully identified as himself, Mr. Jerome was willing to talk a little.

"There is one condition, though," he said. "I will not say what I think of America, or if your tuppenny tube is better than ours."

Asked if he was not afraid to lay his peculiar brand of English humor before American audiences, he said:

"Now you are raising two questions at a time. Humor is the same the world over. A thing is funny or it is not funny. A joke is a heaven-sent gift and, oh! such gifts are rare. But it's all a matter of the weather. When the weather is agreeable it is merely a question of audience and entertainer.

"That being so, I am not afraid of how my humor will strike the American public. Young man, I have faced a Scotch audience on a damp night and now I fear no foe. Anyhow, I will begin my tour at the Empire Theatre with readings on Oct. 17, after which I will keep on traveling and reading until the police or the public stop me."

"By the way," Mr. Jerome asked suddenly, "who is Anthony Comstock? Just as I was leaving England I heard something about him. Isn't he a sort of American contemporary of Bernard Shaw?"

The reporter smiled. Mr. Jerome looked grave.

"Tell me, did I say something funny then?" he asked. "Speak, man, for remember a joke is a Heaven-sent gift and one doesn't always know when it has arrived."

The reporter explained about Anthony Comstock. Mr. Jerome seemed disappointed.

"Oh, that's it. So you've got the Shaw fever here, too. [Hang his impudence! We invented the Shaw fever here.] Shaw is a friend of mine. It was only the other day that we were telling Shaw he ought to be more convincingly sincere in his books."

Mr. Jerome was asked if it was true that he and a few favored passengers on the St. Louis had sighted a family of polar bears in mid-ocean.

"Certainly," said he.

"Swimming in midocean?"

"No, they were on ice. The leader of the polar family seemed in very good health, and was apparently signaling. It was a cold night. One of the party, a taxidermist, said he could only make out one letter 'Sea,' from which we took it that the polar family on ice had been sent south with a message from some polar expedition."

Just at that moment Jerome K. Jerome's manager, Mr. Glass, dashed in.

"I thought you were lost," he gasped.

"Your estimate is conservative," said Jero-o-oam K. Jero-o-oam. "I was in the corridor. No, young man," turning to the reporter. "I will not be interviewed. I refuse to be interviewed. I will say Nothing of the Dog."

Then Manager Glass piloted him through a corridor to the dining room.

THE MINER'S VOW.

Bunkoed—The Awakening—The Oath—The Arrest—Vendetta.

This is a story of vendetta, as brought out by the principals yesterday afternoon in the Tenderloin police station:

Frederick Moser, a mine owner from Mexico, whose city address is 230 Bradhurst Avenue, the Bronx, met an affable young man on Broadway one fair day in May, 1904. The young man said his name was Parker. He was a telegraph operator who handled stock stuff. By the way, he could give his friend a little tip. His friend could buy some Island Falls mining stock at 90; it would soon sell for 350. It wasn't on the market yet, but he could tell Moser where he could buy some right away.

Mr. Moser was piloted to a man in Bridgeport, Conn., from whom he bought $2,400 worth of Island Falls; then to a man in Jersey City, from whom he bought $2,400 worth more.

Mr. Moser went back to Mexico. He woke up. He swore that as soon as he could get an opportunity he would come back to New York and lay hands on the man that gave him the "tip."

Mr. Moser came up from Mexico several days ago. Yesterday he met a man in front of the Herald Square Hotel.

"You are William Parker," he said. "You're the man that showed me where to get trimmed."

"Pardon me, I don't know you, Sir," answered the man.

There were hot and bitter words, and Mr. Moser yelled: "Police!"

Policeman Nyland and Detectives Brueck and Owens came on the run. Mr. Moser's antagonist raced down the hotel stairs into the cellar, then into the subcellar, and finally into the coal pile. He finally ran full into Nyland."

"Stop!" said the policeman.

"Oh, that's all right, man; I'm looking for him, too. He ran around that way."

He started to run, but Nyland dropped him with his night stick. At the Tenderloin Station he said he was William J. Parker, a telegraph operator of 451 Smith Street, Brooklyn. At Police Headquarters the police said that he had been photographed as a suspicious person. Parker was charged with grand larceny by Mr. Moser.

Soon after Parker was locked up a man came in to ask about bailing out the prisoner. He said he was George Weevil of 631 Sixth Avenue. He was locked up as a suspicious person and then sent to Police Headquarters, where they said he was George Weaver, an old running mate of "Larry" Summerfield.

KAISER TO PRESIDENT.

Bartholdt Conveys Message—King Leopold's Picture of Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Representative Bartholdt of St. Louis, Chairman of the American delegation to the Interparliamentary Conference at Brussels, presented to President Roosevelt to-day a message from Emperor William.

"Do me the honor," said the Kaiser to Mr. Bartholdt, "to convey to President Roosevelt my highest personal regards."

Mr. Bartholdt, who had an extended interview with the President, said afterward that Mr. Roosevelt was held in the most cordial estimation by the rulers of European countries. King Leopold, Mr. Bartholdt said, had hanging in his bedchamber a handsome portrait of the President, and he assured Mr. Bartholdt that the portrait was the first object he saw when he opened his eyes.

"The German Emperor," continued Mr. Bartholdt, "is the most intense American in Europe. He is genial and democratic, chats frankly, and really reminds one strongly of President Roosevelt. The King of the Belgians is charming in demeanor and frank in conversation, but does not shake hands with his visitors. Americans are admired in Belgium, and it is to be noted that English—the English of the United States—is spoken very generally in the country."

Quits Riding Fiery Steeds to Make Southern Holiday.

A WESTERN REMINISCENCE

Horse That Eight Men Couldn't Hold Didn't Await Him—Color Question at Mobile Dodged.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The President has completed his personal arrangements for the journey to New Orleans, but hardly a day passes that he is not obliged to decline, as tactfully as possible, invitations from various cities and towns that desire his presence at fairs, horse shows, bazaars, and similar exhibitions. His greatest cross, however, is the thoughtful Mayor or horse show manager, who imagines that the President is never happy unless riding a wild horse.

"I couldn't begin to tell you," said the President to-day to a caller, "how many invitations I have had to ride the 'best horse in the country, Sir.' My friends in the South expect me wear a high hat, a frock coat, trousers duly creased that stay down without straps, and patent leather shoes, and then ride some magnificent, spirited animal that I never have seen before, and must guide out into fair grounds where there are a thousand or two small children to be trodden to death, innumerable dutiful mothers, and not a few grandmothers, to say nothing of the men, all having a crushing good time.

"Why, when I made my Western trip a committee came on the train a few stations down the road, before I reached a town of some size, which for the purposes of illustration may be called X-burg. The committee members told me, with superlative pleasure, that they had the finest horse in the State all saddled and waiting for me at the station.

"Sure enough, when our train pulled in, I looked where they pointed, and there was a magnificent big horse. As nearly as I could count, eight men were holding him. They wanted me to ride up the main street and out to the fair grounds. I alighted and started to go over to the horse.

"Our train was just then pushed back out of the way in the car yard, and a big whiff of steam for a moment obscured my vision of the horse. Of course the locomotive puffed loudly. When the steam cleared away horse and men had disappeared as if swallowed by an earthquake. I think they caught him over in the next county a week later. No, Sir, I shall ride no horses while I am down South."

MOBILE, Oct. 7.—President Roosevelt has pulled the Committee of Arrangements appointed for his reception in this city out of a hole. The negro residents are planning a separate entertainment at a negro church.

A number of members of the white military companies had announced that they would not escort the President to the place. To-day Mayor Lyons received a letter from President Roosevelt informing him that no public reception would be held and that the negro church affair would have to be omitted.

The letter from Secretary Loeb suggested a drive about the city in place of any public reception.

FOR SCHOOL PUPILS' WELCOME.

New Orleans Children to Wave Flag Salute at Lee Monument.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 7.—At the close of the eleventh week of the struggle against yellow fever the health authorities summed up the situation to-night as full of encouragement.

Arrangements for the President's reception are progressing. The route of the procession to the City Hall will carry him past Lee Monument, on the immense circular mound of which there will be gathered several thousand school children waving American flags.

Because of the record he has made here in control of the Federal fever forces, a movement is under way to have Dr. J. H. White permanently stationed at New Orleans as sanitary adviser. Gov. Blanchard favors the suggestion.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 7.—The State Board of Halth has issued an order forbidding boarding schools and colleges in the State to open before Nov. 1 on account of the yellow fever infection.

"MLLE. MODISTE."

New Opera for Fritzi Scheff Well Received in Trenton.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Oct. 7.—"Mlle. Modiste," a new comic opera by Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, had its initial production here to-night under the direction of Charles Dillingham, with Fritzi Scheff in the principal rôle. There was a large audience, including many Princeton admirers of the singer.

Fifi, a modiste in a Parisian hat shop, is loved by a young Viscount who is forbidden to marry her by his uncle, the Count, on pain of disinheritance. Fifi has a voice and can act, is ambitious to go out into the world and become a great artiste, but without money or acquaintances she is helpless. Her troubles are further increased by the fact that the proprietress of the shop wishes to marry her to her worthless son. An eccentric American learns of her difficulty and assists her.

How through her native wit she surmounts these obstacles and triumphs is shown in the opera. Among those most applauded in the cast were Bertha Holly and William and Claude Gillingwater. The company plays in Washington on Monday night.

AEOLIAN CONCERT.

Mme. Ruby Cutter-Savage, Soloist, in a Classical Programme.

The Aeolian Company gave its tenth free concert yesterday afternoon to a large audience in the company's building, 362 Fifth Avenue. Mme. Ruby Cutter-Savage, recently prima donna in the Damrosch and Campanari concert tours, sang Dell' Acqua's "Villanelle," Moir's "When Celia Sings," and Arditi's "Se Saran Rose," and was enthusiastically applauded. She was accompanied by Ernest Hunter, who used one of the company's piano players.

Six instrumental numbers were played at the concert, including selections from Wagner, Chopin, and Schumann. The Vorspiel from "Die Meistersinger," played on a huge pipe-organ instrument with only a boy to handle the stops, was a creditable performance.

Not all who came to attend this, the first concert of this season, could get seats in the auditorium, so they were piloted to other floors to wait for an after-entertainment. The next semi-weekly concert is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. William Harper, bass, will be the soloist. No cards of admission will be required till the auditorium is full.

Mrs. Spender Clay visited America about two years ago, when she was the guest of her mother's relatives in Philadelphia and also of Miss Gibbes of New York, an intimate friend of the late Mrs. W. W. Astor.

ROOSEVELT MEN NOT TO SPEAK WITH FORAKER

Shaw and Bonaparte Refuse to Go to Philadelphia.

READY TO FORCE HOSTILITIES

The Senator Will Be Put in the Attitude of an Open Foe of the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Friends of the Administration have lost no time in letting it be known that they will oppose Senator Foraker's activities in Pennsylvania, as well as Ohio. No countenance will be given to the regular organization there, and the Ohio Senator will find himself placed unmistakably in the attitude of a foe of President Roosevelt.

Though at least three members of the Cabinet will go on the stump, none of them will consent to speak in Philadelphia. This decision means far more than a mere expression of the Administration's determination not to be put in the position of supporting the ring. It means that it intends to make as plain as possible to all men the attitude assumed by Mr. Foraker, and to let him derive what benefit or harm he may.

Not only is the Administration itself taking this ground, but all its friends who are politicians of national prominence have been informed of the situation and will take the same attitude. Any politician in the national field who may go to tician in the National field who may go to desires to encourage Senator Foraker. Up to date there does not appear to be any National politician who cares to do so.

Secretary Shaw, who partly accepted an invitation before the significance of Foraker's attitude had become evident, was promptly informed of his mistake and thereupon rescinded his acceptance. He is a Presidential candidate himself and is not running on the Administration politics, but he differs from Foraker in that he is not antagonizing them. He poses as the especial champion of standpatism, but is not in revolt against the Administration, because the Administration has never yet definitely entered upon any tariff revision programme. Nothing is further from Mr. Shaw's mind than to give countenance to Foraker's revolt, and his acceptance was based on insufficient information.

Secretary Bonaparte, who also was invited, will not accept, and is delivering vigorous speeches against bossism and ring rule in Maryland. Secretary Taft will devote himself to counteracting the effect of Foraker's anti-Administration speeches in Ohio.

In short, both in Ohio and in Pennsylvania the Administration has promptly and vigorously met Mr. Foraker's attacks at every point, and it will unquestionably meet each future attack as the Ohio Senator's programme develops. Experienced politicians here believe that the battle from now until the convention of 1908 will be fought along these lines, Mr. Taft acting as the spokesman of the President and Mr. Foraker as the representative of the opposite element in the party.

TRADESMEN OPPOSE NEW JERSEY REVIVAL

Fear the Great Religious Crusade May Stagnate Business.

SOME PASTORS WAVER, TOO

However, the Plans for Evangelizing the State Go Steadily On—Begins Nov. 19.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Oct. 7.—Reports come from several parts of the State that the local tradesmen and business men are opposing the great religious revival which is to start in New Jersey next month. The Rev. Dr. Chapman's 125 exhorters and singers are not to labor in the churches or even among the churchgoers.

With this in view, the meetings that are being arranged will not all be held in the churches. Public halls, theatres, and other places where the non-churchgoers most abound are preferred. The preaching and praying bands will supplement their work in the meetings by invading the business places and even the saloons.

The rural storekeepers, and some even in the larger towns, see ahead of them an all-absorbing religious excitement which is likely to cause a three weeks' suspension of business. For that reason they are exerting all their influence against the active participation of their respective churches in the demonstrations.

In some of the parishes the ministers themselves are counting up the cost and the reward. The meetings cannot be held without money, and they are asking where this is coming from. In this city alone it is estimated that from $2,500 to $3,000 will be required. In Jersey City they are expecting to spend even more.

Then, as to the result some of the parsons are a trifle skeptical. One of the ministers of this city, in an address to his congregation a Sunday or two ago, intimated his fear of the stagnation that might follow the few weeks of extraordinary excitement. It was noticed that among the thirty ministers who met Thursday night to arrange for the campaign here, several were in a halting frame of mind.

Notwithstanding these hesitancies the reawakening probably will be the most extensive and remarkable demonstration of its kind in all the religious history of the State.

The first of the meetings will be held Sunday, Nov. 19.

YOM KIPPUR TO-NIGHT.

Day of Atonement Observed by Orthodox and Reform Jews Alike.

At sunset this evening the Jewish people throughout the world will begin the celebration of Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement. This is regarded as the most important of all the religious holidays in the Hebrew calendar, and is more generally observed by both the orthodox and the reformed wing of the Jewish community in this country than any other holiday.

To the orthodox Hebrew it is a day of solemn fasting and prayer. For twenty-four hours, from sunset until sunset, no food or drink is allowed to pass his lips. No business is transacted and no work of any kind is permitted to be done.

Fasting and praying, the orthodox Hebrew spends the entire day in the synagogue, repenting of the sins he has committed during the preceding year and seeking forgiveness. None is exempt from the rigorous feast but the ill, nursing mothers, and children not old enough to endure the deprivation of food and drink.

The reform element among the Jews while regarding the day in the calendar, and observing it as such, have eliminated the abstention from food and drink from their programme of celebration. The services at the places of worship of the reform Jews are not continuous, as they are among the orthodox, but are divided into morning, afternoon, and evening services, with an intermission between each service.

All the Jewish places of worship will be open for services this evening and to-morrow, and will be thronged by worshippers. To accommodate the large number of orthodox Jews who do not belong to any regular congregation, places of worship have been improvised in public halls hired for the purpose, and there are many of these scattered over the east side of the city and the Harlem district.

Record Season Just Closing, with Good Prospects for the Winter.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 7.—The season just closing has been a record breaker in every sense of the word, and the prospects are for a prosperous Autumn and Winter season. The steel pier is to be kept open for three additional weeks by the company now running it. On Oct. 23 it will be turned over to the management of the hotel men. There is, however, a possibility that if business continues good the pier company may decide to keep the pier open all Winter.

The Brighton Casino, for many years one of Atlantic City's principal places of entertainment, inaugurated its Autumn and Winter season yesterday.

R. A. Jump of Philadelphia is to build in Chelsea this Fall a handsome private cottage costing $18,000.

The Hotel Gladstone, in Chelsea, will close about the middle of this month and reopen about March 1.

Improvements are under way at the Hotel Holmhurst. The house practically will be rebuilt at a cost of $50,000.

The New Jersey State Association of Homeopaths held its convention this week at the Chalfonte.

The Phoenix Fire Company of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., will arrive here next Tuesday for several days' stay at the St. Charles.

Cook & Son will make extensive improvements to the Seaside House this Winter. The plans provide for an additional story to the main building, facing Pennsylvania Avenue.

The Hotel Chelsea has been closed for the Winter.

The Hotel Dennis has closed its doors for the first time in many years. The work of rebuilding the house is now in full swing.

William H. K. Redmond, member of the British Parliament, and Mrs. Redmond, spent a part of this week at the St. Charles.

NEW YORK GOLFERS BEAT BOSTON WOMEN

Local Team Wins Inter-City Match by Three Points.

MISS VANDERHOEF'S RECORD

Ardsley Girl Makes Fine Score Over Morris County Club Links—Miss Bishop Meets Defeat.

For the first time since the Boston women were admitted to the inter-city team competitions between the Women's Golf Associations of New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, the representatives from the latter city were beaten yesterday by the New York team on the Morris County Golf Club links, at Morristown, N. J. The score was 16 points to 13 for the metropolitan team, and it was a veritable surprise for the visitors, as they had confidently expected to hold the Griscom trophy for another year. For three years in succession the Boston women have triumphed over their opponents. They brought a strong team of fifteen to Morris County, and most of the members will play in the National championship on the same club links this week.

Miss Margaret Curtis, who led the Boston forces, gave her side something to crow over when she beat the National champion, Miss Georgianna Bishop, by 3 up and 2 to play, gaining two points for her team. It was a happy match, Miss Curtis leading by two holes on the ninth green. Miss Bishop made a grand two on the seventeenth hole, 165 yards. Each played the course in 90, splendid golf. The cards:

Miss M. Curtis, out...6 6 4 5 6 6 5 5 5—48
Miss Bishop, out.....4 5 4 6 6 6 6 6 6—49
Miss M. Curtis, in....4 4 5 5 6 5 5 4 4—42—90
Miss Bishop, in.....4 5 4 5 6 6 5 5 2 4—41—90

Mrs. Charles T. Stout, the ex-National champion, caught Miss Pauline Mackay, one of the best Boston players, off her game and won handily by 3 up and 1 to play, gaining three points for the local team.

The best score of the day was 80, made by Miss Louise Vanderhoef of the Ardsley Club in her match against Miss Harriet S. Curtis. This is a new woman's competitive record for the Morris County links. She beat the Bostonian by 3 up and 2 to play, adding the maximum three points for the local delegation. Miss Vanderhoef led from the start, being 3 up on the turn, and she, too, made the seventeenth hole in 2. The cards, showing her record score, are:

Miss Vanderhoef, out.4 4 5 5 6 4 5 6 5—44
Miss H. Curtis, out....5 4 5 7 6 7 5 6 5—50
Miss Vanderhoef, in...4 7 4 6 5 7 5 2 5—45—89
Miss H. Curtis, in.....4 5 5 6 4 7 5 5 6—48—98

Five Boston women won their matches and one was halved, that between Mrs. C. L. Tiffany of New York and Miss Allen.

Miss Marie Bryce, the ex-Morris County champion, played a close game with Miss K. C. Harley and won by a point, and Miss Hurlbut, another Morris County champion, scored one point over Miss Anita Phipps. The players and scores are:

Richmond County Golfers Busy.

Two competitions kept the golf members of the Richmond County Country Club busy yesterday on their links near Dongan Hills, Staten Island. The semi-final round for the Staten Island championship was concluded, and the survivors for the final round are John M. Ward and C. West Taintor. Ward had a close game with Amos T. Dwight, but won by a grand rally toward the end by 2 up and 1 to play. Taintor had an easier game, meeting Otis L. Williams, and surprised the gallery by winning by the high score of 6 up and 5 to play.

A monthly handicap for a cup presented by Austen P. Kelley brought out a large field. D. J. Carroll made the best net score, 76 strokes from 14 handicap, and the first four qualified to meet at match play for the cup. Charles T. Stout made the best gross score, 80 strokes. The leaders were:

Saxlas to Succeed Trainer Hjertberg.

It was unofficially announced yesterday that Philip Saxlas, athletic director of the Hudson River Military Academy, has been slated to succeed "Ernie" Hjertberg as trainer of the Columbia University track team. The selection was favorably commented upon by track men at the Morningside institution, in view of Saxlas's fine work in developing Valentine and Mackenzie. There has been dissatisfaction with Hjertberg's work for two years, and it was generally known that his contract would not be renewed.

May be Post Office Burglar.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 7.—Articles found in the clothing of a man whose body was found on the railroad track near this city to-day lead the police to believe that he was one of the burglars who secured $1,400 in stamps and money from the Clintonville Post Office in North Haven Thursday night. The police think the man fell or was thrown off a freight train.

CUPS FOR TIMBER-TOPPERS.

Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Again Leads at Piping Rock.

Again interest in the North Shore Horse Show at Piping Rock centred yesterday about the performances of the timber-toppers. Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., was to the fore with her splendid lot from the Meadow Brook Hunt Club of Hempstead, and she carried off the chief prizes of the day in these classes.

Society eagerly watched the judging of these classes during the morning, and upon the completion of these events a hasty exit was made by many who left in their ponderous automobiles for the steeplechase events at Belmont Park.

In the championship hunter class there were twelve entries from the various hunt clubs and colonies of Long Island, and the jumping was exceptionally fine. The competition was unusually keen, and not until the various hunters had been out about the jumps several times was the judge, J. W. Colt, able to place a winner to Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.'s, Kingsman, as clever a jumper as ever topped a fence. He repeated his former excellent performances of Long Island shows, and went over all his fences without a hitch. Jouac King, a chestnut gelding, also owned by Mrs. Hitchcock, took second prize, and the third went to Tamor, another chestnut gelding, also owned by Mrs. Hitchcock.

Herman B. Duryea's Eagle, Miss Cornelia Bryce's St. Bridget and False Colors, C. H. Robbins's No Name, Paul Rainey's Holly Hawk, Samuel Willet's Freckless, and R. Dudley Winthrop's Bottles and Clear Light also competed in the championship hunter class.

Mrs. Reginald Brooks's b. g. Boxer won the blue ribbon in the middle weight hunter class from a field of fourteen, after a close and interesting competition.

A large number of people from the near-by villages were attracted to the grounds by the announcement that the Duchess of Marlborough would be present with her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, but they went to the Belmont Park races instead. Some of the many people who came to the show to-day in four-in-hands, breaks, and large touring cars were: Mrs. Grover Cleveland and son, Mrs. Edwin D. Morgan and party of friends in a touring car, Miss Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Guthrie, Paul Cravath, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. R. Livingstone Beeckman, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tiffany, Miss Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Butler Wright, Mr. and Mrs. George Fahys, Joseph Agostini, Frank Plumer, W. I. Varner, Mortimer Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. H. Stetson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jennings, Belmont Purdy, Miss Gertrude Willis, Samuel Willets, Senator Cox, W. Burling Cox, Mrs. F. N. Watriss, Dudley Winthrop, Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Carman, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gardiner, Miss Mary Park, the Misses Blanche and Matilda Emory, daughters of Commander Emory, United States Navy; Mrs. Paul Morton and daughter, Mrs. Robert Bacon, wife of the new Assistant Secretary of State, and Controller Grout.

Champions Lucky to Win One Game from Philadelphia Team.

But for a blunder of the Philadelphians in leaving the home plate unprotected in the tenth inning at the Polo Grounds yesterday, they had a good chance of winding up the season in this city with two victories instead of one. Notwithstanding the costly errors of the visitors in the first game, the champions were able to connect with Duggleby's delivery only at rare intervals, while the Quakers' hits were well placed, and they were assisted in the run getting by a damaging error by Gilbert. With the score 3 to 2 against them in the tenth inning, Browne opened for the New Yorks with a two-base hit and was advanced to third on Donlin's out from second to first. Then came the weak and disastrous play of the Philadelphians. Mertes hit to Doolin, who threw nicely to the catcher to head off Browne. The latter at once tried to return to third, and for a moment was held between the bases. Dooin followed the runner, and thereby let the home plate uncovered. Browne then made a dash for home and succeeded in getting there, thus tying the score, with only one out. In the meantime Mertes had landed on third, and Strang's two-base hit enabled him to score, which ended the game.

It was not until the sixth inning that the New Yorks started their run getting, and that was the result of Bransfield's fumble of [illegible]son's throw. Browne was the batsman, and after stealing second Mertes scored him on a two-base hit. Browne began the eighth inning auspiciously by hitting safely to left, but was doubled up by Donlin's grounder to Gleason. Then Mertes enthused the "rooters" by sending the ball through the ropes for a home run, thus tying the score.

Thomas's three-base hit and Dooin's single gave the Philadelphians their first run, and Gilbert's fumble of Courtney's grounder, aided by a base on balls and Bransfield's safe hit, gave them another in the sixth. In the tenth Thomas tallied on a safe hit, Gleason's sacrifice, Courtney's out from Strang to Clarke, and Magee's safety to left.

For the second game, Manager McGraw put Elliott, the pitcher he got from Cincinnati last year, in the box, and against him was Brady, a new Philadelphia recruit. It was only a five-inning game, darkness stopping the contest, but in that time the Philadelphians had made eight safe hits and scored six runs. On the other hand, Brady kept the six hits of the New Yorks well scattered, with the exception of those in the first inning. Then two singles, a double, and Titus's fumble gave the champions their only run.

The first ball pitched by Elliott was hit by Thomas to centre field for two bases. Gleason, however, struck out. Courtney hit safely to left, scoring Thomas, and Magee followed with a home-run hit to right field. Munson's double and Thomas's single added another run in the second, and a hit by pitcher, a lucky stroke to first, Courtney's sacrifice, and Titus's single to left brought the Quakers' total up to six runs.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Griffith's Men Wind Up Season at Boston with Two Defeats.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—The Greater New Yorks started off in the double-header with Boston to-day, which marked the closing of the season for both teams, like easy winners, batting Tannehill so hard that he had to retire in the midst of the first inning and scoring five runs. The Bostons, however, found no difficulty in gauging Hogg's delivery, and after collecting four runs in the second and third innings Orth was substituted. The visitors added another run in the third inning, but in the fifth the Bostons tied the score. Then both teams settled down to sharp playing, and it was not until the tenth inning, with one man out, that Burkett scored the winning run for Boston. He was placed on first by Oldring's fumble, and after Grimshaw had struck out, singles by Selbach and Godwin enabled Burkett to reach home.

Only five innings were played in the second game on account of darkness, but during that time both teams batted heavily and fielded loosely. Griffith tried four pitchers, and the local team two. Good hitting and the wild pitching of Goodwin was mainly responsible for Boston scoring six runs in the fourth inning, which settled the game in its favor. Scores:

George Gould's Baseball Dinner.

In recognition of the splendid record made by the "Mops," the baseball team composed of employes of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company in this city, George J. Gould will tender to the team a dinner on Monday of next week. Its patron and financial backer, Mr. Gould has taken the keenest interest in the successes that have attended the nine since its organization some years ago, and no one has taken a greater pride in its growth and development, which has been so marked as to deprive it of the opportunity of playing teams similarly composed of railroad employes and compelled to seek opponents in the semi-professional teams in and about New York.

Against even these strong nines the "Mops" have this year won 19 out of 26 games played, scoring victories over a picked nine, 18 to 2; Governors Island, 13 to 8; Colonial Athletic Club, 9 to 0; Magnatic Athletic Club, 9 to 5; Fewsmith Athletic Club, 16 to 5; Fewsmith Athletic Club, 7 to 5; Liberty Field Club, 7 to 3; Pennsylvania Athletic Club, 9 to 0; Newburg Athletic Club, 8 to 6; Highland Athletic Club, 6 to 2; Magnolia Athletic Club, 18 to 3; Department of Correction, 14 to 8; Caldwell Field Club, 7 to 5; Greenpoint Field Club, 10 to 2; Vincentian Athletic Club, 8 to 4; Hempstead Athletic Club, 6 to 5; Roslyn Athletic Club, 7 to 2; Vincentian Athletic Club, 3 to 1, and Governors Island, 10 to 9.

Its seven defeats were against United States marines, 5 to 8 and 4 to 6; Ampers Athletic Club, 1 to 3; Greenpoint Field Club, 2 to 8; Hunt's Point, 7 to 8; Vincentian Athletic Club, 4 to 6, and Brighton Athletic Club, 1 to 5.

The team consists of: Pitchers, Frank Coyle and M. J. Flood; catchers, Henry Sporing and John Deming; first base, Joseph Longua; second base, Charles McCullum; third base, Fred Low; short stop, Neil Logan; left field, Stephen McIntyre; centre field, George Morrison; right field, Paul Longua and Philip Moore.

Crowd Cheers Champion Athletics.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—An immense throng greeted the Champion Philadelphia American League baseball club upon its return to this city from Washington to-night. The train reached the Pennsylvania Railroad Station here at 10:30 o'clock, and at that hour the station was packed with baseball enthusiasts. As soon as the players made their appearance on the platform they were greeted with cheers. Most of the team, in order to escape the crowd, sought the street by way of the baggage room, but Bender and Waddell, the pitchers, attempted to pass through the throng. They were surrounded, and the services of several policemen were required to get them safely to the street cars.

TEAMS READY FOR WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP

New York and Philadelphia Will Fight Hard for Supremacy.

BOTH SIDES ARE CONFIDENT

Opinions of Managers McGraw and Mack—Nines Seem to Have Equal Chances.

With the National League championship settled for the second time in succession in favor of the New York team more than a week ago and a similar honor going to the Philadelphia Athletics in the American League on Friday last, the next important event before the closing of the season will be the meeting of the two teams in a series best four in seven for the world's championship, beginning to-morrow at Philadelphia. This fixture has excited the patrons of the game probably to a greater extent than any other event that has occurred in the history of baseball, and it will be the second time since the organization of the American League that the leading teams of the National and American Leagues have played for the world's championship, the Boston team winning that title in 1903 by defeating Pittsburg and retaining it without contest, owing to the failure of the New York National League team to meet the American League winners.

That the coming contest will be fought out between the teams that are justly entitled to the distinction cannot be questioned. In a season that surpassed all others in brilliancy and in attendance the New York National League team, under the management of John J. McGraw, showed itself to be points stronger than any other team in the league, the nearest rival being the ex-champion Pittsburgs. In the American League the campaign was closer, and it was not until the meeting of the Philadelphia and Chicago teams at Philadelphia week before last that the Athletics gained a clear lead and held it to the close.

That pitching will cut a big swath in the series is confidently believed by all competent judges. Philadelphians always believed that Waddell, their great left-hander, could outpitch any other man in the country, and with proper support behind him could bring his team out a winner. As against this contention the supporters of the champion New Yorks point to the brilliant achievements of Mathewson this year and believe that he is without an equal as a pitcher. It is quite probable that these two successful boxmen will be pitted against each other to-morrow, and with both in form rare pitching will be witnessed. In addition to Waddell the Philadelphians point with pride to the recent performances of Plank and Bender, while they also have Coakley, who led the pitchers in the American League. Opposed to these the New Yorks will present "Joe" McGinnity, the "Iron Man," who, while not being quite so successful as last year, may be considered a dangerous factor; Ames, Taylor, and the left-hander Wiltse.

In catching the Athletics will undoubtedly intrust the greater portion of that work to Schreckengost, assisted by Powers and Barton. Bowerman and Bresnahan will be the mainstays of the New Yorks, and all are capable men, with very little to choose between them. In the seven other positions the players are on such an equal footing that it would be difficult to detect any superiority that one possessed over the other.

According to unofficial averages, the New Yorks have an advantage in batting, and three of their men—Donlin, McGann, and Bresnahan—are placed above the .300-mark. Of the Athletics, Seybold is the batting leader, with an average of about .283, followed by Hartsel, Schreckengost, and Murphy. If the quality of the pitchers as they perform in the world's series could be told with any degree of accuracy, these unofficial averages might have some bearing on the impending results, but, as that matter is purely conjecture, they should not be used as a comparison.

Both McGraw and Mack have proved themselves to be successful managers, and on the field the two teams are handled by men who understand the fine points of the game pretty thoroughly, and never allow a point to escape them. Manager Mack believes that, as he had the best team in the American League, it will prove just as successful in the series for the world's championship. "Waddell and Plank will mow down those National League fellows as sure as you live," he says, "and as for the rest of the team I am not a bit doubtful. We can bat as good as if not better than they can, while in the field there is nothing to it but the Athletics. All I want is a just and equitable break in decisions, and I know we will get that from two such men as Umpires Sheridan and O'Day."

Manager McGraw is just as confident that the New Yorks will become the world's champions as Mack is that the Athletics will succeed. "We can beat the Philadelphians in batting," the New York leader says, "and furthermore we can beat them running the bases. The only question left open for argument, then, is the pitching. They might put it on us there, but I don't believe it. While their pitchers are working on us, you will find my pitchers having some of them on the jump. I do not say that our pitchers are better as a whole than those of the Athletics, but even if they are on a par, our superiority in other points of the game will leave us somewhat in the lead."

Supplemental rules for the series were announced yesterday by Chairman Herrmann as follows: All games will commence at 3 o'clock instead of 8:30. The official ball of the National League will be used on National League grounds and the official ball of the American League will be used on American League grounds. A meeting of the National Commission and the umpires for the world's series will be held on Monday at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, at 11 o'clock in the morning.
